The Prince de Carignan then summoned the Chevalier Buoncompagni to undertake the Regency, and Chevalier Buoncompagni in reply intimated his readiness to accept the honour and responsibility of that office. The States of Parma, Modena, and the Romagna have since tendered their thanks to the Prince de Carignan for naming a substitute, and have informed the Prince that they accept with gratitude the Regency of the Chevalier Buoncompagni. The French Government however has protested against the nomination, and it is reported from Turin that the Chevalier Buoncompagni, who was on the point of leaving for Central Italy to enter upon his functions has postponed his departure. It is also stated that Garibaldi has sent in his resignation as one of the generals of the army of Central Italy, and is about to retire to the island of Sardinia. The King, it is added, has named him a Lieut.-General in his own army. Fifty Venetians belonging to Garibaldi's corps have returned to Venice. It was reported in Turin on Saturday that a Ministerial crisis had been caused by the question of the Regency, but the report is officially denied. A Council of the Ministers of State however has taken place, at which several influential gentlemen of high political standing were present. It is said that the Sardinian Chambers will be summoned to assemble before the Congress meets. The question of the annexation of Central Italy to Sardinia will be fully discussed, and numerous addresses from the people of the Duchies will be presented, in order to give additional weight to their cause. Signor Farini, Governor of Bologna, has published a decree suppressing the tribunal of the Inquisition as incompatible with modern civilisation. Such proceedings as those of the Mortara child cannot, therefore, again occur in Bologna. According to advices from the Romagna the Provisional Government of Bologna is abundantly supplied with money. Accounts from Florence of the 12th inst. state that General Garibaldi, with several battalions, had marched towards the frontiers in consequence of a rumour that disturbances had taken place at Ancona. The rumour, however, turned out to be without foundation. It is asserted that the volunteers under the command of General Mezzacapo have asked permission to march against the Papal troops, and that it is difficult to restrain their ardour. Letters from Rome state that the Pope intends to send Cardinal Antonelli as his representative to the Congress, and that it is also the wish of the King of Naples to be represented at the Congress. Orders have been given to the Neapolitan Embassies to deliver passports to all Neapolitan exiles who may ask permission to return to their country.

TURKEY.—Advices from Constantinople to the 12th inst. state that the Ministers Fuad Pasha and Riza Pasha remain definitively in office. All the Ministers have now acquiesced in the reform measures of the new Grand Vizier. The tax on fundholders is approved by the European holders of stock, who hope that their property will by that means be recognised and respected by the Government. The proposed financial reorganisation and the contemplated loan have already tended to raise the price of Government securities, and lowered the rate of exchange. A decree of the Sultan has been published, in which the expensive lives, luxury, and corruption of the Turkish ladies of high rank is censured, and wherein certain changes regarding their costume are ordered. It is asserted that Vely Pasha is to be appointed Ambassador at Paris. The sentences of death and penal servitude in the bagnes recorded against those concerned in the late conspiracy have been commuted into imprisonment in the State fortresses of Lemnos, Tenedos, and Mitylene. A reduction of the civil list, amounting to 6,000,000 only, and a diminution of the salaries of the employés have been decided upon, and all the troops quartered at Constantinople have received their pay. The Porte has addressed a memorandum to the Powers which have signed the Treaty of Paris. Kabuli Effendi has returned from Crete. It is said that the difficulties there have been settled. Said Pasha has been appointed Governor-General of Widdin. All the Redifs have been dismissed, and sent to their homes. The Apostolic Prefect, M. Planchet, of Syria, has been murdered by the Kurds. Letters from Smyrna, of the 5th inst., state that Sir Henry Bulwer had arrived there on his way to Salonica and Volo, to meet Prince Alfred. The screw gunboat Intrepid, in which he returned from Smyrna, ran ashore near Mitylene.

EGYPT.—The official Gazette declares that the Porte has by no means placed a definitive veto upon the carrying out of the Suez Canal. It is however reported at Pera that the stoppage of the works of the Canal has been made the subject of an explicit and somewhat disagreeable note from the French to the English Government. M. de Lesseps took his departure from Marseilles on Saturday for Constantinople. The Marseilles papers state that instructions from the French Government were received at Alexandria on the 27th October to prevent any act that would interfere with the privileges of the Suez Canal Company. The works of the canal continue.

COCHIN CHINA. — The Moniteur of Sunday publishes the report of Admiral Rigault de Genouilly on the fight of the 7th of September with the Cochin Chinese, in which the enemy suffered severe loss. The report says :—"We have put the enemy to flight, and have destroyed their forts and artillery. Our loss amounts to 10 killed and 40 wounded."

UNITED STATES.—Capt. Brown, the leader of the riot at Harper's Ferry, has been found guilty of treason, advising and conspiring with slaves and others to rebel, and of murder in the first degree. Brown was sitting up on his bed at the time, and, on hearing his sentence, quietly lay down without a word escaping from his lips. Mr. Chilton, one of his counsel, immediately moved an arrest of judgment, both on account of errors in the indictment and errors in the verdict. On the following day the prisoner was brought into court and sentenced to be hanged on the 2d of December. He heard his sentence with composure, and before it was passed made a brief and earnest address to the Court, in which he stated that his intention was simply to run off slaves from Virginia in the same manner as he had previously from Missouri; but that he had no intention of shedding blood, nor of treason against the State. His counsel gave notice of appeal to the highest tribunal of Virginia. Edwin Croppie was then tried and pronounced guilty of conspiracy, treason, and murder. The case of Cook, Brown's second in command, is to be during the hours of business. The traffic of the streets was seriously impeded; cabs, omnibuses, and other vehicles having great difficulty in traversing the streets, while pedestrians were almost at a loss to find their way, and the link-men reaped a rich harvest by conducting persons across the roadways. At several of the hospitals a large number of persons were admitted with injuries received by being run over and in other ways, and the shipping in the river sustained considerable damage by collisions. The river steam-boats above bridge were unable to run during the day, and the traffic on the railways was greatly impeded.

ST. GEORGE'S IN THE EAST.—In spite of the precautions taken to preserve order by stationing a body of police within this church on Sunday last, it was again the scene of disgraceful uproar and disturbance at each of the rector's services, and though the presence of the police prevented any actual rioting within the building, the mob gave vent to their feelings by coughing, hissing, and repeating the responses in so loud a manner as to excite the laughter of the congregation, while dogs were brought into the church to add to the disturbance by their howling and barking. The officiating clergyman and choristers were only protected from the violence of the people by a strong escort of police. Two boys were taken into custody for hissing, and were fined on Monday, the one 20*s.* and the other 10*s.* each, and on Thursday a tradesman was fined 3*l.* for assaulting one of the curates. The intended anniversary of the Mission Chapel, which was to have been commemorated on the 24th inst. by a sermon by the Dean of Westminster, has been abandoned in the present state of the parish, at the suggestion of the Bishop of London.

ST. PHILIP'S, CLERKENWELL.—On Monday evening, at a large meeting of the committee of the Parochial Schools, in Amwell Street, Clerkenwell, it was unanimously resolved to withdraw from attendance at the church of St. Philip, Granville Square, Bagnigge Wells Road, that portion of the charity children which had been in the habit of attending that church for Divine worship, "in consequence of the Popish practices carried on there under the ministry of the Rev. W. Wroth."

CONSECRATION OF NEW CHURCHES AT HAMPSTEAD.—The church of St. Paul's recently erected in Upper Avenue Road, Regent's Park, and the church of St. Martin's erected in Belsize Lane near the Swiss Cottage, in the parish of Hampstead, have recently been consecrated by the Bishop of London. The former, which is from the designs of Mr. Teulon, of Craig's Court, is capable of seating 570 persons, and has been erected at a cost of about 3500*l.* It is built of red and black brick, richly diapered, with apsidal chancel and bell turret, and is said to be an original adaptation of the architecture prevailing in the brick churches of Belgium and Germany. The latter, which is a Gothic structure and cruciform in shape, is capable of accommodating 700 persons, and has been erected from the designs of Mr. Mumford.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS.—On Tuesday morning the first public pillar drinking fountain in the metropolis, which has been a long time in course of erection, on the northern side of Regent Circus, Oxford Street, was opened by Mr. Samuel Gurney, M.P., its donor, with much ceremony, in the presence of a large concourse of persons. This fountain differs from any other yet erected in the metropolis, inasmuch as it is accessible to the public from all its four sides, the water falling from a shell over the centre of the cistern below. The cost of this structure has been about 200*l.* The mural fountains at the British Museum are now completed. The basins are sculptured from blocks of grey marble representing shells, and streams of water issue from the mouths of lions carved in bas-relief, forming a highly ornamental object on either side of the principal entrance under the portico. It has been determined to place a drinking fountain in a suitable locality at Chelsea, and the south-west angle of the north-west entrance of Sloane Square has been chosen as the most appropriate site for its erection.

THE CASE OF DR. SMETHURST.—The Government have granted a free pardon to Dr. Smethurst so far as the alleged murder of Miss Bankes is concerned, but have determined to prosecute him for bigamy. A writ of habeas corpus was received on Friday night by the Governor of Horsemonger Lane Gaol for the removal of the prisoner to the custody of the police upon the charge of bigamy, and on Saturday morning he was charged at the Southwark police-court with intermarrying with Miss Isabella Bankes, his wife, formerly Mary Durham, being at the time alive. The charge was proved by several witnesses. The prisoner, who reserved his defence, was fully committed for trial, and was sent back to Horsemonger Lane in charge of the Governor of the prison, the magistrate refusing to admit him to bail. The following letter has been addressed by the Secretary of State to the Lord Chief Baron, communicating the grant of the free pardon:—

"Whitehall, Nov. 15, 1859.

"My Lord,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your lordship's further report, of the 18th ult., on the case of Thomas Smethurst, who was convicted at the Central Criminal Court in August last of murder, and sentenced to death. As your lordship suggests in that report that reference should be made to the judgment of medical and scientific persons selected by the Secretary of State, for the purpose of considering the symptoms and appearances of the deceased Isabella Bankes, and the result of the analysis, I have sent the evidence, your lordship's reports, and all the papers bearing upon the medical points of the case, to Sir Benjamin Brodie, from whom I have received a letter, of which I enclose you a copy, and who is of opinion that, although the facts are full of suspicion against Smethurst, there is not absolute and complete evidence of his guilt. After a very careful and anxious consideration of all the facts of this very peculiar case, I have come to the conclusion that there is sufficient doubt of the prisoner's guilt to render it my duty to advise the grant to him of a free pardon, which will be restricted to the particular offence of which he stands convicted; it being my intention to institute a prosecution against him for bigamy. The necessity which I have felt for advising her Majesty to grant a free pardon in this case has not, as it appears to me, arisen from any defect in the constitution or proceedings of our criminal tribunals. It has arisen from the imperfection of medical science, and from the fallibility of judgment, in an obscure malady, even of skilful and experienced medical practitioners.—I have, &c., G. C. LEWIS."

RESPITE OF THE PORTUGUESE MURDERER.—A respite was received by the Sheriffs on Saturday evening for the prisoner Charles Annois, a Portuguese seaman, who was convicted of murder at the last session of the Central Criminal Court, and left for execution, the day appointed for carrying out the sentence being Monday morning last. The respite has been granted for 14 days, in order to allow time for inquiries to be made into the truth of a statement that the convict was shortly before the murder in confinement in a lunatic asylum at Lisbon.

WRECK OF THE ROYAL CHARTER.—The Government inquiry into the loss of the Royal Charter commenced on Tuesday at Liverpool, and is not likely to be concluded for many days. Four more bodies have been cast up and at the inquest held upon them on Tuesday, at Amlwch, a verdict of Found Drowned was returned. One appeared to be an officer of the Royal Charter; around his waist was a leather belt which contained 13 sovereigns and several nuggets of gold. The total amount of gold recovered by the divers up to the present time is 5700*l.*

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's official report states that the deaths registered in London in the week that ended November 12, were 1051. In the corresponding week of the 10 years 1849-58 the average number was 1068; which, if raised in proportion to the increase of population, will become 1174. The return of last week was therefore 121 below the average. During the week the births of 918 boys and 930 girls, in all 1848 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1849-58, the average number was 1592.

CAMBRIDGE.—Archdeacon Mackenzie has accepted the invitation addressed to him by the Bishop of Oxford to head the new mission to Central Africa. The fact is officially announced, and has been received with much satisfaction.—The Bishop of Oxford has presented the munificent sum of 500*l.* to the mission, with a promise of a subscription for five years of 20*l.*, on condition that the resolutions are carried out in their integrity. The mission has also received two other donations of 100*l.* each, but scarcely one-seventh part of the sum required has been as yet subscribed.

CHATHAM.—On Saturday the shipwrights employed at Chatham dockyard completed the breaking up of the famous frigate St. Lawrence, formerly called the Shannon, which made the gallant capture of the American frigate Chesapeake during the war with the United States.—The military authorities of this garrison, acting under the orders received from the Government, have again recurred to the practice of setting at liberty in the public streets of the town insane soldiers discharged from the lunatic hospital at Fort Pitt, in order that they may become chargeable to the parish. The parish authorities however having declined to receive the insane soldiers, the Government have decided on taking legal proceedings against them, under the Lunacy Act, to recover the penalties to which it is alleged they have rendered themselves liable, and notice to that effect has been given them. The parish authorities have determined to defend the actions, in order that it may be decided by the courts of law whether the Government are justified in the course they have adopted.

CHELTENHAM.—The committee appointed to make arrangements for the wife and family of Dr. Humphreys, having determined that they had better join him in the United States, Mrs. Humphreys and her children left Liverpool by a recent packet and arrived at Boston, after a very stormy passage, on the 23d ult. Dr. Humphreys was then in prison awaiting his trial on a charge of adultery.

COVENTRY.—A shocking murder was committed in the public street of this town on Saturday morning. A man called John Kingston, formerly a drummer in the 1st Warwick Militia, and known among his associates as a person of violent and ungovernable passions, murdered his wife, an inoffensive woman employed in the riband trade in the town. It appears that Kingston was bound over to keep the peace towards his wife for some threats on a former occasion, and the bail ran out on Saturday. She had, in consequence of his violent conduct, been obliged to live apart from him, and on meeting her in the street on Saturday, he asked her whether she meant to live with him again. She said that she did not. He then laid hold of her, drew out a knife which he had concealed about him, and aimed a blow at her breast. She cried lustily for help, and a man and a boy ran to the spot, but arrived a moment too late. The knife had only grazed the woman's cheek, but the murderer plunged his weapon savagely into her throat, drew it across from ear to ear, and turned the knife completely round, to render it effectual. She fell dead at his feet, her head almost severed from her body. Kingston was immediately apprehended and taken before the magistrates, and on Monday was fully committed for trial at the assizes on the charge of Wilful Murder.

CREDITON.—A few days ago the Earl of Portsmouth inaugurated his foxhunting season at Eggesford, North Devon, with a generous hospitality. The house was open to all comers, whether attired in fustian or scarlet, and a sumptuous repast was provided for about 300 guests. Advantage was taken of the occasion to present a testimonial to the Rev. John Russell, incumbent of Swymbridge, who for many years had discharged the duties of a master of hounds in the district. In presenting the testimonial Lord Portsmouth said that few men had so many friends as Mr. Russell, who met a warm welcome in every house he visited. It was true that he had shown an attachment to the noble sport of foxhunting; but he had never heard that he had even in a single instance neglected his duties as a clergyman for the sports of the field. He was one of those who thought that a clergyman was quite as much in his place in following field sports as he was in gadding about to balls and parties. To show that the pleasures of the chase are not incompatible with a zealous discharge of ministerial duty it was stated that the Rev. Mr. Russell had received a testimonial from his parishioners on leaving a former curacy, and that he was so highly esteemed by his present parishioners that they had also presented him with a testimonial of their esteem.

ELY.—Several serious incendiary fires have taken place lately in this part of Cambridgeshire. Willingham, which was so severely devastated a few weeks since by a disastrous conflagration, has been the scene of a second fire, in which several stacks of grain were consumed. Several fires, also supposed to have been the act of an incendiary, have taken place at Streatham in the Isle of Ely. A reward of 120*l.* in the former case and a reward of 50*l.* in the latter has been offered for the apprehension of the offenders.

HALIFAX.—One of the most brutal assaults ever known to be perpetrated in the West Riding was brought under the notice of the magistrates on Saturday last, when five rough-looking men from the neighbourhood of Brighouse, named Samuel Earnshaw, George Chappell, William Scott, Charles Cookson, and John Marsden, were charged with a scandalous attack upon two young women of excellent character, called Martha and Sarah Burrow. They are cousins, and both reside in this town, one being her uncle's housekeeper, and the other having been employed at Mr. Kirk's dye-house for the last 10 years. On Saturday night they were walking from Brighouse to Halifax, accompanied by two young men called Tweeddale and Wood, the former of whom was the sweetheart of Martha Burrow. When they had got 200 or 300 yards from Brighouse two men hustled against them, and the same thing was repeated by three other men further on the road; but they managed to get away in both cases without sustaining any injury. When, however, they arrived at the fields below Boothrode, a very shocking outrage was committed. The girls were walking with their protectors, about 100 yards apart, when two groups of men (numbering together seven or eight) rushed upon them simultaneously, and subjected both of them to such brutal treatment that their screams were heard for half a mile. The two young men who were with them, and another young man who witnessed part of what took place, made frequent efforts to rescue them, but the ruffians threatened to kill them and throw them into a neighbouring quarry if they interfered. One of the girls was at length rescued by the other, who dashed in among the ruffians with great courage and liberated her cousin; but while the one rescued ran off for assistance, the other was seized and subjected to a still more dreadful outrage, which was subsequently repeated in Elland Wood, into which they had dragged her when she became exhausted. The unfortunate sufferer is of spotless character, and is now in a distressing state of health. On Friday, when some of the prisoners were first brought up, she fainted; and on Saturday morning, when called to identify one just apprehended, she fainted again the moment she saw him. After hearing the evidence the chairman, addressing the prisoners, said that this was one of the most diabolical acts he had ever heard of, next to actual murder. Virtually they were one as bad as another, and if the whole of them were hanged together the country would be the better for it. They were then remanded to Wednesday, when they were again brought up with two other men who had been apprehended at Huddersfield, to which place they had absconded. Six of them were identified as having been concerned in the outrage, and were fully committed for trial at the York assizes on the capital charge.

MACCLESFIELD.—Some weeks ago a paragraph appeared in some of the London papers, stating that the Hon. Henry Stanley, son of Lord Stanley of Alderley, had during his travels embraced the doctrines of Mahomedanism, and identified himself with the manners and superstitions of the East. The Macclesfield Courier now says that the statement is entirely without foundation. "Mr. Stanley," it says, "like many other English gentlemen, has mixed with the inhabitants of the countries through which he passed, with a desire to become thoroughly acquainted with their manners, language, habits, and religion, and in his intercourse with the natives may have assimilated his costume somewhat to their habits. But that he had become in any way imbued with their religious ideas is wholly a calumny."

NOTTINGHAM.—Messrs. Hall, Sons, & Co, of this town, have brought to light an ingenious swindle. They had been applied to for starch to a large amount by a Mr. Flood, of Manchester, but declined sending it, not knowing him. A few days after they received the half of a 10*l.* Bank of England note, No. BH 05858, and the starch was immediately forwarded. The other half of the note was not, however, sent. When pressed for payment, Flood said his wife had mislaid it; but if Messrs. Hall would return the half already forwarded it should be made right at the bank, and a Post-office order sent in payment of the bill. Suspicions were aroused that all was not right, and it was subsequently ascertained that Flood was one of a gang of swindlers, who had obtained the halves of 800*l.* worth of notes, which they used for the procuring of goods fraudulently. A warrant was issued for the apprehension of Flood, but he had left Manchester, and could not be traced for several days. He has, however, been found at Liverpool, and is now at Nottingham in custody.

PLYMOUTH.—On Saturday night, the 12th inst., some thieves scaled the graveyard wall in Catherine Street, broke through the stained glass window on the south-west end of St. Andrew's Church, and entered the sacred edifice. They burst open the money boxes for the poor, took away the velvet covering of the communion table, the velvet covers of the cushions there and in the corporation seats, and the vergers' cloaks. The gold fringe and ornaments were stripped from the cover and cushions, but the greater portion was dropped, apparently by accident, in the aisle; the cloaks were found in the yard. The communion table cover is of scarlet Genoa velvet, valued at about 25*l.*, and is supposed to be 50 years old. A reward of 30*l.* was immediately offered for the apprehension of the culprits; and on Tuesday four seamen belonging to her Majesty's ship Trafalgar were apprehended on the charge. A portion of the stolen property was found on each, and a Jew stated that the prisoners came to him on Sunday morning and sold a piece of plush velvet. The prisoners, who said they had found the property, were remanded.

PORTSMOUTH.—The new line-of-battle ship Victoria, of 4126 tons, 1000 horse-power, and 121 guns, was launched on Saturday from this dockyard in the most successful manner in the presence of the Queen, Prince Consort, Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, the younger members of the Royal family, and an immense concourse of spectators. The ceremony of naming the ship was performed by the Princess Frederick William. After the launch the Queen and Royal family honoured Admiral Bowles with their company at luncheon, and then returned to Windsor.—On Saturday evening the crew of the Princess Royal, which is clearing out for paying off, broke out into open mutiny on being forbidden to leave the ship. It appears that on account of the launch of the Victoria in the presence of her Majesty, the men's wives and friends had been allowed on board for the day, and that there had been dancing and other enjoyments on deck. After the visitors had left the ship, one watch of the crew received leave to go ashore for the night, upon which the remainder showed great dissatisfaction. This was reported to the admiral, and on the watch to which leave had been granted arriving at the dockyard gates, the were not allowed to pass, but ordered to return to the ship on account of the dissatisfaction of their comrades. When they got on board, they all were so much exasperated that they put out the lights on the lower deck and uttered the most discordant yells, destroying their mess traps, tables, and stools, and taking possession of the deck. Marines were sent on board from all the ships in harbour, and more than 110 of the crew were taken prisoners on board the Victory and placed in irons. A number of naval officers assembled on board the Princess Royal on Wednesday to open an inquiry into the cause of the disturbance.

SHEFFIELD.—A reward of 200*l.* has been offered for the apprehension of the persons concerned in the recent attempt to blow up the house of Mr. Wilson, with the promise of her Majesty's free pardon to any accomplice giving such information as will lead to their conviction.

STEVENAGE.—The Wolverhampton Chronicle contains a story to the effect that there is now living near this town, not 30 miles from London, a real hermit. It says that he lives in a wretched cell, constructed near the ruins of a large mansion, of which he is the owner, and which is in a state of complete decay. In this cell he has dwelt for 11 years without once having washed, and with none but rats to bear him company, his food, consisting chiefly of bread and milk, being supplied by his neighbours and tenantry, to whom the secret of his desolate retirement is a mystery.

STURMINSTER.—A man answering in every description to the supposed murderer of Mrs. Trowbridge at Ashcombe Copse was apprehended on Friday at Hythe, near Southampton, and is now in the custody of the Wiltshire police. He is a Spaniard called Manzano, 29 years of age. Some of the clothes stolen from the cottage were found in his possession, and his own clothes were stained with blood.

WAKEFIELD.—On Saturday last the Election Commissioners resumed the inquiry which had been adjourned three weeks ago in consequence of the absence of several of the principal witnesses on the continent. One of the witnesses examined was "the Man in the Moon," who had been so often described in the previous stages of the inquiry as the immediate distributor of the money spent in bribery, but of whose name and connection with the chief persons in the election the witnesses professed themselves to be ignorant. He now appeared in person, and stated that he keeps an upholsterer's shop at Bradford, under the name of John Whitehead. He said that he had been brought to Wakefield by Mr. George Moore, who kept a draper's shop in the town, and who thought it best to have nothing to do, directly, with the election accounts, but employed him to bribe the electors. He received 20*l.* from Mr. Moore for his services during the election, and his expenses would run away with half that sum. Among the other witnesses examined were Mr. John Charlesworth, cousin of the defeated candidate, and Mr. Fernandes, the former of whom received from his cousin the sum of 4700*l.* to be spent without his knowledge, and handed it over to the latter, who proceeded with the assistance of the "Man in the Moon" to do the actual work of bribery in the most business-like manner. Hams were bought for 25*l.* apiece; independent electors who could not take a bribe allowed it to be slipped into their waistcoat pockets; another would not touch it himself, but begged that it might be given to his wife, so that he might be able to say he never had it; another would take nothing, but had no objection to pocket what might be left for him; another effected a mock loan, another a mock sale; while others less scrupulous took bribes from both sides. After examining these witnesses the Commissioners on Wednesday adjourned the inquiry to Monday next in London.

WORCESTER.—A county meeting, convened by the Lord-Lieutenant in compliance with a requisition, was held at the Shire Hall on Saturday, "to consider the best method of improving the system of hiring agricultural servants." Lord Lyttelton took the chair and said that subject had been much discussed at the recent agricultural gatherings in the county, and the demoralisation introduced and encouraged by adhering to the old custom of hirings at "mops" and statute fairs had been loudly denounced. That these mops were evils was beyond controversy; the only question was whether they were necessary evils, or were counterbalanced by attendant advantages. Looking at them as applicable for the object which they professed—the engagement of agricultural servants—he could not see that they were either convenient or desirable means to the end. The relations between master and servant ought to be commenced on a different footing; there should be some previous mutual acquaintance, and some knowledge of the respective character of both master and servant, which could not exist under a system of hiring at mops. He had no doubt that if mops and statutes were simply abolished at once, other modes of hiring would be found, as in other counties. It was not, however, proposed to do this now, but to establish a system of registration in lieu of statute hirings. Sir John Pakington then proposed the first resolution, to the following effect:—"That the present system of hiring servants at statutes or mops does not conduce to the interests of the master or the servant, and that its alteration and amendment, without injuring the employer or employed, is most desirable." He said that he had heard it argued that the abolition of the statutes would deprive the agricultural labourers of the holiday or day of recreation which they enjoyed under the mop system. Now he was sure that it was not the object of those who had originated this meeting to debar the working classes of any rational amusement or recreation. If a yearly holiday was desirable for the working classes, let some other mode of enjoyment be adopted which would be free from the evils which attended the holding of statutes. In conclusion he expressed his belief that the abolition of mops or statutes would confer essential benefits, not only upon the employers of labour, but upon the labouring classes especially. Mr. B. Bull, a tenant farmer, seconded the resolution, and said he had been compelled to resort to statutes to get his servants. He likened them to going to a fair to buy a horse, with this difference, that one might be a judge of the quadruped but must be in perfect ignorance of the qualities of the human servant. With regard to the holiday question, he thought that was a matter which might be easily arranged between master and man. The resolution having been carried unanimously, Mr. T. G. Curtler, county magistrate, moved, and Colonel Wall seconded, a resolution affirming the propriety of establishing a system of registration in districts, with a central office at Worcester, thus affording masters and servants the means of suiting themselves with the least trouble and inconvenience. This was also unanimously carried, as were also resolutions for forming a Worcestershire Servants' Registration Society, of which Lord Lyttelton is to be president. On the motion of Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, seconded by the Hon. F. Lygon, M.P., thanks were voted to Lord Lyttelton for convening the meeting.

LORD CARLISLE IN THE SOUTH.—The Dublin papers are filled with accounts of the viceregal progress in Cork. His Excellency last week laid the first stone of a new bridge in the city of Cork, upon which occasion he conferred the honour of knighthood upon Mr. John Arnott, M.P., mayor of Cork. The city work being completed, his Excellency started for Dunkettle, and superintended the opening of the Cork and Youghal line of railway. At Middleton he was entertained at a grand déjeûner, at which upwards of 200 persons were present. On Monday his Excellency presided at the distribution of prizes awarded at the June examinations at the Queen's College, and in the evening was entertained by the citizens at a grand banquet at the [illegible] næum. At the Queen's College in the morning the President, Sir Robert Kane, delivered a lengthened address, in the course of which he made the following important statement in reference to the education question generally, and to the position assumed by the Roman Catholic hierarchy at this particular juncture. As he is himself a zealous member of that Church his remarks excited the greatest interest:—

"In one regard it is my duty to bring under the notice of your Excellency and of this meeting some details [illegible] the absolute number of our students, although that [illegible] valled, but as to the relative numbers of our students belonging to each of the more important religious denominations this country. The Queen's University and this College were founded for the special advantage of the Roman [illegible] middle and upper classes of this country, excluded, by necessary ecclesiastical character of the University of Dublin, Trinity College, from participation in its government and possession of its highest honours and appointments. It highly important to examine into what manner the Catholics of this province have received this intellectual to what degree they have availed themselves of the educational advantages thus presented to them. From a table the number of the matriculated students in the college session since the college opened, it appears that the proportion of Roman Catholic students was greatest in the years 1854, when it reached 56 per cent., and least in when it was 44 per cent., since which time it steadily increased, and this year, so far as the examinations have gone, the proportion of Roman Catholics is precisely one-half the total number of students, the average proportion during the entire time being 51 per cent. number of 1214 students. To those who are acquainted middle and upper class society in our large towns and it will be apparent that this proportion fully represents proportion of the Roman Catholic element in those classes the lower classes, of course, it is known that the Roman Catholic element immensely preponderates, but, looking class of society from which the students of this college derived, it is certain that 50 per cent. fairly represents Roman Catholic population. It is, therefore, satisfactory observe that, although from the newness of those institutions from doubts as to the views of the authorities in their rules from the great prestige and deservedly high character of institutions, and from many other causes, which every one trust, will have less influence, the total number of students below what I expect it will before long become. Yet it evident that the Roman Catholic middle and upper classes availed themselves to a very large extent of those institutions and have, after 10 years' experience, found this course not undeserving of their confidence and support. It is known that eminent authorities of the Roman Catholic Church have latterly expressed a strong opinion against mixed education, and have demanded to have placed under their exclusive control the educational institutions of the country, in order that the Roman Catholic people of classes may therein be separately trained. Such a system as that thus demanded scarcely exists even in the most despotic States, and is apparently inconsistent with the responsibilities of a constitutional country. It is certain, however, that a proposal from such learned and such venerable persons should be, and has been, received with profound respect by educated Roman Catholic laity, and if we had not to deal with the practical realities of professional and business life, and did not live in communities of mixed and often jarring interests and ideas; if we had merely our sentiments as religionists, and not our duties as citizens and as fathers, to consult; if were not before us our country torn asunder, and paralysed for centuries by the hatreds and antagonism of religious feuds, it might be our duty to consider how far these aspirations after an ideal monastic perfection could be carried into effect in civil life and in a free country. But imperfect as all human institutions necessarily are, limited as public expenditure must be, having to consult in a mixed community, and under a constitutional Government the feelings and opinions of others besides ourselves, it is incumbent on us as Roman Catholics to make use of and improve what is practically at hand—to appreciate the substance rather than risk its loss by clutching after a shadowy ideal, a splendid phantom. Such has been, after ten years' experience, the practical verdict of the Roman Catholic laity of this province. Such was the opinion of the venerated Catholic prelates who sanctioned by their counsels the statutes and regulations of these colleges, and who were named by our gracious Sovereign to the influential positions of Visitors and Senators of the University. It is to be hoped that the ephemeral necessities of foreign policy which now compel this question will yet give way to the great interests of learning and of society, and that the educated Roman Catholics, while firm in their independent and conscientious support of liberal and united education, will have the happiness to be guided by those eminent authorities the venerated guardians of religion and morality in the important task of rendering more and more perfect the great system of public instruction for all classes which, even in its incomplete form, has already effected so much good."

SYMPATHY FOR THE POPE.—The Young Men's Catholic Society held a meeting on Tuesday evening to express sympathy with the Pope. The O'Donoghue, M.P., who has recently thrown up his commission in the Queen's service as Major in the Kerry Militia, was in the chair, and the meeting was addressed by Mr. Maguire, M.P., Mr. P. O'Brien, M.P., Mr. [illegible] Hennessy, M.P., Professor Hennessy of the Catholic University, Mr. O'Sullivan, of the Nation, and Mr. O'Dwyer, ex-Filazer of the Exchequer. A long address of condolence with the Pope was agreed to, and a letter from Archbishop Cullen was read, in which he traced all the evils which had fallen upon nations owing to their separation from the Holy See, or to their disregard of its injunctions. He declared that the Pope was the most benevolent of Sovereigns, and the government of his dominions far superior in its effects to public and private happiness and morals than that of England.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT SLIGO.—The extensive mills belonging to Mr. Robert Culbertson, of Rockdore, within four miles of Sligo, were completely destroyed by fire on Saturday morning. Four men killed, and 10 others severely injured.

ATTEMPTED MURDER IN THE KING'S COUNTY.—On Sunday evening the 6th inst. Mr. John [illegible], under bailiff on the estate of Mr. Stackpoole, while on recently purchased property at Cooraclevin, was shot and wounded by an assassin who deliberately walked away after firing the gun. The contents lodged in the neck, arm, and body, but the wounds were fortunately not fatal. In explanation of this outrage it is said removed to the United States District Court. Some very serious riots took place at Baltimore on the 1st inst., on the occasion of the Maryland election. Several persons were killed and a large number wounded. The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald, in reference to the San Juan difficulty, says that negotiations of a very serious character are pending between the two Governments, and that the United States are much nearer to a violent rupture with England than is generally supposed. It adds that the despatch of Lord John Russell is neither conciliatory nor pacific, and that it peremptorily demands full explanations of the conduct of Gen. Harney. The New York and Albany steamer New World had foundered, with a loss of eight or nine lives. The famous yacht Wanderer has been stolen and carried out to sea. Since her condemnation by the Government as a slaver, she had been sold to Mr. Lamar, and fitted up as a pleasure yacht. There seems to be no doubt that she has been again sent to the coast of Africa for a cargo of slaves.

CANADA.—The North Briton has arrived with the Canadian mails of the 29th ult. Among the passengers are the English cricketers. The Lower Canada members of the Parliamentary Opposition have published a report recommending a federal union of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada. The Grand Trunk Railway will be opened through to Sarnia, on Lake Huron, on the 21st inst. The city council of Montreal has decided to offer 50,000 dollars to purchase a site within the city limits for the railway terminus, on the spot selected by the Grand Trunk Railway authorities. Thursday, the 3d inst., was observed as a day of general thanksgiving for the late abundant harvest. Mr. Fellowes, member of the Provincial Parliament for Russell, has been convicted of obtaining his seat by fraudulent means, and has resigned. The Montreal Pilot announces, on authority, that the Prince of Wales will visit Canada in June next. The International Bank of Toronto suspended payment on the 26th and the Colonial Bank on the following day.

MEXICO.—Advices from Vera Cruz to the 22d ult. state that it was rumoured at Vera Cruz that the acting British Minister, Mr. Mathews, had authorised the British Consul at Vera Cruz to recognise the Juarez Government. Robles had returned to Tuspan. Miramon was busy in preparing his expedition against San Luis. Degollado remained at the latter place, Ampudia at Vera Cruz, and Marquez at Guadalajara, all inactive.

Public Addresses.

LORD STANLEY, at Accrington, spoke as follows on National Education, and the biography of self-raised men:—

"Whatever may be the faults or merits of the system of school teaching—though I don't think it at all perfect—I wish to do it all justice, and I do not think that in the actual constitution of society it gets fair play. Parliament votes about three-quarters of a million for schools for the instruction chiefly of the children of the working class. Nearly twice as much, or perhaps a million and a half more, is contributed for the same purpose, partly by the parents themselves, and in much greater measure from the benevolence or sensibility of those interested in the cause. Now, what happens? A very large number of our working children go to school, they attend while there pretty regularly, and they learn to read, to write, and to cypher with tolerable ease. But if you take the average of England through, the schooling of children ceases between the ages of 12 and 10—I am afraid nearer 10 than 12. They read nor learn nothing more; what they have picked up at school is apt to be quickly forgotten; and probably I should not be overstating the case if I said, speaking perhaps of the agricultural districts rather than these, that of every three or perhaps every two lads who at 15 are able to read and write with tolerable comfort to themselves, only one can do the same when he reaches the age of 25. Now, what is the effect of that? Why clearly that of this large sum voted by Parliament, and of the vast sums added by private exertions, a large proportion is for all practical and ultimate results as absolutely wasted as if it had been thrown into the sea. To some extent you cannot prevent that state of things. Young men and lads who have their bread to earn may or may not study, but they must work. From a very early time their days are taken up with their daily work, and if any instruction is to be provided for them at all it can only be by the means of the evening school. It is precisely that form of instruction which you provide here, but beyond supplying the school, you afford an incentive and inducement to attend it by your system of examinations, the competition for prizes, and the public honour and respect which on occasions like the present you pay to intellect, industry, and culture. These honours are, if I may so say, a sample and a foretaste only of the more substantial distinctions which later life presents to those who are competent to obtain them. You whom I address are Lancashire men, you know the conditions of life in these swarming regions of the north, where every man, be he rich or poor, is a worker, and where fortunes are made with hardly less rapidity than in America or Australia. You will own, therefore, how false and foolish is that belief, sometimes entertained in ignorance, sometimes, it may be, professed to be entertained with no good purpose; that England affords no scope for the social ambition of the working man. I believe that one of the most interesting volumes that could possibly be written, which, when it is written, ought to find a place in every hamlet, and almost in every cottage, would be a biographical record of a few select instances, at least, of those eminent and illustrious persons who, in various occupations and departments of life, have raised themselves from the ranks. Many a story might be told in such a volume that would buoy up the courage and cheer the heart of the struggling operative in his most distressed hours. But you need no such volume to recall to your recollection the fortunes and the fame of the elder Stephenson, you do not require to be told of the rise and of the wealth of Arkwright, and, above all, you in these districts, and meeting in this hall, know well, and history will record, what was the origin of the family of Peel. You may say, no doubt, that these are remarkable instances. Remarkable instances they are, exceptional instances I believe they are not. I believe that there is not one town, westward from here to Liverpool, or if you look eastward over the hills, there is not one town in all the West Riding, where you may not find at least some one or two men who are wealthy and powerful, men who are large employers of labour, men who perhaps are magistrates and deputy-lieutenants in the society in which they reside, who have in early life earned their 15s. or 20s. a week, it may be in the very mill of which they afterwards became the owners. There is, therefore, I say, a chance for all here. It is not a chance, no doubt. Many competent men must doubtless fail, and by no fault of their own, while in the uncertainty of human affairs it may happen that some who have not equally deserved fortune unaccountably, and even undeservedly, succeed. But whatever may be these uncertainties of fortune, it is something at least to know that to educated and intelligent men the door stands open, and the course is cleared. It is something to know, as was lately said at Manchester, that to every man the opportunity comes once in his life, and something still to be assured, as I am confident are many of those whom I address, that if the opportunity comes it will not be missed through ignorance, or apathy, or sloth, while if, unhappily, it should fail to come, we at least have had the consolation of knowing that the failure arose from causes above and beyond your control, and that you have not been unfaithful to your own destinies."

LORD BROUGHAM has addressed the following to the Earl of Ellenborough, in answer to his letter on the affairs of Italy:—

"You might well expect that I should agree with you in hearty good wishes for the independence of Italy. I can only repeat what I said at the great Edinburgh meeting the other day, that, whatever may be my opinions upon the real cause of the war (which I had to ly given in our House), it had led to a state of things which affords the Italians some prospect of success, provided foreign interference is excluded, and that the best practical course for them to take is an union with Sardinia, although I retain my opinion upon the conduct of that Power. With regard to General Garibaldi, I confess my hopes of partisan or guerilla action are somewhat slender, admitting, as I do, his great qualities, as far as we are acquainted with his public conduct and connections. But I recollect that those Powers with whom Cato differed are said to have a preference for great battalions, and I wish we may not have to mourn over the kind of cause which he is inclined to favour. At all events, I am sure neither you nor I would desire to have the peace of Europe at large disturbed even for the sake of Italy."

THE HON. F. H. F. BERKELEY, M.P., at a public dinner at Bristol on Monday, spoke as follows on the disclosures made before the Election Commissioners at Gloucester and Wakefield:—

"It has been my fortune in urging that great question which I think essential to the liberty of the electoral body—I need not tell you I mean the ballot—in urging that question on the House of Commons it has been twice my fortune to do so on the eve of a general election. I felt it to be my duty to point out to that House into what kind of Saturnalia the country was about to be plunged. I laid before them the miserable position, the degraded position in which the electors were in various boroughs. I pointed out to them that while intimidation would be rampant through the land drunkenness would stagger after it, and bribery would not be far behind, and that intimidation, bribery, and drunkenness would reduce our electoral system—the most beautiful working system in the world in theory—to the most degrading thing possible in practice. Both times that which I stated was realised. Both elections proved that, instead of intimidation having ceased, bribery being dead, and the electoral body being in a more exalted position, it never was in a more degraded one. You have had precious specimens in Gloucester, and in Wakefield, and in other constituencies; and now, Lord Derby, in talking of a Reform Bill coming forward, says: 'Why really the state of corruption in these boroughs is such that it makes us pause before we can extend the franchise.' Did you ever hear such a wretched pretence? Do you mean to say that Lord Derby and the rest of his party in the House of Commons did not know that Mr Rolt's committee disclosed exactly that state of things which exists now? There is nothing new in electors being corrupted and debauched in Gloucester, or in any other city. It is monstrous for Lord Derby to say, 'I will not grant you a 6*l.* franchise, because the 10*l.* householders are a bad lot.' He knew what they were before his agents bought them—not in his name—oh, dear no! but in other persons', in the name of the 'Man in the Moon,' who came down and debauched various places for pleasure. I think that very disgraceful. Will it be believed, that when a gentleman and a candidate for a borough goes to the Treasury, or the Conservative Club, as the case may be, and offers to spend 2000*l.* or 3000*l.* in contesting a small borough, is it possible that he does not know it must be spent illegally? We know how it is with these candidates, what they all say when examined: 'I set my face against bribery; I hate corruption; I told Mr Thingamy that I would not have corruption for the world; there was 2000*l.* for him, but it must be spent in the most virtuous manner possible.' It is a most disgraceful state of things that such a set of men should exist as candidates, and it is no credit to the House of Commons that there should be there the vast number of men who have got into it in that way. There is a farce I have seen for 20 years in the House of Commons exceeding all belief. Such a horrid state of corruption is proved in some borough,—men have been bought wholesale. Mr. So-and-so is supposed to know something about it. He comes into the House in a grave and florid manner, he looks around him, and he says—that is, he makes a declaration by which he states that we are mistaken. What is it, after all? If any gentlemen are here who frequent the theatre they must have seen the farce of 'High Life below Stairs,' in which there are a couple of rascally serving-men, who assume the titles of their masters, the one being 'my Lord Duke' and the other 'Sir Harry.' My Lord Duke is given to telling lies, or speaking more politely, to romancing a good deal. Sir Harry each time contradicts him flatly. Whenever he does so my Lord Duke draws himself up, lays his hand on his heart, and says, 'Upon my honour;' on which Sir Harry raises his hand to his hat, takes it off his head, and says, 'Oh-h-h!' Now that is what I have seen acted in the House of Commons over and over again. The candidate says 'I come to declare that I have not been guilty; I know nothing of this corruption, upon my honour' 'Oh-h-h!' And there the farce ends, and we all know it to be a farce, because we cannot fancy it to ourselves that any third person would go and pay money to elect a man to Parliament for his own pleasure. The man who thinks proper to take an oath that he knows nothing at all about corruption because the money has not passed through his hands to the unfortunate wretch corrupted is little else than guilty of perjury. That is the state of things with which we have to deal. One party sometimes falls into error and is guilty, as at Gloucester. The Liberals there were exceedingly guilty; they bribed in the most extensive manner, and not only did they bribe to a great degree but they did it stupidly. The Tories the moment it was found out exclaimed. 'Oh, dreadful! what a state of things in this world!' Thus it is: these Liberals, who are always talking of purity at elections, bribing away; we must petition. They did so; they stated that bribery by the Liberals had taken place. A commission is issued, and then it is found that the Tories have bribed ten times more than the Liberals, and that the only difference was that the Tory agents lied through thick and thin, while the Liberal agents blurted it all out. It is not the genius of Liberals to bribe: they do it badly, and very stupidly; but it is the genius of Tories, and they do it to perfection. We had a Coppock, the late unfortunate Coppock, but he was not to blame; but they have got a Coppock here, and Norton, and where they have them they will not let the Whig nobility into it. That is a system that ought to be done away with, but it never will be until the people rise in their majesty and say it shall be done. As Parliament is constituted now, you cannot expect a man, a candidate for a rotten borough, to disenfranchise himself, and to vote with that body opposed to Reform. There is nothing but the people using and insisting on it that can carry it. I say you have now they are ready to do so. They do not lead us their members, to believe they are in that position, the people, as are the last to stand by us. If they do not do so the Tories will go on in the old way; the Whig lords, the Whig aristocracy will bribe against the Tory aristocracy, and the Tories will always have the best of it. If you increase the franchise I am all for it. I will take anything they will give me. I do not press even for that question which I think of such infinite importance, and which must come one day; but I do not believe you will find any measure of Reform satisfactory to the minds of the Liberal part of the country until you have a large extension of the franchise, and put down intimidation by the ballot."

MR. CAIRD, M.P., at a meeting of his constituents at Dunfermline made the following remarks on the army, navy, and packet contracts:—

"During the last session there was a debate on packet contracts. The amount of money expended in this country on these contracts had risen to a very large sum, and it was thought necessary to name a committee to inquire into the mode in which the contracts were entered into; and it came out on examination in that committee, of which Mr Colden was chairman and Mr Baxter and Mr Dudley Fortescue, that in the case of Dover there was a desire entertained to enter into with the Government contractors there, to extend the contract for a considerable number of years, on condition that we would return two Conservative members for Dover. Members of Government were not directly implicated in this, and the onus was thrown on private secretaries, who had no such official responsibility; and thus the Government escaped the condemnation which otherwise undoubtedly would have attached to it. On the question of navy estimates a very interesting and important debate took place. He was quite sure they would all agree with him that the right arm of the country in armaments was the navy, and that they should never grudge any necessary expenditure in making it thoroughly effective. But it was stated by men who understood the subject, that a great deal of money was voted in Parliament to make the navy effective which was squandered in a very improper manner, and instances were given in the course of debate which proved this. It was shown that in the different navy yards where ships were built by the Government the wages expended in them varied as much as 5s and 6s per week, while the rate of wages was the same. It was quite evident that some irregularity existed; but it was also shown that the ships were twice or thrice dearer than what it would have been if the ships had been built in private yards. Then a very strong point was brought out regarding the bounties offered to seamen, and the difficulties of getting them to join a service which should be the most popular service in the country. It was found that within the last three years 11,000 seamen had deserted from the navy, and that these men were so much in earnest that they forfeited no less than £7,000 in wages before they would continue in the service. There must be something wrong in this, and the secret of it seemed to be just this, that they committed the charge of the navy to country gentlemen, who knew nothing about it. It was a remarkable fact that the last two lords of the Admiralty—Sir Charles Wood and Sir John Pakington—were both natives of inland counties, where perhaps the ocean might have been a pond, but could not have known anything about them. He then entered into a comparison of the expenses of the armaments of England and France, showing that the expenditure of the army and navy of England during the last two years was 53 millions more than that of France."

SIR JOHN BOWRING delivered two lectures on "China" last week at Edinburgh, of which the following is an abstract:—

"The question of China was a very great and a very important question whether they considered the geographical extent of that immense empire—which, if reduced only to what was called the 18 provinces of China proper, extends in breadth nearly 1300 miles, and in length nearly 1200 miles, if the dependent and tributary regions were taken into account the distance from east to west exceeds 4800 miles, and from north to south 2200—or whether they took into account the great variety of climate, embracing the snowy regions in the north down to the tropical districts in the south, with all their immense varieties of animal, mineral, and vegetable existence; or whether they took into account its population, at present more than one third of the human family, for, according to the last census, there was reason to believe that at present the population of China was 412,000,000, while it had been represented in our books for the last 40 years as amounting to 360,000,000. Those who were acquainted with the teeming population of the central kingdom, and the pressure of population upon subsistence—those whose attention had been turned to the subject, were aware of the fact that millions of Chinamen quit their native country because that country is unable to afford them adequate means of existence. And perhaps that fact—one of the most interesting and one of the most remarkable which was now in progress—the pouring out of a superior upon an inferior population,—was producing results of the greatest possible value to political, commercial, and social interests. He might perhaps be allowed to state that he had lately visited a number of Oriental regions—the islands of the Eastern Archipelago belonging to Great Britain, the islands which form one of the most valuable possessions of the Netherlands Government, and the Philippine Islands, which are under the dominion of the Spaniards—and everywhere where an opening was to be found he had discovered the Chinese race introducing great habits of industry, absorbing those employments in which there was the greatest remuneration, superseding to a great extent the labours of the inferior and less instructed, and less economical, and less persevering population, and carrying out what he believed was the great law of Providence—the law of progress and improvement, by which a superior race of men pressing upon the inferior are elevating the general social character. As to the productive powers of China, he scarcely knew how to estimate them. Little by little we are gathering valuable knowledge and experience on this matter. It might be in the recollection of many that when the question of the East India Company's charter was under discussion, the East India Company ventured to say that China could produce no more tea than they were willing to buy—that 30,000,000 lbs. per annum were all that China could produce, or that Great Britain could consume; and that the destruction of those two monopolies—that of the privileged merchants in China, and of the Company or privileged merchants at home—would be prejudicial to the interests of both countries. Well, what had we now seen? China was at this moment exporting 120,000,000 lbs. of tea, and so far from the quality being deteriorated, it was improved; and so far from prices being elevated, they were lowered. As to the power of production, he should be glad if parents of families would call upon the young calculating heads of their children to solve him this problem—to tell him, in a country where there were 400,000,000 of inhabitants, and where it was the usage to drink tea five imes per day—allowing what quantity they pleased for each time—to tell him what the consumption of China must be. He believed China was in a condition to double and treble their supplies of tea if necessary, and he was further of opinion that in course of time China would help to solve the difficulty which is at present embarrassing our cotton districts. After some remarks on the amount of British capital engaged in the trade with China, he referred to the magnificence of some of the great public works in China, noticing specially the great wall and the great canal, and proceeded to notice at some length the characteristics of the Chinese language, which had remained unchanged, or little changed, for 40 centuries, while there was scarcely a language in Europe which was 600 or 800 years old. Noticing next the attention paid in China in ancient times to the arts and sciences, he stated that the Chinese deified one of their kings because he encouraged the cultivation of the mulberry, and that a similar honour was paid to one of their queens because she had improved the art of weaving; and while our ancestors were wandering about, painted savages of the forest, even the middle classes in China were clad in silken robes, and it was said to be an opprobrium to the working man who had reached the age of 50 years without being able to throw a silken garment over his shoulders. A Chinese author of the third century gave a minute description of the manner in which the Chinese tore up their garments, reduced them into pulp, and made paper. There was a description of burning-glasses 2000 years before Christ, and the use of the mariners' compass was absolutely lost in the darkness of antiquity. The art of printing was familiar to the Chinese long before there was any record of its existence in other nations, and they had also very early been in the habit of using gunpowder, respecting which there might be a controversy whether it had added to the amount of human felicity or augmented human misery; but he was of opinion that there was no contribution to knowledge which was not a contribution to civilisation, to progress, to religion, to all we ought to hope and pray for. He next gave a detailed notice of the character and writings of Confucius, whose aphorisms had tended so much to inform the Chinese mind. He stated that Confucius was severe in his treatment of inferior officers, who then, as now, were too apt to display 'the insolence of office.' The remainder of the lecture was occupied with a brief notice of the superstitious and religious belief of the Chinese, and an interesting account of the educational machinery in China, in the course of which he described their decimal system of coinage, which he thought would be valuable in this country as a means of education. While remarking on the opposition to change manifested by the Chinese, he expressed his gratification that the law of England is becoming a progressive thing, and that all parties are now happily agreed that there is in future to be 'no monopoly of Liberalism'—that we are all to be Liberals together. In that he heartily rejoiced, and he honoured the man who proclaimed so important a truth, of which he hoped he would enjoy the fullest and completest development."

THE NEW INDIA STOCK.—In the Court of Appeal in Chancery on Tuesday, the Lord Chancellor and the Lords Justices gave judgment in a case which had been submitted to them for the purpose of ascertaining whether the new India Stock can be considered a legal investment for trust funds. Their lordships stated that as the Act of Parliament now stands the new India Stock may legally be used by trustees, but the Court decline to recommend such investments as proper, in addition to which Lord St. Leonards had informed them that he proposes to bring in a Bill next session forbidding such investments.

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

GREENWICH HOSPITAL COMMISSION.—On Thursday morning the commissioners appointed by her Majesty for inquiring into the internal economy and management of Greenwich Hospital, assembled in the library of the Admiralty for the purpose of prosecuting their inquiry. The commissioners were Mr. Hutt, M.P. (Chairman), Mr. Ingham, Q.C., M.P., and Captain Dalrymple Hay, R.N. Mr. Lethbridge, solicitor to the Hospital was first called, and explained at great length the provisions of the Acts of Parliament under which Greenwich Hospital is founded and maintained. It is expected that the inquiry will last about a week or 10 days, and that the report of the commissioners will be ready to be laid before Parliament at the commencement of the next session.

THE NEW DIOCESS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.—A numerously attended meeting was held at the Mansion House on Wednesday, in aid of the fund now raising for the support of the mission to this new diocess. The Lord Mayor, in opening the proceedings, announced, among other donations, that her Majesty, with the benevolence which at all times distinguished her, had sent a subscription of 250*l.*; the Archbishop of Canterbury, 20*l.*; the Marquis of Westminster, 200*l.*, &c. The Bishop of Columbia then addressed the meeting, and said that the new colony, including Vancouver's Island, was equal in size to France and Ireland put together. The mission first proposed to take in hand the European population by occupying the towns as they rose up. Already there were eight or ten towns marked out and in course of erection. In these a zealous pastor ought at once to be planted, and there should also be a band of itinerant missionary clergy constantly visiting the unsettled districts. There would be a large immigration of Chinese, not less than 50,000 of whom might in time be expected, and these, it was hoped, would be so taught as to take back with them into their own country something better than 'the gold which perisheth.' It was proposed, besides this, to have native Christian settlements in the neighbourhood of the Indian villages, and there to teach the industrial arts, to provide the means of Christian worship, and impart Christian instruction to the children and those adults who were willing to receive it. For the promotion of these objects assistance was now sought. The cost of living was very great, and they could not at first hope for much support from the colonists. Of course, however, their plan would be that of a self-supporting Church. No State aid would be granted. From the first they would proceed on the voluntary principle; and aided at the outset by the offerings of Churchmen at home, their aim would be to call forth a spirit of liberality in the people, and train them up to support their own religious institutions. The Hon. A. Kinnaird moved the first resolution, to the effect that it is a high Christian privilege and duty to assist in the great spiritual work now opened out by Divine Providence in the interesting and important colony of Columbia; and that the bishop and clergy who are going forth there have claims of a strong and special nature, not only for warm and Christian sympathy, but also for sincere and earnest support in their arduous mission. The Bishop of Oxford, in seconding the resolution, spoke at great length on the duties of a great Christian people in founding a new colony, and on the special fitness of Dr. Hills for carrying among the Indians the blessings of Christianity. The resolution having been carried unanimously, the Bishop of London moved the second resolution, declaring that, as the British nation is indebted for the founding of a mission from the Church of England in Columbia to the munificence of a Christian lady, and as it must depend on voluntary contributions alone for additional strength and support, a committee of gentlemen be appointed for the purpose of collecting contributions towards the special fund so urgently required for outfitting and maintaining a sufficient number of missionary clergymen. His lordship read an extract from a letter from Sir E. B. Lytton, when Colonial Secretary, expressing his admiration of the munificence of Miss Burdett Coutts, who has given the munificent sum of 25,000*l.* for the endowment of the bishopric and two chaplaincies. Sir George Grey seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously. Previous to the meeting there was a religious service in St. James's, Piccadilly, at which the Bishops of London and Oxford administered the sacrament, and the Bishop of Columbia preached the sermon. The Bishop embarked on Thursday at Southampton for his new diocese.

THE EXHIBITION OF 1862.—At the opening meeting of the Society of Arts for the present session on Wednesday evening, Sir Thomas Phillips, the chairman, announced that it is the intention of the Council to originate measures for carrying into effect an international exhibition of works of art and industry to be held in 1862; and that they propose to invite the manufacturers, merchants, public companies, and other capitalists willing to promote such an exhibition, to unite in raising a guarantee fund, not less in amount than 250,000*l.*, to be vested in trustees whose position, character, and qualifications will secure the confidence of those capitalists who are prepared to share the responsibility of the undertaking. It is intended to seek the assistance of her Majesty's Government in order to obtain the friendly assistance of foreign Governments to secure the co-operation of foreign exhibitors, and otherwise to promote the success of the exhibition. It is also intended to apply to the Royal Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 to grant a convenient portion of the ground purchased at Kensington out of the surplus funds of the Exhibition of that year for the next and future exhibitions.

ROYAL SOCIETY.—The Council of the Royal Society have awarded the Copley Medal this year to Professor Wilhelm Eduard Weber, of Göttingen, Foreign Member, for his researches in Electricity, Magnetism, Acoustics, &c. One of the Royal Medals has been awarded to Mr. George Bentham, for his important contributions to the advancement of Systematic and Descriptive Botany; and the other Royal Medal to Mr. Arthur Cayley, for his Mathematical Papers published in the "Philosophical Transactions" and in various English and Foreign journals.

METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.—At a meeting of this Board on Friday it was resolved by a majority of 23 to 9, after a long discussion, to confide the execution of the great southern outfall sewer from Deptford Creek to Crossness Point, which is estimated to cost nearly 300,000*l.*, to one contractor, instead of dividing it into several contracts, and tenders are accordingly to be invited, to besent in before the first Friday in January.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.—A society has been established for promoting the employment of women. The committee includes several ladies of title, and Lord Raynham, M.P., is the treasurer. A statement has been published from which it appears that it is the intention of the society to establish a large school for girls and young women, where they will be specially trained to wait in shops, by being thoroughly well instructed in accounts, bookkeeping, &c.; be taught to fold and tie up parcels, and perform many other little acts which a retired shopwoman could teach them. The necessity of politeness towards customers, and a constant self-command, will also be duly impressed upon them. Girls educated in this school will be capable of becoming clerks, cashiers, and ticket-sellers at railway stations. It is also contemplated to establish workshops in connection with the school, where the girls may be taught other trades—trades well suited to women, but now almost exclusively in the hands of men, such as printing and hairdressing, for instance. As the means of the society increase so will the number of workshops and the variety of trades taught. No girl will be admitted to either school or workshop who does not bear a good character; nor, on leaving, will she be recommended for employment till she has passed such examinations as will prove her to be competent for it.

HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.—The new gas pedestals at the entrance of St. Stephen's Hall are now in course of being erected. The candelabra in the interior are permanently fixed. The stained glass windows with the arms of the various cities and boroughs of the United Kingdom are placed in their allotted positions. The only thing remaining to be done now is the placing the frescoes in their respective panels.

NATIONAL GALLERY.—At the recent sale of Count Stolberg's pictures at Söder, in Hanover, two very beautiful Ruysdaels were bought for the National Gallery, at the respective prices of 1180*l.* and 1060*l.* The pictures represent grand waterfalls, and were probably painted as companion pictures, being of the same size, if not from the same locality.

THE CHAPTER-HOUSE AT WESTMINSTER.—This beautiful building, which has for many years been used as a depository for the public records, has now been made accessible to public examination by the removal of the records to the new office in Fetter Lane. Though the presses and shelves which contained these records still disfigure the building, enough is visible to show that it far surpasses in size and artistic interest any other chapter-house in the kingdom. An arcade of Gothic runs round the walls, which are filled with paintings, and the whole floor is laid down with tesselated pavement. It is hoped that measures will at once be taken to restore it.

THE STRIKE.—At a conference of the building trades of London, held on Friday, it was determined, after careful consideration, that the strike at Messrs. Trollope's should immediately cease, its further continuance being held to be prejudicial to the influence of the "lock-outs" in regard to their combined opposition to the "declaration" of the masters, which it is determined if possible to overthrow.

TAXATION OF THE METROPOLIS FOR CITY IMPROVEMENTS.—A preliminary meeting of gentlemen connected with various metropolitan vestries and district boards has been held at the St. Pancras Vestry Hall, for the purpose of taking measures to ascertain how far the outlying parishes of districts will consent to submit to taxation for City improvements, while the Corporation of London appropriate to their own exclusive use and benefit the local dues and other taxes levied upon the inhabitants of the metropolis generally. Another object of the meeting was to bring the power and influence of the metropolitan vestries and district boards to bear upon the members elected by them to the Metropolitan Board of Works, so as to put a check to the eagerness with which many of them support the representatives of the City of London at the Board in the outlay of money for City purposes, at the expense of their own constituents. It was resolved to send an address to the various vestries and district boards on the subject.

THE FOG.—On Monday and part of Tuesday a dense fog hung over the metropolis and suburbs, causing an almost complete darkness, so that in the banking-house and city offices gas was obliged to be burnt

Mr. Stackpoole proposed raising the rents of the tenantry, who, having refused to comply with the proposed increase, were served with notices to quit, which duty was performed by Harlin, who consequently became disliked by the tenantry, and was therefore fired at. Four men were apprehended on suspicion, but three of them have since been discharged.

Scotland.

ELECTION OF LORD RECTOR OF EDINBURGH UNIVERSITY.—The election of a Lord Rector took place on Saturday, when Mr. Gladstone was elected by a majority of 116 over Lord Neaves, the numbers being 643 to 527. There was great excitement during the election. The divinity students voted nearly unanimously for Lord Neaves. A great majority of the medical students voted for Mr. Gladstone. The others were more equally divided. The contest it is said was not a political one, the election turning upon Mr. Gladstone's high reputation and influence, while the strength of Lord Neaves lay in his scholarship and local residence.

ELECTION OF LORD RECTOR OF GLASGOW UNIVERSITY.—The election of Lord Rector of the University of Glasgow took place on Tuesday, when Lord Elgin was chosen by a majority of all the Nations; the total numbers being for Lord Elgin, 553; for Mr. Disraeli, 411.

Railways.

NEW RAILWAY IN THE CITY.—At a meeting of the Common Council on Thursday a letter was read from the London, Dover, and Chatham Railway Company proposing to carry their line over the Thames by a bridge below Blackfriars Bridge, and by means of an arch over Ludgate Hill, to proceed to the vacant space formerly occupied by the Fleet prison on the eastern side of Farringdon Street, where they will erect their terminus. The letter was favourably received, and was referred to a committee to consider and report upon it. The site of the proposed terminus will be one of the very best in the whole metropolis, within a few minutes' walk from the Post Office, Newgate Market, St. Paul's, and Cheapside, within sight of Holborn and the westward roads, and close to the intended site of the Metropolitan Railway.

Obituary.

EARL DE GREY, K.G., died on the 14th inst., at his house, 4, St. James's Square, in his 78th year. His death was somewhat sudden, for up to the close of the past week his lordship was to all appearance in his customary health. Only a few days since he attended the meeting of the Institute of British Architects, of which he was the president, and delivered a long address with so much spirit as to elicit remarks on the vigorous health he was enjoying. The Right Hon. Thomas Philip De Grey, Earl De Grey, of Wrest, Bedfordshire, Baron Lucas, of Crudwell, Wilts, and Baron Grantham, of Grantham, Lincolnshire, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, and a baronet, was the eldest of the two sons of Thomas Robinson, Esq., second Lord Grantham, and Lady Mary Jemima Yorke, second daughter of the second Earl of Hardwicke, and Marchioness Grey, sister and heiress of the late Countess De Grey. He was born at Whitehall in 1781, and succeeded his father in the barony of Grantham in 1786, being at that time not five years of age, and on the death of his maternal aunt, the Countess De Grey, in 1833, he succeeded to the earldom of De Grey. His lordship had previously changed his family name of Robinson for that of Weddell, and on his accession to the earldom assumed that of De Grey only. He married in 1805 Lady Henrietta Frances Cole, fifth daughter of the first Earl of Enniskillen, by whom, who died in 1848, he leaves surviving issue the Countess Dowager Cowper; and Lady Mary Gertrude Vyner, married to Mr. Henry Vyner. His lordship was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated M.A. in 1801. During Sir Robert Peel's short administration in 1834-35 he held the office of First Lord of the Admiralty, and was made a Privy Councillor on being appointed to that office. When Sir Robert Peel again came into power in 1841 Earl De Grey was appointed Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, which office he held up to June, 1844. On his retirement from Ireland his lordship may be said to have relinquished political life, for beyond an occasional vote in support of the Conservative party he has not interfered in political matters. He had been for many years Lord Lieutenant of Bedfordshire and Aide-de-Camp to her Majesty, and in 1844 was nominated a Knight of the Garter. He was also for more than 40 years Lieut.-Colonel Commandant of the Yorkshire Hussar Regiment of Yeomanry Cavalry; he was President of the Institute of British Architects, a Fellow of the Royal Society, and of the Society of Antiquaries and other learned institutions. As his lordship has died without male issue the earldom of De Grey and the barony of Grantham devolve upon his nephew, the Earl of Ripon. The ancient barony of Lucas of Crudwell, Wilts, passes to his lordship's eldest daughter, the Countess Dowager Cowper.

CAPTAIN DODGIN, late of the 20th Regiment, shot himself on Saturday evening at his lodgings in Panton Street, Haymarket. He had been for 5 years in command of the police of the island of Barbadoes, and had been dismissed by the local authorities without a retiring pension. This treatment preyed upon his mind, and caused much depression of spirits. An inquest was held on the body on Wednesday, when the jury returned a verdict of temporary insanity.

MR. GEORGE ANTHONY, a well-known artist at Manchester, died on Tuesday from the effects of gastric fever. Though not so well known as some of his brother artists in the profession, he was a man of highly cultivated tastes, and stood high in their estimation as an art-critic. He was the author of art-criticisms which appeared for many years in one of the leading Manchester papers under the signature of "Gabriel Tinto."

WILLS.—The will of General Sir Henry Cunliffe, Bart., has been sworn under 6,000*l.* personalty in India; Mr. William Caldwell Roscoe, formerly of Dolgwy, near Machynlleth, Montgomeryshire, but late of Tyddyn Helen, Carnarvonshire, 25,000*l.*; Mr William St. Quintin, late of Scampston Hall, Yorkshire, 25,000*l.*; Sir William Norris, formerly of Barrow Green House, Oxted, Surrey, but late of Ashurst Lodge, Sunning Hill, Berks, 30,000*l.*; the Rev. Sir Charles Francis Farnaby, Bart., of Wickham Court, Kent, 40,000*l.*

Miscellaneous.

THE FRANKLIN EXPEDITION.—Dr. King, who accompanied Sir George Back's exhibition to the Great Fish River, the point to which Captains Crozier and Fitzjames intended to direct their course, has delivered a lecture at Brighton in which he expresses his belief that some of the party may still survive. If, however, they are all dead, he thinks that some particulars of their fate may be discovered by examining the abandoned ships, the position of which is clearly ascertained; and which an expedition, availing itself of the proper season, and directing its attention to the special object, might, he believes, effect without much difficulty. Captain Parker Snow, the merchant captain who went out in the Prince Albert under Captain Forsyth on Lady Franklin's private expedition in 1845, has also published a letter stating his reasons for believing it possible that some members of the expedition still survive. He considers that the evidence is not conclusive that they were all lost, and that it is the duty of England to make an attempt to ascertain their fate. At the meeting of the Geographical Society on Monday evening, Captain M'Clintock read a paper on the results of his recent voyage, in which he discussed the question whether some of the 105 survivors might not be living among the Esquimaux? He said that the various families or communities of Esquimaux met with by Rae, Anderson, and himself, at different times and places, all agreed in saying, "No, they all died." The western shore of King William Island, along which they were compelled to travel for two-thirds of their route, was uninhabited, and all that was known to us of the mouth of the Back River was derived from the journeys of Back, Simpson, Anderson, and himself. None of them had met natives there, consequently it was very fair to conclude that the Esquimaux but seldom resorted to so inhospitable a locality. In fact their life was spent in a struggle for existence, and depended mainly upon their skill in taking seals during the long winter—a matter which required such long training that no European had ever yet succeeded in acquiring it. His (Capt. M'Clintock's) two Greenland Esquimaux tried various methods at Bellot Strait, yet did not succeed; and without dogs trained to scent out the small breathing holes of the seals through the ice, and through the snow which overlays the ice and conceals them from observation, he did not think that even the Boothian Esquimaux could live. It required not only that a man should possess a trained dog, but that he himself should be so well trained in the only successful mode of seal-hunting in this locality in order to subsist. It was therefore evidently an error to suppose that where an Esquimaux could live a civilised man could live there also. Esquimaux habits were so entirely different from those of other people that he believed there was no instance on record of either a white man or an Indian becoming domesticated among them or acquiring tolerable expertness in the management of a kayak. With regard to the probability of procuring the means of subsistence independently of the Esquimaux, he stated what was shot by his own sledge party—and they never lost a chance of shooting anything—during the journey along the lands in question, which occupied them for 79 days and covered nearly 1000 geographical miles of distance. The sum total amounted to two reindeer, one hare, 17 willow grouse, and three gulls. The second question was, why had the remains of so few of our lost countrymen been found? It was indeed true that only three of the 105 were discovered, but it was to be borne in mind that from the time they left their ships they were dragging sledges and boats, and therefore they must have travelled almost constantly upon the ice—not upon the land, consequently all traces or remains there vanished with the summer thaw of 1848. There was no doubt that many relics still remained strewed along the uninhabited shore of King William Island, beneath the snow; but as it was most carefully examined three times over, he could not think that any conspicuous object, such as would be put up to indicate where records were deposited, could possibly have escaped them. An interesting discussion followed, in which several of the experienced explorers of the Arctic regions present took part, including Sir Edward Belcher, Captain Collinson, Captain Sherard Osborn, Captain Hobson, Captain Snow, and Captain Kennedy. Captain Collinson gave it as his opinion that after Franklin and his comrades abandoned the ships, it was almost impossible, having regard to the question of provisions, and to the probable rate at which they would be able to travel, encumbered as they were with sick, with boats, and facilities for prosecuting their journey, that they could have reached further than the bottom of the estuary of the Great Fish River, and that they all perished. He thought that Captain M'Clintock had nobly carried out the motto with which he entered upon the expedition, "Persevere to the end;" and in after times it would be remembered that after the nation's treasure failed, "the widow's mite" prevailed. Captain Sherard Osborn, as an Arctic navigator, said he could not resist the conclusion that the search for Franklin was now closed. He had read Captain M'Clintock's journal, which was written from day to day, without any wish to arrive at a particular theory, and therefore on that ground eminently valuable, and he felt that, whatever the track Franklin and his comrades took after abandoning the ships, it was their last journey upon earth, and that they must have perished. Capt. Parker Snow, the merchant captain mentioned above as having been engaged in Lady Franklin's former expedition, stated his dissent from these opinions, and said if his health be spared to him, and whether he be assisted or not, he intends to leave England next spring with the view of going over the whole ground, and, if need be, allying himself with the Esquimaux until the riddle is solved. Captain Kennedy, who commanded a former Arctic expedition in search of Sir John Franklin, supported Captain Snow's opinion. Sir R. Murchison in closing the discussion said that there was no doubt that Sir John Franklin went further to the north in a ship than any British seaman — he was speaking of the search made in Wellington Channel — and then he returned and performed that extraordinary voyage round Cornwallis Island, by which in the first year of his enterprise he proved it to be an island. And it was a great fact in which all the naval officers who had taken part in the discussion, whether belonging to her Majesty's service or to the mercantile marine, agreed that, although Captain M'Clure was worthily rewarded for making a North-West passage, Franklin was the man who made the North-West passage.—Lady Franklin's screw steam yacht Fox, in which Captain M'Clintock made his recent exploration, was sold last week by public auction for 2825*l.* She cost 6500*l.*, and 3000*l.* was expended on her preparatory to the expedition.

BRITISH WOOLS.—LONDON, FRIDAY, Nov. 18.

Our trade continues in a quiet state, and no business is transacted unless to meet immediate requirements. Flat accounts are received from the north country town (Bradford), where not long ago they were making great efforts to increase the supply of wool, their trade having considerably overstepped the supply from the farmers.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, Nov. 14

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was unusually small, and quickly taken by our own millers and buyers from the interior at an advance of 2s. per qr. on the prices of this day se'nnight; foreign was held for a similar improvement, but business was rendered impossible by the fog; we advance our quotations 1s. to 2s. per qr. Barley brings an advance of 1s. per qr. Beans are 1s. dearer. Peas unaltered in value. The Oat trade is very firm, the arrivals being small, and needy purchasers are compelled to pay an advance of fully 6d. per qr. The top price of town-made Flour is unaltered, but Norfolks are 1s dearer.

FRIDAY, Nov. 18.

During the past eight days we have had very dry foggy weather, with severe frosts and easterly winds. Considerable activity has prevailed in the Wheat trade in several parts of the kingdom, restricted in others by the enhanced rates insisted upon by the holders; an advance of about 2s. per qr in prices has been general, and the majority look for a further improvement. Some purchases of English Wheat have been made on the east coast and shipped to Belgium, where prices continue higher than with us. Spring Corn of all descriptions has also risen, Barley, Beans, and Peas in most markets being written 1s. and Oats 6d. dearer. Flour in several markets of the Interior is 1s. to 2s. per sack higher. The arrivals from Southern Europe this week are limited to 1 cargo of Wheat, 3 of Maize, and 1 of Barley. The few sales of cargoes off the coast include Taganrog Ghirka Wheat at 48s. to 48s. 3d. per 492 lbs.; Ibrail Maize at 31s. 6d., Mazagan at 32s. 6d., both per 480 lbs., Odessa at 32s. 6d. per 492 lbs. (part imperfect); Levant Barley at 23s. per 400 lbs.; Oats (imperfect) at 16s. 6d. and Egyptian Beans at 34s. per qr. imp. The arrivals of English and foreign Wheat and English Barley this week have been to a fair extent, large of foreign Barley, and small of Oats. To-day's market was but thinly attended. English Wheat met a fair sale at Monday's prices; the inquiry for foreign was limited, and in the business transacted our former quotations were fully supported. Barley is a steady sale at Monday's prices. Beans and Peas bring the extreme rates lately current. The Oat trade is very firm, and good fresh corn on board ship is rather dearer.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, Nov. 14.

The supply of Beasts is again shorter and trade is brisk prices have consequently advanced. There are a few more Sheep than on Monday last; however, the demand has increased, and we are enabled to quote rather higher for choicest descriptions. Calves are selling about the same as on Thursday. From Germany and Holland there are 1170 Beasts, 4130 Sheep, and 59 Calves; from Scotland, 100 Beasts; from Ireland, 600; and 4130 from the northern and midland counties.

THURSDAY, Nov. 18.

The number of Beasts is about an average; but choice qualities are scarce, and consequently find purchasers at fully late rates. Although the supply of sheep is very short it exceeds the demand. There is scarcely any business transacted. There is no alteration in the Calf trade. From Germany and Holland there are 210 Beasts, 97 Sheep, and 134 Calves; from the northern and midland counties, 600 Beasts; and 120 Milch Cows from the home counties.

News of the Week.

THE Times of Monday announced that the EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH has directed M. BILLAULT, Minister of the Interior, to send to the Prefect of each department a confidential circular, expressing regret at the exaggerated language of the French Press with regard to England; and calling attention to the fact that such language, being found in journals which usually support the Imperial Government, tends to identify that Government with attacks upon an allied and friendly Power. The Minister therefore expresses his opinion that it is desirable for the dignity of the Imperial policy and the maintenance of peace that the Prefects should use their influence with the journals to put an end to the practice. Lord COWLEY left Paris on Monday for London, and it is stated, on what is said to be reliable authority, that the object of his lordship's visit is to lay before the British Government a proposal from the French Government for a simultaneous disarmament by England and France.

The EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH has withdrawn his opposition to the nomination of the Chevalier BUONCOMPAGNI to the Regency of Central Italy; and Baron RICASOLI, President of the National Assembly of Tuscany, who had sent a deputation to Turin to protest against the appointment, has now accepted the nomination. This result has been produced by the explanations given by the Government of Sardinia, which has assured the French Cabinet that the maintenance of public order was the sole object and aim of the delegation to M. BUONCOMPAGNI, that the concentration in his hands of the Governments of Central Italy had in no manner the character of a virtual Regency; and that it was intended to reserve for the Congress the definitive settlement of the Italian Peninsula. General GARIBALDI has issued a proclamation, stating that he has retired for the present from the military service in consequence of the "miserable tortuous policy" which for the moment disturbs the "majestic march of their affairs;" but will be ready to resume his command whenever KING VICTOR EMMANUEL shall again call his soldiers to arms for the redemption of the country.

The ratification of the Treaties of Peace were exchanged at Zurich on Monday by the Plenipotentiaries of France, Austria, and Sardinia, and the Marquis DE BANNEVILLE has since arrived in Paris with the ratified treaties. On the same day M. ARMAND, the Secretary to the French Legation, delivered to the Austrian Plenipotentiary a draft at sight for two millions sterling, as the first instalment of the 10 millions to be paid to Austria for the surrender of Lombardy; the remaining eight millions being made payable in four instalments at short intervals.

The first division of the Spanish expedition against Morocco landed last week at Ceuta and proceeded to entrench itself. The Moors had already attacked both Melilla and Ceuta, but no engagement of any importance has yet taken place. The French campaign against Morocco has been brought to a satisfactory conclusion, after having lasted only 20 days, and without having passed the limits of Algeria. Its object has been limited to the chastisement of the frontier tribes, which have accepted the French conditions and given hostages for their observance.

The Bombay and China mails have arrived with news from Bombay to the 26th, and from Hong-Kong to the 13th October. The Lahore papers announce that NANA SAHIB died on the 2d October in the Dhang valley on the Nepaul frontier; but there is reason to suspect that the account of his death has been circulated by himself in the hope of preventing the winter campaign which had been determined on with the view of driving him out of Nepaul. The Chinese Government has repudiated its treaty with the United States, by refusing to open the ports of Swartow and Taiwan, as stipulated by that treaty.

On Monday morning at 7 o'clock, the day being the birthday of the Princess Frederick William, the band of the 1st Life Guards played a selection of music in front of the castle. The Duchess of Kent and Prince and Princess Leiningen breakfasted with her Majesty. The Queen, with Princess Frederick William, walked in the Home Park. In the evening the Queen gave a dinner party in the Waterloo Chamber, and afterwards had an evening party. On Tuesday morning the Prince Consort went out shooting, accompanied by Prince Frederick William, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and Viscount Sydney. The Prince of Wales left Windsor for Oxford. C. and Lady Theresa Lewis arrived on a visit. In the evening the first dramatic performance this season took place in St. George's Hall, the pieces selected being Mr. Bayle Bernard's comedy of "The Evil Genius," and Mr. Tom Taylor's comedietta, entitled "To Oblige Benson." A large party was invited to witness the performance, which was under the management of Mr. George Ellis, directed by Mr. W. B. Donne, her Majesty's Examiner of Plays. On Thursday morning the Queen accompanied by Princess Alice walked in the Home Park, and visited the Duchess of Kent at Frogmore. The Prince Consort, with Prince and Princess Frederick William, came to town by a special train of the South-Western Railway, and drove from the private station, Vauxhall, to the Westminster Palace. The Prince Consort afterwards went to Marlborough House. Prince Frederick William visited Merchant Taylors' Hall in the city. In the afternoon the Royal party met at the private station and returned to the castle. —On the 5th of the ensuing month her Majesty and the Prince Consort, accompanied by the Prince and Princess Frederick William and the junior members of the Royal family, will leave the castle for Osborne. The Court will remain there until the 24th, when her Majesty will return to Windsor for the Christmas holidays.

THE PRINCE OF WALES left Oxford on Saturday for Windsor Castle to be present at the celebration of the birthday of the Princess Frederick William on Monday. His Royal Highness returned to Oxford on Tuesday.

PRINCE ALFRED.—The Euryalus, with Prince Alfred on board, arrived at the Pirœus of Athens on the 10th inst. It is said that his Royal Highness will not visit Constantinople, but will return to Malta about Christmas, and probably come to England.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Thursday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street.

THE BISHOPRIC OF SIERRA LEONE, after having been vacant nearly six months, has been conferred upon the Rev. E. H. Beckles, for many years rector of St. Peter's, St. Christopher's, in the diocese of Antigua. Mr. Beckles's views are Evangelical, and in matters of ecclesiastical discipline he is said to incline to the Low Church party.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—The election for the seat at Whitby vacant by the death of Mr. R. Stephenson has terminated in the return of Mr. H. B. Thompson, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 39 over Mr. Chapman, the numbers being 229 to 190.

THE ARMY.—It is understood that the Government have decided on making a considerable increase in the army by the formation of second battalions to each of the regiments up to and including the 35th Regiment, by which an increase equivalent to 11 regiments will be obtained. The first batch of 800 disaffected troops from the Bengal Artillery, who have been discharged at their own request after having served the allotted term of 12 years, having arrived at Gravesend, Capt. and Adjt. Byrne, belonging to the Depôt Brigade of Royal Artillery, and a party of 10 non-commissioned officers of the corps at Woolwich, have been sent down with instructions to re-enlist and bring up to head-quarters any number of the men who are disposed to join.

THE DISEMBODIED MILITIA.—A circular has been addressed by Mr. Sidney Herbert to the officers commanding disembodied regiments of militia stating that it has been determined to supply those regiments with Enfield rifles of the 1853 pattern, and that the musketry instruction of the permanent staff is to be proceeded with as soon as the qualified instructors shall return from Hythe, in order that the system may be commenced for the whole regiment at the next annual training. The circular gives minute instructions as to the forms to be observed in obtaining supplies of the new arms.

THE VOLUNTEER CORPS.—On Wednesday afternoon the enrolled members, upwards of 200 in number, of the Volunteer Rifle Corps now in course of formation among the members of the Inns of Court, met together in the Lords Justices' Court at Lincoln's Inn, for the purpose of electing their permanent managing committee, and of making the necessary arrangements for commencing drill forthwith. Mr. Selwyn, M.P., acted as chairman, and a considerable number of the members of the bar of note and standing were present. The working committee, elected by the enrolled members and subscribers by means of voting papers, were Sir Hugh Cairns, M.P., Mr. Selwyn, M.P., Mr. Kenyon Parker, Q.C., Mr. Rodwell, Q.C., Mr. J. W. Chitty, the Hon. Adolphus Liddell, Mr. Leigh Pemberton, and Mr. Lonsdale—the four first being subscribers, and the last four enrolled members of the corps. Mr. Bacon, Q.C., and Mr. Macaulay, Q.C., were appointed treasurers, and Mr. J. H. Patteson and Mr. A. Bailey, honorary secretaries. The selection of a site for practising shooting was on the motion of Mr. Phinn, Q.C., seconded by Mr. Whateley, Q.C., left to the decision of the managing committee. On this point some discussion arose, in the course of which it was stated that the Provisional Committee considered that the ground at Sheen Common united in itself the most advantages, but the Chairman promised that if any 14 members could fix on a particular place and a particular hour most convenient to them for drill, the services of a drill sergeant should be assigned to them. The consideration of the choice of a uniform was deferred for the present, in order that the members and subscribers might devote their attention to the question. A member of the Chancery bar, who is one of the Highgate Volunteers, appeared at the meeting in the uniform of that corps, which, consisting principally of a dark gray tunic, relieved by no other colour calculated to catch the eye, seems to possess all the invisibility desirable in the costume of a rifleman. The question of the choice of officers underwent some discussion, and Mr. Phinn, Q.C., moved that the commissioned officers of the corps should be selected from among gentlemen who had served either in the army or in the Marines. The motion met with some opposition, but was eventually carried on a show of hands. A company of barristers is forming in the Temple, with a view to join the South Middlesex corps, on account of the head-quarters at Beaufort House, Walham Green, being within such an easy and convenient distance. The London Scottish Corps having proved completely successful, measures have been taken for the formation of a rifle brigade to consist of Irishmen resident in London, under the title of "The London Irish Volunteer Rifle Corps." In order to render the organisation thoroughly effective, communications have been addressed to the Irish nobility and gentry resident in the metropolis, without reference to political opinions or creed, and the replies already received are of the most favourable character. The Marquis of Donegal, the Earl of Lucan, and other Irish noblemen have consented to act on the committee, and there is no doubt that the corps will be an exceedingly efficient body in a very short period. A circular has been sent from the Audit Office to the various public offices in London with a view to the formation of a "Civil Service Rifle Brigade." The invitation has been highly successful. Several companies are forming in the large departments, while the Audit Office company is receiving a great accession of numbers from the smaller establishments. The brigade, which will be identified entirely with the Civil Service, and be quite distinct from any other corps, promises to be one of the most important in course of formation. The London Brigade is progressing with such success that more than 700 gentlemen have applied for enrolment, and the number is increasing daily. The Corporation have voted 100 guineas in favour of the brigade, and several of the City companies have made liberal contributions. At a special Court of Lieutenancy on Thursday, Alderman Rose and Alderman Allen, with five other gentlemen, were in accordance with a report from the Council unanimously nominated Captains. Mr. Thomas Davies Sewell, Mr. John Carter, son of the Lord Mayor, and four other gentlemen were nominated Lieutenants; and there were also several nominations as Ensigns. The nominations for full Colonel and Major, as well as that of Lieut.-Colonel, were left open for the present, the Court considering in regard to the latter that Captain Hicks, who had been recommended for it, being at present governor of a City gaol, must obtain the consent of the Court of Aldermen and Sheriffs before the recommendation can be confirmed. It was stated to the Court that the Council had made an application for the use of the Artillery Ground in Finsbury for the purposes of drill, the present drill-ground of the brigade at Sion College having become too small in consequence of the great accession of new members, but the Artillery Company had refused their permission. After some discussion it was finally arranged that the Council should make an official application to the Court, in order that the Commissioners of Lieutenancy might forward it officially to the Artillery Company, and in the event of this application failing that application should be made to Prince Albert as Colonel of the Artillery Company. For the convenience of members attending the night drills the Lord Mayor has given directions that the Guildhall shall be prepared for the drill and suitably lighted. A general meeting of the entire body of the effective and non-effective members of the Marylebone Volunteer Rifle Corps has been held in the Pavilion of the Lord's Cricket-ground, for the purpose of electing a council and vice-presidents of the brigade. Lord Radstock, President and Captain of the Corps presided, and announced amidst loud cheers that General Hay, who had been mainly instrumental in urging the Government to aid this movement, as well as Lord Elcho and Sir C. Rowley, had consented to join them. It was then unanimously resolved that Sir J. J. Hamilton, Mr. Raikes Currie, Mr. F. H. Bridgman, Sir John Anson, Mr. H. Dark, and Sir Gardner Wilkinson be elected the Council; and that Major-General Hay, Lord Elcho, Lieut.-Col. Wood, Sir Charles Rowley, Colonel Burlton, C.B., Sir Charles J. J. Hamilton, C.B., Mr. Thompson Hankey, M.P., Mr. Keith Barnes, Mr. W. S. Burton, Mr. Peter Graham, Mr. Thomas Little, Mr. John Bentley, Mr. W. Debenham, Mr. Octavius Wigram, Mr. Richard B. Wade, and Mr. D. E. Cameron be elected the Vice-Presidents of the Marylebone Corps. The Horse Guards have approved of the site for a butt and practice ground for the corps at Wormwood Scrubs, and the Secretary for War has given his sanction to the arrangement. An important meeting of the magistrates, burgesses, and other principal inhabitants of the city of Westminster, convened by the Lord Lieutenant, was held at the Guildhall on Wednesday for the formation of a volunteer rifle corps for the City of Westminster. Mr. Miller, M.P., as Deputy Lieutenant, officiated as chairman, and among the gentlemen present were the Dean of Westminster, Lord Ranelagh, Mr. Baron Bramwell, Sir John Scott Lilly, Mr. Antrobus, Mr. John Lettsom Elliott, Mr. Carter Wood, Mr. Anderson Rose, and Mr. Twining. At a previous meeting, held in the same place, a resolution had been adopted for the immediate formation of a volunteer corps, and a provisional committee had been appointed to make the necessary arrangements, one of which was to invite the co-operation of the inhabitants of the nine parishes composing the city of Westminster in carrying out the proposed object. The result of that invitation, as stated on Wednesday, was that seven out of the nine parishes had sent three delegates each to represent them. The parish of St. James, another of the nine, had convened a meeting for the election of representatives, and St. George's, the remaining parish, had already formed a volunteer corps of its own. It was stated in the course of the proceedings that the Duke of Northumberland had contributed 200*l.* towards the expenses incidental to the establishment of a corps for the parish of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, of which his Grace is a parishioner; and that at all the parochial meetings, the subject had been entertained with great enthusiasm, and subscriptions opened for defraying the expenses of embodying the corps. At the meeting in St. Paul's, Covent Garden, the suggestion that a united effort should be made among the several parishes of Westminster was cordially adopted, and a committee appointed to co-operate with delegates from the rest of the parishes with that view. At St. Mary-le-Strand it was resolved not only that a corps should be formed in the parish, but also that one should be formed in King's College under the sanction of the Principal and College authorities, to be amalgamated with the City of Westminster Corps. The gentlemen of the Metropolitan Termini of Railways and the Railway Clearing House have formed themselves into a corps, under the denomination of "The Railway Rifles," and upwards of 100 have enrolled themselves members. Several drills have already taken place in the open ground at the Metropolitan Cattle Market, which has been lent by the Markets Improvement Committee. The 1st Middlesex (Victoria Rifles) assembled at Kilburn on Saturday, and, after being formed into four companies, marched to Hampstead Heath, preceded by the band of the 1st Surrey Militia. The corps then proceeded to the St. John's Wood Barracks, the riding school of which has been lit with gas at the Government expense for the accommodation of the corps during the winter months. The South Middlesex holds its meetings at the ground recently obtained by Lord Ranelagh for the corps at Walham Green. The officers of the 1st Company of the North London have received their commissions, and the enrolment of members is steadily progressing at Myddelton Hall, Islington, every evening. The Hornsey corps, enrolled as the 13th Middlesex, is drilled twice a week at Crouch End. The Scottish Central continues to make rapid progress with its drills in Westminster Hall, under the tuition of three sergeants of the Scots Fusilier Guards. The formation of a rifle and artillery corps in the neighbourhood of the Victoria docks has commenced, and it is proposed to raise 100 riflemen and 50 artillerymen. At a public meeting held at Bermondsey in compliance with a requisition signed by the principal inhabitants, it has been resolved to form a corps for that and the adjoining parishes on the Surrey side of the Thames. The Richmond corps has received such an accession of volunteers that it will soon have sufficient members to be enrolled as a company instead of a subdivision. At a crowded meeting held at Clapham it has been resolved to form a corps for the district of Clapham, Battersea, Wandsworth, and its neighbourhood, in connexion with the 1st Surrey. The 5th Surrey has selected Wimbledon Common for its evolutions, and the 6th Surrey has adopted two exercising grounds—one at West End Common, commanding a range of upwards of 1000 yards; and another at Fox Warren, the seat of Mr. Charles Buxton, M.P., for the convenience of the residents of Weybridge, Rytleet, and Cobham. —In the provinces and in Scotland the movement is also advancing with great rapidity. A great meeting was held in the City Hall at Glasgow on Wednesday evening, in compliance with a requisition addressed to the Lord Provost, "to consider the best means of promoting and encouraging the volunteer movement in Glasgow." The hall was densely crowded in every corner, and the demonstration was of the most enthusiastic and successful character, the volunteers in uniform, to the amount of between 700 and 800, occupying the galleries—a magnificent body of young men. The meeting was addressed at great length by Sir Archibald Alison, Sheriff Bell, Mr. Lawrence Oliphant, Sir James Campbell, and other gentlemen, and resolutions for extending the organisation of volunteer corps over the country, and raising subscriptions for their support, were carried by acclamation. In addition to the cities and towns mentioned in previous numbers of our Paper, the following towns and districts have held meetings for the formation of corps, those on the coast adopting either artillery alone, or artillery and rifles combined:—Altrincham, Ashbourne, Ashton-under-Lyne, Aberdeen, Annan, Arbroath, Bolton, Bromyard, Bewdley, Bala, Bridlington, Burnley, Barnsley, Braintree, Brecon, Burntisland, Brierley Hill, Burslem, Bilston, Chippenham, Carlisle, Chepstow, Dudley, Dunfermline, Derby, Dedham, Dolgelly, Dundee, Dumfries, Epsom, Forfar, Greenock, Glencairn, Harrowgate, Howden, Hartlepool, Hanley, Halesowen, Hastings, Harleston, Haddington, Havant, Keynsham, Kinver, Kingswinford, Kingston-on-Thames, Kingham, Kidderminster, Loddon, Ledburn, Liskeard, Launceston, Lymington, Manchester, Malton, Merthyr, Montrose, Macclesfield, Newton-Stewart, Newark, Newport, Oldbury, Poole, Reigate, Rowley Regis, Ross, Ryde, St. Leonard's, Sudbury, Stirling, Stockton-on-Tees, Southampton, Sandwich, Sunderland, Silverton, Sanquhar, Trowbridge, Tunstall, Tipton, Wareham, Wordsey, Walsall, Warwick, Wavertree, Wallasey, Wrexham, Wigan, Worcester.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The following is an abstract of a letter from the Paris correspondent of the Times respecting a circular which has, it says, been issued to all the Prefects of France, with the view of obviating the effect produced in England by the violent language of a considerable portion of the French press:—

"A confidential communication of an important nature has been addressed by the Minister of the Interior, M. Billault, to all the Prefects in France, in which the Minister expresses his regret that such exaggerated language should be used when speaking of the English people, as well by reason of the disquietude which it must excite among them, as that it tends to destroy the confidence and embitter the feelings of those of whose opinions the English press is the channel. The Prefects are reminded how much greater that unpleasant effect must be when this violent language is employed by journals usually supporting the policy of the Imperial Government and which is made responsible abroad for these excesses. The Prefects are therefore instructed to request the journals in question to be more circumspect; and, while they are at liberty to refute errors, protest against injustice and calumny, and defend energetically the rights of the country, they might easily avoid offending the susceptibilities of a great people, and rather promote friendly relations between the two countries. By pursuing this line of conduct the Minister is of opinion that the dignity of the Imperial policy may be reconciled with the interests of the alliances of France and the maintenance of peace, and with this view the Prefects are requested to use their influence with the press, and with public opinion. The Prefects are requested to communicate their views on this subject, in a confidential manner, to those journals which usually support the Government, and not to interfere with the others unless in cases where their exaggeration tends too manifestly to counteract the wishes of the Government on this point."

Lord Cowley left Paris on Monday for London, and it is stated on reliable authority, that the object of his lordship's visit is to lay before the British Government a proposal from the French Government for a simultaneous disarmament by England and France. The following paragraph was lithographed and sent to all the departments of France on Thursday:—

"The Emperor is said to have charged Lord Cowley to assure her Britannic Majesty that his fidelity to the alliance remains intact; that he has proved his sentiments by his acts; and that if England is willing he is ready to promote a general disarmament in Europe. The impression made here by this news is excellent; it will not be less well received in the departments, where the desire for peace is always more strongly marked than in Paris. We are assured that in the course of the conversation which preceded Lord Cowley's departure for London, the Emperor said to him, 'France has need of England to settle the Italian question, and England has need of France to bring the Chinese affair to an end.'"

The official organs of the French Government announce that the Imperial Government has withdrawn its opposition to the appointment of M. Buoncompagni to the Regency of Central Italy, the explanations of the Sardinian Government having satisfied it that the object of the Regency is to maintain order until the Congress shall definitively settle the affairs of the Italian peninsula. The Moniteur of Wednesday publishes the following statement on the subject, at the same time reminding the public that it is the only political organ of the Government:—

"The French Government, believing that the acceptance of the Regency of Central Italy by M. Buoncompagni would prejudice the questions which will be submitted to the approaching Congress, had looked upon the adoption of the above measure with regret. This impression is now modified by the explanations given by the Government of Sardinia which declares that the maintenance of public order was the sole object and only aim of the above delegation to M. Buoncompagni, and that the concentration in his hands of the Government of Central Italy had in no manner the character of a virtual Regency."

The Moniteur announces that the Plenipotentiaries of France, Austria, and Sardinia exchanged on Monday at Zurich the ratifications of the treaties of the 10th of November, and the Marquis de Banneville arrived in Paris on Thursday from Zurich with the ratified treaties. On the day when the ratifications were exchanged M. Armand delivered to the Austrian Plenipotentiary a draught at sight for 20,000,000*fl.* The remaining 80,000,000*fl.* will be paid by four instalments, at short intervals. The Moniteur contains a decree to insure the execution of that clause of the treaty of Zurich wherein the giving up of the Austrian vessels captured during the late war, but not yet adjudged as prizes, is stipulated. No formal invitation to take part in the Congress which is to be held on the 15th of December next has yet been addressed by France to England, but Count de Persigny has been instructed to arrange the preliminary conditions with Lord John Russell. The formal and official invitations will be sent to the different Powers from the Cabinets of Vienna and Paris simultaneously. The notes containing the invitation will not be identical, but Austria will propose that the Congress shall assemble in Paris, while France will abstain from indicating any place. Prince Metternich has already delivered to Count Walewski the letters from the Austrian Government, and these invitations will be delivered by the French couriers conveying similar invitations from the French Government. The delay in the delivery of these documents is attributed to some objections on the part of Austria respecting the nomination of M. Buoncompagni to the Regency, while it is asserted in other quarters that an objection made by Russia has caused the delay. Sir F. G. Moon, Bart., Sir J. Duke, Bart., and Alderman Salomons, all three formerly Lord Mayors of London; Alderman Sir Henry Muggeridge, Sir C. Crosley, ex-Sheriff, Mr. Thomas Weguelin, Mr. Thomas Dent, Mr. William Gladstone, Mr. John Distin Powles, Mr. Matthew Uzielli, and Sir William Topham, Lieutenant of the Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms, have been nominated by the Emperor Chevaliers of the Legion of Honour. The French campaign against Morocco may be considered as concluded, after having lasted no more than 20 days. Its object has been limited to the chastisement of the frontier tribes, without the French expeditionary columns having passed the limits of Algeria. A despatch from General Martimprey, dated Isly, 9th inst., states that, after an immense razzia undertaken against the Maias and the Angades, Benigal and Si-Hamza have been taken by surprise by the commander of the French troops. The French conditions have been accepted and hostages surrendered. The expeditionary force was to recross the frontiers on the 11th inst., and was then to be broken up.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.—Accounts from Madrid of the 21st inst. state that the embarkation of the 1st division commenced on the 18th at Algesiras, and was completed in the course of the night. The first portion of the division, under General Echague, landed at Ceuta, and immediately proceeded to intrench itself at a spot called El Serrallo. At first the Moors offered some resistance, but they soon fled. The embarkation of the 2d division has since commenced. Most of the Madrid journals contain articles blaming the Government with great severity for the concessions which the recently published correspondence with England about Morocco shows that it has made to that Power, in promising not to make any conquest on the coast of the Straits of Gibraltar. The latest news states that the Moors were attacking Melilla, as well as Ceuta, and that the commerce of Gibraltar was suffering from the interruption of relations with Africa. Mr. Drummond Hay, the English Consul-General, was at Tangiers, and was having frequent conferences with Kaïd, the Moorish Minister of Foreign Affairs. A duel with swords took place at Madrid a few days since between M. San Miguel, director of the theatre del Principe (nephew of the Duke), and Mario the singer, in which both were slightly wounded. The cause of the duel was the affront recently offered to Grisi at the Madrid Opera House.

HESSE CASSEL.—The Second Chamber on Thursday, by a vote of 32 against 8, resolved upon addressing a memorial to the Federal Diet for the re-establishment of the Constitution of 1831.

FRANKFORT.—In the sitting of the Federal Diet of Thursday, the Plenipotentiary of Hesse Electoral acceded to the proposals of the committee, and granted some concessions in reference to the wishes of the Chambers, but persevered in maintaining the Constitution of 1852.

DENMARK.—A Council of Ministers was held on Monday at Copenhagen, at which it was resolved that the President of the Cabinet should tender to the King the resignation of the whole Ministry. M. Cottwitt has been summoned by his Majesty to form a new Administration.

BAVARIA.—A Conference of the Ministers of the States of second rank, and also of the minor States of Germany, was opened on the 23d inst. at Wurzburg, on the invitation of Bavaria, in order to come to some agreement about the pending questions of German policy. The Governments of Bavaria, Saxony, Wurtemburg, Hesse Electoral, Hesse Darmstadt, Schwerin, Nassau, Saxe-Meiningen, and Saxe-Altenburg are taking part in these Conferences. The principal questions under consideration are—the settlement of the right of domicile, the establishment of federal courts of justice, the national demonstration in favour of unity, reform of the federal laws relating to the army, the Hesse electoral and Holstein questions, and regulations for an uniform system of weights and measures for all Germany.

HAMBURGH.—At the elections of Burgesses, which took place on the 18th inst., neither the Conservative party nor the party of the Guilds succeeded in bringing in their candidates. The chief leaders of the moderate Liberal party were beaten by the leaders of the extreme Liberals.

PRUSSIA.—The health of the King of Prussia has so far improved, that his medical attendants have advised his Majesty to remove to the Isle of Wight. It is believed that this advice will be followed. Count Pourtales, Prussian Ambassador, has returned to Paris, and visited the Emperor and Empress at Compiègne. It is stated that his Excellency is instructed to give to the French Government authentic explanations of the late interview between the Prince Regent of Prussia and the Emperor of Russia.

MALTA.—Letters from Malta of the 15th inst. report a slight shock of earthquake on the day preceding, attended by a loud rumbling noise. There was little wind at the time, although it had been blowing for 48 hours previous very heavily from the northward and eastward. It had rained all day on the 14th, after unusually dry weather and great heat.

AUSTRIA.—An Imperial autograph letter orders the Ministers to grant a full amnesty to all persons compromised by the part they have taken in Italian affairs. This amnesty will apply to civil as well as to military persons, and criminal offences of no political character are to be excepted. The Reformation festival was celebrated at Vienna on the 15th, in the three evangelical churches in a very solemn and impressive manner. Among those present were the Minister of State, Baron Bruck, with several other Government officials, and many generals and high staff officers, the representatives of several foreign embassies, and a considerable attendance of the public, among whom were numbers of students from the academies. Luther's famous hymn, "Eine feste Burg ist unser Gott" ("Our God is a strong castle"), was sung with great devotional feeling.

RUSSIA.—A despatch from Nice announces that the Empress-Mother of Russia is very seriously indisposed.

ITALY.—A deputation from Tuscany, consisting of Signor Galleotti, Signor Coppi, and Signor Febrizzi, sent by the Baron Ricasoli, President of the National Assembly, to protest against the regency of M. Buoncompagni, arrived last week in Turin. The deputation was not received by the King, but the Prince de Carignan received them in a private audience. It appears that their objections were removed on being assured by the Sardinian Government that the Regency was only a temporary arrangement for the preservation of order in Central Italy, and subject to the decision of the Congress. For this reason the French Government has also withdrawn its opposition, but it is said that Austria, through the medium of Prince de Metternich, has protested against the nomination of a Regent as being contrary to the conditions of the treaties of Zurich. Great exertions are making by the Piedmontese Government to maintain tranquillity in Tuscany, Parma, Modena, and the Romagna. Chevalier Buoncompagni has left Turin for Parma and Modena, to assume the Regency. The 2d regiment of the Bolognese Brigade has taken the oath to the King of Sardinia, and received its colours amid the applause of the populace. The uniform of the brigade is the same as that of the Piedmontese army. Garibaldi has sent in his resignation as one of the generals of the army of Central Italy, and is about to retire to the island of Sardinia. He has issued the following proclamation to the Italians:—

"As underhand machinations were continually impeding the freedom of action attached to the rank I occupy in the Army of Central Italy, and which I made use of in the endeavour to attain the object which every good Italian has in view, I leave for the moment the military service. On the day when Victor Emmanuel shall again call his soldiers to arms for the redemption of the country I will again find a weapon of some sort, and a place by the side of my valiant companions. The miserable tortuous policy which for a moment disturbs the majestic march of our affairs must convince us that it is necessary for us to draw close round the valorous and loyal soldier of independence, incapable of retrograding in his sublime and generous path, and that we ought now, more than ever, to prepare gold and steel, so as to be able to meet those who should endeavour to plunge us back again into the miseries of the past."

He left Nice on Monday for Genoa. Before his departure he addressed the inhabitants of Nice, and said,—'I shall be ready to resume my command when necessary. Let us be united under Victor Emmanuel; let us continue under arms as long as an inch of Italian soil remains oppressed.' The official journal of Naples announces that M. Paulin Talabot is expected in that city in order to consult with Messrs. Rothschild and Blount concerning the line and works of the railway from Naples to Tarento, of which M. Talabot is the founder.

GREECE.—The sixth Legislative session of the Greek Chambers was opened on the 10th inst. by King Otho. After stating that Greece was at peace with all foreign Powers, his Majesty said:—

"Gentlemen, Deputies, and Senators.—You are aware that my Government, always anxious to fulfil its engagements towards the Powers who guaranteed the loan, has proposed to them to make a final settlement of the affair according to the resources of the State. They have claimed, for the present, an annual payment of 900,000f., convinced that the payment of that sum will not create any embarrassment to the public service. My Government will ask from you the grants necessary to cover this sum, and will follow up the negotiations relative to the final settlement of this question—a settlement which is indispensable to the consolidation of public credit and a healthy system of our finances. I entertain the hope that the kindness always shown to Greece by the protecting Powers will facilitate the result of this negotiation."

TUNIS.—Advices from Tunis to the 15th inst. state that the new Bey is about to send an Ambassador Extraordinary to Constantinople to demand a religious investiture from the Sultan.

TURKEY.—Advices from Constantinople to the 16th inst. state that tremendous tempests have prevailed of late, and many shipwrecks have taken place in the Black Sea, especially on the coast of Roumelia. Kiamil Pacha, President of the High Court of Justice, has been suspended, and Saffetti Pacha, late Minister of Religious Institutions, has been appointed his successor. Circassian emigrants continue to arrive in large numbers and 700 of them have been sent to the island of Rhodes. The editor of the Presse d'Orient has received permission again to publish that paper, but under certain conditions.

INDIA.—The Bombay mail has arrived with news to the 26th October. The following are the details:—

Beyt.—The fortress of Beyt was not stormed, as at first announced, but was evacuated by its garrison on the night of the 6th ult, the attempt to carry it during the day having failed, from the breach being impracticable, and the scaling-ladders too short. The force arrived off the island on the morning of the 3d. On the 4th the boats, under the command of Lieut. Chitty, cut out the native craft lying in shore, and the squadron came into position on the south side of the fort. The bombardment began on the morning of the 5th within 800 yards of the fort, and lasted throughout the day; the Feroze, Victoria, Zenobia, Clyde, and Constance between them pouring in a terrific storm of shot and shell. A breach was declared practicable the next morning, and the storming party, consisting of detachments of the Royal Artillery, Sappers and Miners, her Majesty's 28th Foot, Marine Battalion, and 6th Native Infantry, landed under cover of the guns, about 2 o'clock. No casualty occurred in landing, although the enemy kept up a brisk fire of musketry upon the troops. But the breach was found impracticable, and the scaling ladders useless, from the height of the walls. The men of the 28th and the 6th Native Infantry were consequently exposed to a galling fire of musketry from the walls, which had been extensively loophooled for the purpose. The face of the wall which had been destroyed by the bombardment was protected with a chevaux-de-frise of prickly pear, and it was therefore resolved to withdraw the troops, and recommence the bombardment. At this juncture a white flag was hung out from the fort, and a well-known native shopkeeper of Bombay, who has been unlucky enough to fall into the Wagheers' hands, was seen approaching as an ambassador. He came from the garrison with an offer to surrender the fort, on condition of their being transported with their arms across the Gulf to Mandavee. Colonel Donovan replied that he would treat only with the chief in person. The chief then came out and repeated the former proposal. He was told that upon laying down their arms the garrison would be allowed to leave the fort without molestation, and, not approving the stipulation, the chief returned to the fort. The flag was hauled down, and the firing recommenced, and soon after dark the enemy is supposed to have evacuated the place. On taking possession the next day it was a marvel to the observer that the garrison had so long sustained the terrible fire poured into the place. The body of the chief, who must have fallen soon after the recommencement of hostilities, was found amid heaps of dead. The fort is said to be amazingly strong; the walls are earthwork of from 18 to 40 feet thick, and 30 to 40 feet high. A somewhat serious question has arisen out of the demolition of Beyt. It contains celebrated temples, rich temples, and bejewelled gods. When the place was taken, this treasure was looked upon as fair loot, and both private and public plunder was acquired by the sackful. Moreover, when the walls were blown up the temples were unavoidably destroyed, being within the warlike enclosure. The consequence has been a great outcry from the Hindoo community, not of Bombay only, but all over Western India. "You have desecrated and destroyed our temples, stolen our gods, and we won't light up at the great festival of the Dewali." They have applied to Lord Elphinstone, who has told them that all the public loot shall be returned, but that what the soldiers pocketed is gone beyond recall.

Cawnpore.—Lord Canning arrived at Allahabad on the 14th Oct., and after a stay of a few hours went on to Cawnpore. The object of the journey is said to be "the recognition of many of the new tenures in Oude, the reception of native Princes of the Punjab and others, his direct intercourse with those who loyally lent their aid to uphold the British power, and the personal acknowledgment of these services, and for inspecting Delhi and Oude." Every chief of note is commanded to appear before the Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief.

Lucknow.—Rajah Jeyloll Singh was hung on the 1st ult., and Bundeh Hussein and Futteh Ali on the 12th. They were all deeply implicated in the massacre of our captive countrymen, and were executed at the scene of the massacre. Rajah Jeyloll Singh offered to pay any amount—from a lac upwards—for a commutation of his sentence. The ex-King of Oude is said to have accepted a pension of 12 lacs (120,000*l.*), and relinquished all claims on Oude.

Nepaul.—A postscript to the Lahore Chronicle of Oct. 13 says that it has received from its Oude correspondent the important news that Nana Sahib died in the Dhang valley in the Nepaul frontier on the 2d Oct., and that his followers had all dispersed in several gangs. There is however reason to doubt the truth of the statement, as it is not corroborated by the Oude papers of later date. A letter from Allahabad of Oct. 16, says that it was there believed that the handbill announcing his death had been printed by the Nana himself, in order to prevent the winter campaigns, which would be sure to puckerow him; for, once driven out of Nepaul, he has no place to retreat on except Tartary, and at this season of the year it would be impossible for him to cross the high plateaus of the snowy range. Banee Madho of Byswarrah is very unwell, and it is apprehended he will not survive long.

Bombay.—On the 11th ult. a great native meeting was held, at which a petition to Parliament from the native community was signed by 2500 persons, and by as many more on the day of the mail's leaving. One of the chief points in the petition was the offer to raise 6,000,000*l.* sterling for the relief of Government, only stipulating that they should be allowed to raise the sum in their own way. It is a "continuous" tax which the natives dread.

Calcutta.—Only 50 out of 1000 of the discharged Europeans at and near Calcutta have accepted bounty for China. By an order of the 21st October, two years' service are to be granted to those men of the local army who have not taken their discharge, and are to be permitted to enlist for China; they will receive a bounty of 50 r. on condition that they enlist for 3 years. Radical changes are looked for on Mr. Wilson's arrival, including the abolition of the Supreme Council, and a Government of Secretaries for the Civil, Military, and Marine Departments.

CHINA AND JAPAN.—The following telegrams have been received in anticipation of the China mail of the 13th October:—

Hong Kong.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Canton has been lost in a gale off Macao. The crew were saved. The Governor has refused to revise the sentence passed on Mr. Tarrant.

Shanghai.—The Chinese Government has repudiated its treaty with the United States by refusing to open the ports of Swatow and Taiwan, as stipulated by that treaty. Admiral Hope was so far recovered from his wounds as to be able to walk, and had arrived at Shanghai on a visit to Mr. Bruce. Officers have been employed in surveying the coast at the mouth of the Peiho, and have found a favourable position for the landing of troops, by which the forts may be taken in the rear, and obviate the necessity of forcing the river's mouth. A report was prevalent in Shanghai that the Chinese were engaged in razing some of the forts at the entrance to the Peiho.

Jeddo.—The affairs in Japan remain still unsettled. A change of Ministry favourable to foreigners is daily expected. A Russian officer, Marifat, and one of his crew, have been murdered by the Japanese. Atonement for this outrage has been demanded by the Russian Ambassador, and has been granted by the Government. The dollar question has not yet been decided.

Java.—The Governor-General is seriously ill, and it is urged that he should be relieved. The expeditionary force to Bali was to leave in October. Her Majesty's ship Esk, Captain Sir Robert Maclure, is in dock at Onrust.

UNITED STATES.—A despatch of the 11th, from Washington, says that the Government had received important despatches from the English Government relative to the San Juan difficulty, expressing an earnest desire to settle the question; the details proposed had not been made known, but it was believed that there was no longer danger of any serious difficulty between the two countries. The approaching Presidential election is the great topic of interest in all parts of the Union, and fears are entertained that the question of slavery may at length lead to a split between the Northern and Southern States. Cook and the other prisoners convicted of being implicated in the rising at Harper's Ferry had been sentenced to death at Charleston.

WEST INDIES.—The Tasmanian mail steamer arrived at Southampton on Wednesday with 132,613*l.* in specie. She was six days overdue, having been obliged to put back to repair damage in her steam apparatus. Yellow fever has raged very badly on board during her voyage. 51 cases having occurred, of which 11 were fatal. There has been no new case for the last 14 days. Of those who were left in hospital at St. Thomas by the last homeward steamer, La Plata, Mr. Bushby has died. Messrs. Clapperton, Elridge, and Stiles are recovered.

PERU.—A terrible earthquake has occurred at Copiapo, by which more than one half of the town has been destroyed, causing a great loss of life. The shock was sensibly felt at Caldera, where the sea receded 23 feet in the harbour, and ships swayed to and fro as if in a heavy sea. The Caldera and Copiapo Railroad suffered considerable damage, in consequence of which no trains could pass over it. The Chilian Minister at Peru was murdered on the night of the 15th of October at Chorillas. This is the second foreign Minister who has been assassinated in Peru within the last 18 months.

CHILI. — Accounts from Chili by the Tasmanian announce the assassination of General Vidaurre Leal, Intendente of Valparaiso, on the 18th of September, the anniversary of Chilian Independence. It appears that during the celebration of a high mass in the principal church, at which the General and an immense concourse of citizens were present, some of the populace attempted to possess themselves of the arms of the National Guard, who had drawn out in the square in front of the church. A riot ensued, shots were fired, and the General left the church for the purpose of restoring order; but had scarcely descended the steps when he fell mortally wounded by one of the insurgents' balls.

Public Address.

COLONEL WILFORD, Assistant Commandant and Chief Instructor of the Government School of Musketry at Hythe, delivered an interesting lecture in the theatre of the United Service Institution, on Monday evening, on rifles and rifle practice, of which the following is an abstract:—

"The rifle was first used at a target practice at Hamburgh in 1498. It was then employed by the German Jägers, who carried them for the destruction of game that required to be shot by ball. The Austrians did not at first train riflemen, but they found them ready made to their hands among the Jägers. Frederick the Great, in order to meet the Austrian army on equal terms, was obliged to employ riflemen. They remained unknown among English troops until the necessity for them was called forth by the war of American independence. It is contended that we owed our defeat in North America not to our want of discipline, or to any deficiency of the courage which has gained us so high a name in other countries, but solely to the superiority of the early training of the young America. The rifle was necessary to the existence of the backwoodsmen, and when they had the advantage of cover the troops could not stand before them. England was at first behind to go to Hesse, to Hanover, and to Denmark for riflemen to bring against the Americans; and in 1794 the Government established the 60th battalion of Rifles, which was called the Royal American Regiment. Our first riflemen carried a mallet, with which to hammer down the ball; and the rifleman was so long in loading that it was necessary the red coats should be near that he might take refuge behind them while he loaded. The Duke of Richmond once said that in the Peninsular war our riflemen were supplied with tight-fitting bullets that would kill and plenty of small ones that would miss, in order that they might have the pleasure of shooting off. It was at length discovered that the musket supplied to the English infantry was the worst in Europe—the heaviest, the shortest, requiring the largest ball, the greatest charge of powder, having the greatest windage, the shortest range, and the least accuracy. It showed what the English soldier must be when he could gain such splendid victories with Brown Bess. The Kaffir war was irksome and inglorious, and public attention became attracted to the shortcoming of our firearms. General Cathcart was sent out to the Cape with a carte blanche, and what did he ask for? He said to the Government at home, 'Send me out 4000 Swiss.' He wanted soldiers who could hit small objects at long ranges. Brown Bess was clearly unable to bring the war to a close, for it was upon record that one morning 80,000 rounds of ball cartridge were fired, and only 25 Kaffirs were bagged. George IV. was very anxious that the cuirass should be adopted in the British army, and that experiments should be tried to show whether it would resist a bullet. A cuirass was accordingly fixed upon a pole and Brown Bess was set to work at it, with the advantage of a 'rest.' The experiment would have been very satisfactory, only none of the balls could be persuaded to hit the cuirass. At last an officer put a musket to his shoulder, and by great good luck hit the cuirass, when the ball of course went through it. He believed that a man might sit in a chair, at 200 yards, and let a man blaze away at him all day with Brown Bess, with one condition only, that the shooter should be bound upon his honour to aim at the mark. A general officer told him that in Spain, being charged with the defence of a breastwork thrown up in a hurry, with a very few soldiers, the order was given to them to fire as rapidly as possible, not in any hope or intention of hitting anybody, but to make the enemy think they were stronger than they actually were. Firing to 'make the enemy think!' Contrast this with what took place during the mutiny at Cawnpore. An officer in command of his company was attacked by some sowars (irregular native cavalry). He formed his men into two lines, made both kneel, and at the word 'Fire!' 69 dragoons fell to the ground like a wall. One man alone escaped the fire, seeing which a soldier came to the front, fired, and brought the sowar from his horse at a distance of 300 yards. That was the way to 'make an enemy think.' Our troops were now all armed with the Enfield rifle, which was the best rifle made, which in similar numbers had been placed in the hands of any army. By contrast and comparison with Brown Bess it was a weapon of transcendant value and superiority. Upon the beach at Hythe one day, when Sir John Burgoyne was present, a target was put up, 8 feet by 6 feet, upon which was outlined the figure of a man on horseback. A detachment of 32 men was formed in line at 600 yards distance, who lodged three balls in the horse and two in the man before an officer could get a glass to his eye. Sir John Burgoyne, when he saw this, exclaimed, 'No dragoon can stand before you, and no artillery can stand before you unless it is protected.' But a new gun required a new man. Men must be taught to shoot as they were trained in any other skilled calling. What was wanted was that all the men in a regiment should be taught to shoot, as all the dragoons in a regiment were taught to ride. In the Government School of Musketry shooting was taught as a drill, without ball at all. There was 'aiming drill' and 'position drill,' and he strongly insisted upon the necessity of commencing rifle practice by snapping caps and firing blank cartridge. To begin with firing ball cartridge was fatal. The volunteer who did so would never become a good shot, for he would only perpetuate his errors. If there were any sportsmen who wanted to improve their shooting, let them go through a course of 'position drill,' then let them fire blank cartridges at swallows or other small birds, and he would promise them that when the 1st of September came round, they would fire half as well again. He had never fired a ball until he was 56 years of age, and for a long time he could not get into the first class. He used to miss 18 shots out of 20, but he persevered, and one day he got 19 points in the first class (650 to 900 yards). The next drill was 'aiming drill.' The eye might be strengthened by exercise, and it was desirable to shoot at smaller objects than a rifleman would ordinarily require to hit. 'Aiming drill' at 500 yards with blank cartridge was excellent training. The ball cartridge merely gave you the power to find out if you could shoot, and what progress you were making. With this exception marksmen learned nothing with ball cartridge. An important part of a rifleman's training was the ability to judge distances. It was not at first easy, but it could be learnt. There were certain distances at which horses seemed to have no ears—when flesh could not be discerned, when men seemed to have no necks, when cannon wheels had no spokes, and when all horses seemed to be of one colour. Savages could judge of distances with great accuracy, and the faculty only required to be cultivated. The gallant colonel then proceeded to explain by means of diagrams the line of sight, the line of fire, and the trajectory of the Enfield rifle. The whole difficulty in firing bullets was that they were always travelling through the air at a curve, so that at long ranges it was necessary literally to drop them on a man's head. Armed with the Enfield rifle, no infantry soldiers ever need form a square to resist cavalry, unless surprised. The cavalry might come down upon them, but not a man would escape the aim of their rifles. They talked of the 'common soldier,' but we did not want the 'common soldier' in these days. What was wanted was a taught, educated, and trained man. Some persons said that a range of 400 yards was long enough for the bulk of our troops, but if one soldier had a gun that would kill at 1000 yards the man whose rifle would only carry 400 yards would not be able to get a single shot at his enemy. The only limit to the range of a gun was the power of the human eye. You might get a longer range by increasing the charge of powder and the weight of the gun, but the rifle then kicked, and where the recoil was great there was an end of accurate shooting. The weight of a gun was also an important consideration, for an infantry soldier required a weapon that he could carry in a 25 miles' march and fight with afterwards. How, then, was a long range to be obtained? The resistance of the air to any object in motion was in proportion to the magnitude of its surface. In artillery the 68lb. ball, with a charge of 16lb. of powder, was at present the most accurate of aim, but in firearms the whole secret of extended range was in narrowing the bore. The Whitworth rifle was constructed on this principle, and at 900 yards' range the bullet from this rifle was going three times as fast as the Enfield. The greater the elevation a rifle required the more skill was wanted to drop the bullet down just where it would hit. It followed that the worse a soldier was the better his gun ought to be, and that the best guns ought to be given to the worst shots. Firing with the Enfield rifle at 800 or 900 yards he often missed the target twice out of five, and sometimes four times out of five, but with the Whitworth rifle he could hit it directly. Mr. Whitworth's rifle possessed the very great advantage of having a low trajectory, and the Enfield rifle the disadvantage of having a very high one. Now it might be laid down as a rule in rifle shooting that the certainty of hitting was just in proportion to the lowness of the angle of elevation. He had heard that the trajectory in the Swiss Federal rifle was very low. Perhaps it would be more correct to say that the improvement made of late years in the rifle was not so much in the barrel as in the back. He came there to assure them that accurate shooting could be acquired after a little drill, in a pleasurable manner, if they would only go to work in the same painstaking way as the volunteers who had recently been at Hythe. Had England as a nation nothing to defend? Had we not an excellent Sovereign, a glorious Constitution, an open Bible, free thoughts, and a free press? Was it not a country in which no passports were required, and in which every man's cottage was his castle? With such liberties and wealth to defend the Volunteer Rifle Corps must become a national institution. It was not a thing of to-day or to-morrow, and he would have nothing to do with the movement if he did not think that our grandchildren would maintain it. Our soil had been unpolluted by the foot of an invader for 800 years, and in the words of Lord Brougham he would make it an impossibility for an enemy to invade us. If they made the attempt and succeeded in landing, the riflemen in our hedges would, under the blessing of God, prove the salvation of our land. Let the men of England rally round the Queen that she might remain the monarch of a free and united people, a 'terror to evil-doers, and the praise of them that do well.' Most heartily did he say to the volunteers of England, the members of the true Peace League, 'I wish you good luck in the name of the Lord.'"

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN. — The council of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science have appointed a committee to consider and report on the best means which the association can adopt to assist the present movement for increasing the industrial employment of women. The committee consists of the Earl of Shaftesbury, the Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P., Mr. E. Akroyd, Mr. Hastings, Mr. Horace Mann, Mr. W. S. Cookson, Mrs. Jameson, Miss Parkes, Miss Adelaide Proctor, Miss Boucherett, Miss Faithful, and Miss Craig, the latter acting as secretary.

REORGANISATION OF WOOLWICH ARSENAL.—It is announced that Government have decided to put an end to the dangerous anomaly of having only one national war laboratory and arsenal, and that one close to the metropolis; and that a new arsenal is forthwith to be established at some place in one of the inland counties, having the advantage of a position that shall oppose, not only distance, but strategical difficulties to the attack of a hostile force. It is thought that Weedon, from its central situation, its facility of communication with all the ports, by railway and telegraph, and its convenient position, in the heart of the iron and coal districts, will be the place selected. It is also understood that the management of the new arsenal will be committed to civilians instead of military men. The first step towards this reorganisation has been taken by handing over the direction of the gun factories from the military to the civil service, to be conducted in future under Sir W. Armstrong, C.B., and the resident superintendence of Mr. John Anderson, late inspector of machinery. Great preparations are making for manufacturing rifled ordnance on Sir William's principle, calculated, according to present arrangements, to bring out, at the lowest computation, 1000 guns a year, with the prospect of a considerable addition to that number, in case of actual demand. These guns are not finished at Woolwich but are sent to Elswick to be completed, a regulation having been established to manufacture a portion only at each of the factories, in order to insure a greater degree of caution in guarding the secret of the principle from the public. The War Department have issued a most stringent order for the exclusion of every person, without exception, from visiting the factories. As a proof of the strictness with which the injunctions are observed, it may be stated that a few days ago the members of the Royal Defence Commission requested permission to visit the establishment. Their request was telegraphed to Pall Mall, and a reply was promptly received, to the effect "that Mr. Secretary Herbert regretted that the regulations could not be departed from even in that peculiar instance." A similar denial was a few days ago given to the application for admission of General Dacres, commanding the garrison at Woolwich. It is stated that, as a necessary consequence of the whole of the gun factories being employed for the manufacture of Sir W. Armstrong's guns, the shot and shell foundries and the superintendence of the laboratory will be ultimately handed over to the same direction, which will create a reduction of no small importance in the general expenditure.

THE BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY LAWS.—A deputation of considerable importance as affecting the commercial interests waited upon Lord Palmerston on Tuesday to represent the present unsatisfactory state of the bankruptcy laws and suggest a remedy—the more especially in the reduction of expenses and the more stringent punishment of fraudulent debtors. Sir John Ramsden, Mr. Hastings, of the Worcester Chamber of Commerce, Mr. S. Morley, Mr. Hadfield, M.P., Mr. Miller, M.P., and other members of the deputation urged that this was a commercial and not a legal question, and said that they were disposed to give an almost unanimous support to the Bill which on two occasions has been introduced by Lord John Russell. Lord Palmerston assured the deputation that the subject had engaged the attention of the Cabinet; and the Attorney-General, who attended with his lordship, stated that in conjunction with a committee of the Cabinet he had been entrusted with the preparation of a Bill which it is intended to introduce immediately upon the meeting of Parliament. It is understood that it is the intention of her Majesty's Ministers to abolish the distinction between traders and non-traders, and to limit imprisonment for debt, except in cases of fraud, concealment of property, mutilation of books, absconding, and other offences which in reality belong to the category of penal offences.

THE LATE CASE OF FLOGGING AT WOOLWICH.—The recruit William Davis, whose flogging at Woolwich was recently the subject of comment, and who deserted from the artillery on his release from the hospital, has been officially discharged from the regiment.

BIRD SHOW AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.—A bird show of a very extensive kind was opened on Saturday at the Crystal Palace, and was continued during the first three days of this week. There were in all more than 400 cages, containing about 500 birds of various kinds. The collection of canaries was most numerous, including specimens of every known variety, and the larger birds—parrots, cockatoos, macaws, &c.—were present in considerable force.

ST. GEORGE'S-IN-THE-EAST.—On Sunday last there was a renewal of the riots in the parish church, and one gentleman, who gave his name as Mr. William Cornwallis, was taken into custody by the police, charged for wilfully disturbing the congregation. There was considerable uproar and hissing during the different services, but the rector's party assembled in sufficient strength to overpower the voices of the malcontents during the choral services. There was a large body of police on duty, but their presence seemed to exasperate rather than intimidate the people. At the close of the services the clergymen and choristers managed to get away without being insulted. Mr. Cornwallis was brought up on Monday to the Thames Police Court, when in consideration of his having been locked up for eight hours the magistrate discharged him on making an apology to the churchwarden, telling him at the same time that he had been guilty of brawling in the church, for which he was liable to ecclesiastical censure and the payment of heavy costs. A man named Arnott was afterwards fined 5*s.* for being drunk and disorderly in the church in the afternoon while the Rev. Hugh Allen was officiating. On Thursday evening at a vestry meeting of the parish, it was unanimously resolved that the rector be called upon to resign his office, on the ground that he has lost the confidence of the parish by his obstinate perseverance in carrying out a form of worship distasteful to the parishioners.

METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.—At a meeting of this Board held on Friday at Guildhall a discussion of several hours took place on a report of a committee of the whole Board, affecting the relations of the Board with the clerk, Mr. Woolrych, and incidentally the interests of the ratepayers at large. The report of the committee, after stating that the salary of the clerk—originally 800*l.*—was now 1000*l.*, and that he was bound to devote the whole of his time and attention to the service of the Board, recommended that Mr. Woolrych be appointed legal adviser and standing counsel of the Board, in accordance with a letter he had addressed to them, at a salary of 800*l.* a year as a retaining fee for his services; that after fulfilling his engagements to the Board as defined in the report, he should be at liberty to practise as a barrister; and that in all cases in which he should hold briefs as counsel of the Board in the superior courts, before Parliamentary committees, arbitrators, and the like, he should receive the usual professional fee upon his brief, the arrangement to take effect on the appointment of the new clerk. Mr. Bristow, M.P., having moved the adoption of the report, Mr. Deputy Harrison moved an amendment to refer the report back for re-consideration, as by its adoption the Board would be establishing a principle that would prejudicially interfere with the due transaction of the public business, and creating an office at present unknown to that or any District Board established under the Local Management Act, expressly for the purpose of providing a place for an individual, and also establishing a principle subversive of public good by giving the proposed legal adviser a direct pecuniary interest in promoting litigation by the Board. A long and desultory discussion ensued, in which Mr. Doulton, Mr. Freeman, Mr. Lowman Taylor, Mr. Diffanger, Mr. Leslie, Mr. Savage, Mr. Crellin, Mr. Bennet, and other members took part, the result being the adoption of the original motion on a division, by a large majority, only three voting for the amendment. A motion proposed by Mr. Savage and supported by Mr. Nicholay, to reduce the salary from 800*l.* to 600*l.*, was negatived on a division by 24 to 10.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL SPECIAL SERVICES.—It is found impossible to commence the special services at St. Paul's before the 1st of January next, on which day it is expected that they will be opened with a sermon by the Lord Bishop of London.

THE STRIKE.—At the Middlesex sessions on Tuesday, the magistrates dismissed the appeal of William Perham, the mason, against the conviction of Mr. Corrie, the police magistrate, and ordered him to be committed for two months to the House of Correction, the sentence passed upon him for threatening and intimidating one of Messrs. Piper's workmen. An application was made on Wednesday to the Court of Queen's Bench for a writ of habeas corpus, with a view to quash the conviction, but the Court refused to grant it. An appeal against this decision was made on Thursday to the Court of Exchequer, and after hearing the case argued, the Court reserved its judgment until yesterday, when the Lord Chief Baron said that in the opinion of the Court the magistrate's conviction was sufficient, and there would therefore be no rule. The conviction was therefore affirmed.—The masons' committee have submitted to the Master Builders' Association the following proposal as the basis of a settlement:—

"Gentlemen,—We have the pleasure of forwarding you propositions for the final adjustment of the existing dispute:—1. The masons are prepared to resume work on the same terms as when 'locked out' in August 6. 2. The masters to dispense with the declaration. 3. The masons are willing to resume work with those of their own trade or others who may have accepted the declaration. 4. The masons will work in strict conformity with the law of the land. 5. The masons of London are willing to enter into a discussion of their bye-laws, to be represented by six masons with six employers, and should the masters and the operatives not agree to the satisfaction of both parties upon any point at issue, the matter to be decided by a chairman selected from the following gentlemen:—Sir Charles Barry, Mr. P. C. Hardwick, Mr. Digby Wyatt, Mr. J. Vulliamy, Mr. G. G. Scott, and Mr. W. Butterfield. 6. The masons of London wish it to be distinctly understood that they have withdrawn from the Conference, and that they give up the strike at Trollope's for the nine hours, it being considered by them useless to contend longer upon that question. 7. Several attempts having failed to bring about a reconciliation with the master builders (for all parties) we respectfully solicit the employers to dispense with the declaration from the masons.—Signed on behalf of the masons of London."

LOSS OF THE SHIP DUKE OF WELLINGTON BY FIRE.—The ship Duke of Wellington, of Liverpool, was burnt at sea on the 11th inst., about 200 miles to the westward of Cape Finisterre. She was a full-rigged ship of 1091 tons, belonging to Messrs. Lemon, and commanded by Captain John Campbell. The fire broke out at 5 o'clock in the morning on the 11th inst., and spread with such rapidity that it was impossible to save the ship's log or papers. The captain and crew took to the boats with the few articles of clothing and provisions which could be obtained, and remained close to the ship till evening, when she was burnt nearly to the water's edge. They then proceeded in the direction of Cape Finisterre, and after being in the boats 48 hours were picked up by the French schooner Idée of Nantes, Captain Lesquelee, by whom they were received on board, treated with great kindness, and conveyed to Lisbon.

THE WRECK OF THE ROYAL CHARTER.—The adjourned inquiry of the Board of Trade has been resumed this week at Liverpool and is still in progress, the present object of the inquiry being to ascertain whether the ship was constructed on safe principles and properly managed. The body of the unfortunate Captain Withers was washed ashore at Bull Bay on Thursday week. The face and hands were much disfigured. All his clothes were on except his coat. In the pockets were found a gold watch and chain, two gold seals, 36*l.* in gold, and a silver snuff-box bearing the inscription—"Presented by the passengers of the ship Gloucester to Captain Withers, Nov. 7, 1838." The body of Mr. John Emery, the chief steward of the vessel, was picked up last week about 15 miles N.E. of Holyhead and carried into Drogheda, where it was identified by one of the survivors of the wreck. On Tuesday week two bags of sovereigns, supposed to contain 500*l.* each, and a lot of gold, were brought up from the wreck. Near the point to the westward a male body was found with 17*l.* 13*s.* 7½*d.*, two mourning rings, a small clasp, and a piece of foreign coin. Another body was washed ashore with 17*l.*, three gold rings, three breast pins, and two pairs of earrings in a belt. About 39 bodies have since been found of which the following only have been identified:—Francis F. Hutton, saloon passenger; F. Rufford, passenger; David Bell, Anthony Belt, Captain James Morris, Mrs. Norman, Dr. Hatch, Mr. Edwin Fowler, and Mr. M. W. Pitcher. 1200 sovereigns were recovered on Tuesday evening from the wreck, and as the lump has fast hold of a large piece of the wreck, just over the bullion room, it is expected that a large quantity of gold will be recovered.

SMITHFIELD MARKET.—It is stated that Sir George Lewis has given his consent to the conversion of the north side of Smithfield into a dead meat market.

SPIRITUAL DESTITUTION IN THE METROPOLIS.—A large meeting was held at the Assembly Rooms, Ealing, on Monday evening to afford an opportunity to the laity of conferring with the Bishop of London upon the spiritual wants of the diocese. The Bishop presided, and the meeting having been addressed at some length by his lordship, the Right Hon. S. Walpole, M.P., Archdeacon Sinclair, Captain Sullivan, and other gentlemen, resolutions were adopted pledging the meeting to co-operate with the Bishop in promoting and expanding the parochial system throughout the diocese, and declaring that the spiritual destitution in portions of the rural deanery of Ealing is such as to require immediate erections, and providing for the establishment of a ruridecanal association, consisting of the clergy and laity of the district.

CAPTURE OF A KAFFIR IN HIGHGATE WOODS.—A Kaffir, in a very wild state, and who cannot speak one word of English, was captured on Tuesday morning in Highgate Woods, where he had made a cave and was roasting a sheep which he had stolen. The police received information of his proceedings on Sunday evening, and immediately commenced searching the woods, assisted by a number of the inhabitants, but as soon as he saw the people he darted into a thick part of the wood, and his movements were so nimble that he was more like a wild monkey than a man, and it was very difficult to get near him. It was not till Tuesday morning that he was secured, and after a hard struggle taken to the station. In addition to having stolen the sheep he had also stolen a quantity of articles of clothing. The prisoner when taken before the magistrates on Wednesday behaved in a very wild manner, and was remanded for further inquiry.

POISONING WITH BELLADONNA.—At the Bow Street Police Court on Wednesday three little boys, two of them 10 years old and the other 12, were charged with stealing from Covent Garden Market about 12 oz. of belladonna, and administering it to divers others boys, whereby their lives were endangered. It appeared that Messrs. Butler & McCulloch, the herbalists and seedsmen, had packed a hamper, containing two jars of belladonna, to be sent into the country to a customer, and that while it was standing at their door waiting for the carrier, the prisoners, who were well known-market thieves, cut the strings and stole the jar, believing that they had got some honey or a preparation of liquorice, which they then sold to other boys for a pin each. In the course of the evening, several of the boys who had eaten the extract were sent to the hospitals in a raving state, and some of them are still lying in Charing Cross and Middlesex Hospitals in a very dangerous condition. The magistrate remanded the prisoners for a few days, to see if any of the boys died, and expressed his intention to send them to Feltham Reformatory, if they should not be removed from his jurisdiction by the verdict of a coroner's inquest.

MURDERS ON THE HIGH SEAS.—The Sheriffs of London and Middlesex have received a further respite, until the 26th December next, for the Portuguese convict under sentence of death in Newgate. A seaman called Francis Boland, belonging to the ship Medina, was committed for trial on Thursday at the Thames Police Court, for the Wilful Murder of Edward Hyland, another seaman, in Lagos Roads on the coast of Africa, on the 11th of July last.

REMOVAL OF DR. SMETHURST.—On Tuesday morning Dr. Smethurst was removed in a cab by the governor of Horsemonger Lane gaol to Newgate; there to await his trial for bigamy at the forthcoming sessions of the Central Criminal Court. His looks are said to have much improved since the announcement of his pardon.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the low temperature which commenced on the 9th inst., and continued during 11 days, caused the deaths in London to rise in the week ending Saturday the 19th inst., from 1051, the number returned in the previous week, to 1233. In the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1849-58 the average number was 1114; which, if raised in proportion to the increase of population, will become 1225. The mortality of last week therefore agreed very closely with the result obtained from calculation. During the week the births of 958 boys and 902 girls—in all 1860 children—were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1849-58 the average number was 1526.

Provincial.

GLOUCESTER.—The Election Commissions held a sitting on Thursday in one of the committee-rooms of the House of Commons. Sir R. W. Carden, Sir W. G. Hayter, Mr. Moffatt, M.P., and other witnesses were examined, after which the proceedings were again adjourned.

HULL.—The ship Friends, Captain Turner, has arrived in this port with 180 pieces of cannon and 237 tons of bones from Sebastopol. Some excitement was at first caused by a question which had been raised whether these were the bones of the Russian or the allied [illegible] or the bones of horses and of other animals [illegible] perished in the siege. The agents of the ship, however, state that they are the bones of animals, and that every precaution has been taken by the authorities to secure an immediate report in case of any human bones being found during the discharge of the vessels, but no other interference has been found necessary.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—On Saturday last a [illegible] meeting of the leading inhabitants of this town and the neighbouring counties of Durham and Northumberland was held in the new Town Hall, to consider the best mode of testifying their respect for the memory of the late Mr. Robert Stephenson. Lord Ravensworth presided, and the meeting was addressed by Mr. G. Ridley, M.P., the Hon. H. G. Liddell, M.P., Mr. Clayton, Mayor of Tynemouth, Rev. Dr. Bruce, and other gentlemen, and resolutions were unanimously adopted to the effect that the best mode of testifying respect to the memory of Mr. Stephenson would be to erect a statue of him in Newcastle, and devote a portion of the funds subscribed to educational purposes. A committee was appointed to carry the resolutions into effect.

NORWICH.—The magistrates of this city were occupied last week with hearing a charge brought by the Liberals in the borough against Mr. Albert J. Collins, a solicitor, for unlawfully conspiring with Mr. Henry Croxford and other persons to corrupt by a bribe of 500*l.* Mr. Joel Fox, a member of the Liberal party, to induce him to vote for eight Conservative aldermen with a view to obtain a Conservative majority in the Town Council for the next three years. Mr. Fox refused to entertain the offer until the halves of the notes for 300*l.* and the numbers of the remainder were given to him. Messrs. Collins and Croxford after consulting together complied with this condition, and after receiving the notes Mr. Fox went to the Council chamber where the election of aldermen was about to take place, and after publicly exhibiting the half-notes voted for the eight Liberal aldermen who were elected. After evidence to this effect had been given by several witnesses, Mr. Harvey, the banker, and one of his clerks who had been summoned to give evidence as to the payment of the notes, refused to answer any question on the subject lest their answers might criminate them. After some discussion on this point the magistrates adjourned the inquiry, admitting Mr. Collins to bail in two sureties of 250*l.* each, and himself in 500*l.* Mr. Croxford is stated to have left Norwich. On the resumption of the inquiry on Tuesday, Mr. Sergeant Ballantine, who appeared for the defence, applied for a further adjournment to the 8th December, on the ground that since the first hearing summonses had been issued against other parties in reference to the Parliamentary election, the whole of which had been adjourned to that day. After some discussion the magistrates acceded to the application and the case was accordingly postponed to December 8. The summonses referred to as having been granted since this case was first made public have been issued, at the instance of the Conservatives, against Mr. William Wilde, Mr. William Wilde, jun., Mr. William George Wilde, Mr. James Stowes, and Sir William Foster, Bart., for a conspiracy to bribe at the last election; and at the instance of the Liberals against Sir Samuel Bignold, his two sons—the Rev. S. F. Bignold, rector of Twetshall, Mr. J. H. Bignold, Captain Ferdinand Ives, Mr. James Hardy, and Mr. George Priest, who are all charged with conspiring to effect Sir S. Bignold's election in April last by bribery and improper means. All these gentlemen are persons of more or less influence in the Conservative ranks. Opinions vary as to whether the summonses will really be proceeded with on the day named. The general impression seems to be that the object of the postponement is to enable the parties concerned to gain time, with a view to a compromise. It does not seem probable that the whole truth will be known in reference to bribery in Norwich until the appointment of a Royal Commission.

PORTSMOUTH.—The officers appointed to investigate the recent outbreak on board the Princess Royal concluded their labours on Saturday, and forwarded their report to the Admiralty. A court-martial has since been ordered to be held next week for the trial of the ringleaders. It is stated that several of her crew have been recognised as old acquaintances in Portsmouth dockyard, where they have worn quite a different uniform to the one they at present appear in.

STURMINSTER.—The Spaniard Manzano, who was apprehended last week at Hyde near Southampton, on suspicion of being the murderer of Mrs. Trowbridge, at Ashcombe, has been identified by several persons as having been seen in the neighbourhood at the time of the murder, and as having sold portions of the property stolen from the cottage. The stains found upon his clothes have also been ascertained by Mr. Herapath to be spots of blood. The magistrates have thereupon committed the prisoner for trial at the next assizes on the charge of Wilful Murder.

WAKEFIELD.—The inquiry of the Election Commissioners, which was to have been resumed in London on Monday last, has been again further adjourned to Friday, the 23d of December, when it will be resumed in this town.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—On Friday night a destructive accident occurred at the extensive iron works of Messrs. Gibbs Brothers, at Deepfields, near this town, by which a large iron rolling mill was levelled with the ground, one man killed, and several others severely injured. Most of the workmen had gone to supper, and others had ceased work whilst some alteration was making in the rollers, when suddenly the large driving-wheel, some tons in weight, broke into fragments, which were propelled on all sides with great force. Several of the iron pillars that supported the roof, the principal iron beam, and several of the lesser ones, were broken, and the entire roof shortly afterwards fell down. Of the men who were in the mill at the time, one was dug out insensible, and died shortly afterwards. Three others sustained severe fractures and other injuries, and two or three escaped unhurt. The damage is estimated at about 3000*l*.

Ireland.

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY.—Dr. Cullen and 28 of the Roman Catholic bishops in Ireland have issued a "pastoral" adopted at the recent meeting of the prelates, stating that Protestant universities are not suited for a Catholic people, and that in order not to expose them farther to the danger to which they would be liable in Protestant or mixed Colleges or Universities, it has become necessary for the Catholic body to subscribe liberally for the permanent maintenance of the Catholic University and support the movement for obtaining a charter of incorporation.

THE PREMIER AND DR. M'HALE.—The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Tuam has addressed a letter to Lord Palmerston upon mixed education, the Italian difficulty, the Established Church and tenant right. The following extracts will indicate its general character:—

"It is in vain that you calculate on the Pope's defenceless position and his want of the material muniments of war. His weakness is his strength, and, though entitled to defensive armour, he prefers not being encumbered with the sword or the buckler. He fights with weapons of a different kind, whose temper has already singularly told since the commencement of this contest. His confidence is in the prayers which released the first and greatest of his predecessors from prison. You may perceive how society is now agitated to its depths by the sympathies and supplications of his children all over Christendom. The most callous nations have partaken of the impulse. Even those who sided with opposing armies in the late battle-fields have poured their united prayers into one common channel for the safety of the successor of St. Peter. No sooner has the perfidious blow been aimed at their common father than its echo has been sent back from the most distant parts of the Christian world. Thousands who were hitherto mute and silent have uttered their loud reprobation of the cruelty with which he is treated, and, like the dumb and dutiful youth in ancient story, whose tongue was loosened by the horror of the attempted parricide, the voices of millions have broken forth at the tenour of the indignities heaped on the Holy Father, proclaiming in intelligible accents that the most revered monarch in the universe shall not be dethroned. Whilst we sympathise with the sufferings of the Holy Father and reprobate the tyrannies that are striving to overturn his legitimate power, we cannot forget or overlook the systematic oppression to which our own people are continually subjected. If the secure possession of property be the strongest and most expressive feature that distinguishes civilised from savage life, it is not easy to understand what claims to the extension of civilisation can be possessed by any government that leaves the land, the industry, and the tenements (if tenements such precarious dwellings can be called) of an entire people, together with the fruits of that industry, as much at the mercy of a landlord as any wandering tribe was ever at the beck of a barbarous chieftain."

COAST DEFENCES IN IRELAND.—The Belfast Harbour Commissioners have received a letter from the War Office stating that measures will be shortly taken for preparing Carrickfergus Castle to receive an armament of heavy guns for the protection of Belfast Lough, and for the security of the anchorage of Carrickfergus Roads, and that early in the ensuing year, so soon as the season will permit, it is contemplated to undertake works for defending the mouth of the Belfast river against an enemy's approach.

THE PACKET STATION AT QUEENSTOWN.—In accordance with the arrangement already announced, the Cunard steamers now call regularly at Queenstown for the mails and passengers for Halifax and Boston, and the Australian packets belonging to the firm of Messrs. Baines & Co. are in future to call at Queenstown on their home voyage to land mails and passengers. Arrangements are also making for the New York mails to be forwarded through Queenstown, as well as the Canadian and Australian mails.

Railways.

ACCIDENT ON THE SOUTH WESTERN.—During the fog of Tuesday, the morning Express from Waterloo ran into a goods train which was shunting at the Fleetpond Station in order to allow it to pass. The engine of the Express, worth upwards of 2000*l*. was broken to pieces, the tender and guard's van were destroyed, as were likewise several trucks of the goods train. The passengers were severely shaken, and many of them were more or less bruised, but fortunately no lives were lost.

SOUTH EASTERN AND EAST KENT LINES.—It is reported that committees of directors of the South-Eastern and East Kent lines met on Wednesday and agreed to recommend to their respective Boards to consider the expediency of arranging terms of amalgamation.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE NORTH LONDON.—On Saturday a long inquiry took place before the coroner for East Middlesex, respecting the death of Miss Mary Brown, a single lady of independent means, aged 84, residing in the Avenue Road, Bow, who lost her life last week on the North London line. The body of the deceased was shockingly mutilated, the back and abdomen being extensively cut by the steps of the carriages striking her. Two of the ribs were broken, the skull fractured, and her spine dislocated, in addition to other injuries. The evidence proved that the deceased lady intended to get out at the Bow station, but some delay occurred in consequence of her inability to open the window of the carriage. When the door was opened, and while her foot was on the carriage step the train started. One of the passengers made great efforts to pull her back, and finding that to be impossible called to a porter on the platform, who ran up and tried to catch her in his arms. As the train had now gained speed they were both thrown down and dragged along the platform by the steps catching her clothes, until they fell upon the permanent way, the porter as well as deceased sustaining severe injuries. The jury, after a brief deliberation, returned a verdict—

"That deceased met with her death on the North London Railway by a train being set in motion without sufficient care being taken by the company's servants in seeing after the security of the passengers before starting; and that the coroner be directed to communicate with the company, pointing out the defective state of some of the carriage windows."

NEW CITY LINE.—The necessary Parliamentary notices have been given this week with reference to a new railway through the northern part of the City to connect the Great Northern line with a large and convenient terminus close to the Bank of England. It will pass by the side of Gray's Inn Road to a station at Gray's Inn; thence by a viaduct across Holborn valley to Smithfield; thence near Barbican, with a goods station at Fore Street, and so across London Wall to a large available area at the back of Tokenhouse Yard, within 340 feet of the Bank. The route which is brought forward with the concurrence of the Great Northern Board will be above ground through the whole distance, and will pass amid poor property, the removal of which will be an advantage to the metropolis, while its main recommendation consists in its direct advance to the grand centre of business, thereby supplying the long-desired relief for the London streets.

Obituary.

THE HON. MOUNTSTUART ELPHINSTONE died on Sunday last at his residence, Hookwood Park, near Limpsfield, Surrey. He was the son of the 11th Lord Elphinstone, and was formerly in the civil service of the East India Company at Bengal. He retired from that service in 1827, and acquired considerable literary reputation for his work on Cabul.

PROFESSOR LAWRIE, M.D., Professor of Surgery in the University of Glasgow, died a few days since at the Bridge of Allan, after a long illness. He was son of the Rev. Dr. Archibald Lawrie, of London (the friend of Burns), and practised his profession for some years in the Madras Presidency, where he contracted the disease which has now proved fatal. He succeeded the late Dr. Burns in the Professorship at Glasgow in 1830.

PROFESSOR GEORGE WILSON, M.D., the first Professor of Technology in the University of Edinburgh and Regius Keeper of the Industrial Museum, died on Tuesday last after a long illness from pulmonary disease. He was an accomplished chemist as well as an elegant scholar, and he was highly esteemed as a graceful lecturer and writer.

MR. FRANK STONE, A.R.A., died on the 18th inst. at his residence, Russell House, Tavistock Square. METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, Nov. 21.

We have a large supply of Beasts, yet the finest qualities are not much more plentiful, and late prices are fully supported. The number of Sheep is rather smaller, but a large supply to the dead markets causes a slow trade here, and prices on the average are scarcely as good as on Monday last. No alteration in the Calf trade. From Germany and Holland there are 920 Beasts, 4350 Sheep, and 96 Calves; from Scotland, 80 Beasts; from Ireland, 700; Norfolk and Suffolk, 100; and 1700 from the northern and midland counties.

THURSDAY, Nov. 24.

We have a shorter supply of Beasts, especially of choice qualities; consequently best descriptions readily make Monday's quotations, otherwise trade is dull. The number of Sheep is very small, yet it exceeds the demand. Trade is dull for Calves at lower prices. From Germany and Holland there are 305 Beasts, 770 Sheep, and 174 Calves, from the northern and midland counties, 400 Beasts; and 130 Milch Cows from the home counties.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, Nov. 21.

The supply of Wheat from Essex to this morning's market was moderate, from Kent small; and having no distant buyers the town millers were disinclined to purchase excepting at a decline of 1s. per qr. upon last week's quotations, which factors being unwilling to accept few sales had been effected towards the close of the market. In foreign scarcely any business was transacted, and prices remain nominally as before. Finest malting Barley brings the prices of this day se'nnight, but secondary qualities are very unsaleable and rather cheaper. Beans bring an advance of 1s. to 2s. per qr. Peas are unaltered in value. The Oat trade is quiet, and sales are slow at the rates of this day week. In the value of Flour there is no alteration.

FRIDAY, Nov. 25.

During the past week, with the exception of several very foggy days, the weather has been fine, and the latter day or two milder. The excitement in the grain trade had attained its height last week, and has since subsided. During the present business in Wheat has been dull and inactive in nearly every market of the kingdom, and there are few in which purchases could not have been made at fully 1s. per qr. decline. The value of Spring Corn has been better supported, but with a less active business. The demand for Flour has also fallen off, and caused the sale to be dull. From the Baltic c. f. and i. we have scarcely heard of a transaction, and our latest advices intimate that the navigation of the Russian and German ports appeared to be on the point of closing. The arrivals from Southern Europe this week continue to be small, but an increase of the same is at hand; this trade has also been dull. The sales of arrived cargoes are confined to 2 of Ibrail Maize at 30s. 4½d. to 30s. 6d. per 480 lbs.; 1 of Odessa Oats at 19s. 1½d. per qr. imp., nett; and 1 of Marionopoli Linseed at 49s. per qr. delivered. The arrivals of foreign Barley are large, fair of Oats, and moderate of all other grain. The attendance at to-day's market was small, and the English Wheat left over from Monday was chiefly disposed of on Wednesday at rates unobtainable on the previous market day, and on the sales effected to-day Wednesday's prices were fully supported. Foreign Wheat is held with firmness at former rates, but business is limited. With the exception of grinding Barley, which is 1s. per qr. dearer, Spring Corn of all descriptions is quiet at Monday's prices.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday, Nov. 22.—We had a fair attendance of country millers and dealers at our Corn Exchange this morning, but the amount of business done in Wheat was only small, and that at a reduction of about 2d. per cental on Friday's rates. Flour had a fair inquiry, but tellers were obligod to give way 6d. per sack in most instances. Indian Corn declined 6d. per qr., with only a moderate business passing. Oats and Oatmeal were steady. Peas advanced 6d. to 1s. per qr. Beans and Barley brought full prices.

FRIDAY, Nov. 25.—Corn market languid; few sales in any articles, and prices in favour of buyers.

As the most efficient and fragant aromatic purifier of the breath, teeth, and gums ever known, ROWLANDS' Odonto has for a long series of years occupied a distinguished place at the toilets of the sovereigns of the nobility throughout Europe: while the general demand for it at once announces the favour in which it is universally held. Liebig, the celebrated Chemist, asserts that nitrogen is essential to the healthy action of the bile, and the great sustenance, and invigoration of the body. No stronger recommendation of Cocoa and Chocolate can therefore be given than the following statement:—Caffeine and Theine each contain only about 29 per cent., whilst Theobromine (or essence of Cocoa) contains upwards of 35 per cent. of nitrogen.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—BEWARE.—In low-lying districts and damp foggy situations diseases of the throat and chest always gain footing in November, and if the early symptoms proceed unchecked, diphtheria, quinsey, asthma, bronchitis, or consumption may result. All desirous of avoiding so serious a termination should have at hand the purifying Pills invented by Professor HOLLOWAY. These Pills should be taken freely, while the Ointment is energetically rubbed at least twice a day on the skin covering the organs unhealthily affected. A short use will work a favourable change. An immediate and very sensible diminution of the patient's sufferings will compensate for the trouble of rubbing, and daily improvement will encourage the afflicted vigorously to persevere till complete recovery is wrought.

RESERVE FORCE OF ROYAL NAVAL VOLUNTEERS.—HER MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT having with the Sanction of Parliament determined on establishing a Reserve Volunteer Force of Seamen trained to the Use of Arms:—

THIS IS TO GIVE NOTICE.

That any Seaman possessing the following qualifications may be enrolled as a Royal Naval Volunteer in the Reserve Force, and will thereupon be entitled to the advantages and be subject to the obligations mentioned below:—

QUALIFICATIONS FOR THE RESERVE.

1. A Volunteer must be a British Subject:
2. He must be free from infirmity:
3. He must not be over 35 years of age:
4. He must within the 10 years previous to his joining the Reserve have been five years at sea, one year of that time as an A.B.

ADVANTAGES OF THE RESERVE.

1. A Volunteer will at once receive an annual payment or retainer of 6*l.*, payable quarterly:
2. He will, if he fulfils his obligations and is in the Reserve the requisite time, receive a pension of not less than 12*l.* a year whenever he becomes incapacitated from earning a livelihood, or at 60 years of age, if not previously incapacitated:
3. He may elect either to take the whole pension himself, or to take a smaller pension for himself during his life, and to allow his wife a pension after his death, for the remainder of her life:
4. He will not, on account of belonging to the Reserve, forfeit any interest in any Friendly or Benefit Society:
5. His travelling expenses to and from the place of drill will, when necessary, be provided:
6. He will, during drill, receive, in addition to the retaining fee, the same pay, victualling, and allowances as a seaman of the Fleet according to his rating:
7. He will, if called out on actual service, receive the same pay, allowances, and victuals, and have the same prospect of promotion and prize money, as a continuous service seaman of the Fleet according to his rating, and he will on joining receive the same clothing, bedding, and mess traps:
8. He will, if wounded or injured in actual service, receive the same pension as a seaman in the Navy of the same rating:
9. He will be eligible to the Coast Guard Service and Greenwich Hospital:
10. He may quit the Reserve, if not at the time called out for actual service, at the end of every five years; he may also quit it when not called out, on paying back the retainers he has received; or, without payment, if he passes an examination as Master or Mate, and obtains bonâ fide employment as Master or Mate.

OBLIGATIONS OF THE RESERVE.

1. A Volunteer must attend drill for 28 days each year; he may do so, so far as the convenience of the public service will permit, at a time and place convenient to himself; but he cannot in any case take less than seven days' drill at any one time:
2. He must not, without special permission, proceed on a voyage that will occupy more than six months:
3. He must appear before some Shipping Master once in every six months, unless he has leave to be abroad longer, and he must report every change of residence and employment:
4. In order to earn a Pension he must continue in the Reserve as long as he is physically competent to serve, and he must also have been in the force 15 years if engaged above 30, or 20 years if engaged under 30. In reckoning this time actual service in the Fleet will count double:
5. Volunteers may be called upon for actual service in the Navy by Royal Proclamation. It is intended to exercise this power only when an emergency requires a sudden increase in the Naval Force of the country:
6. A Volunteer may in the first instance be called out for three years. If there is then actual war, and he is then serving in one of her Majesty's ships, he may be required to serve for two years longer; but for the additional two years he will receive 2*d.* a day additional pay:
7. Volunteers when on drill or actual service will be subject to Naval Discipline:
8. A Volunteer who fails to fulfil the obligations of the Reserve will forfeit his claim to Retainer and Pension, and if he fails to join when called out for actual service may be treated as a straggler or Deserter from the Navy.

THE INROLMENT WILL COMMENCE ON 1st JANUARY, 1860.

Full information and detailed condition may be obtained on application to the Shipping Master at any Port in the United Kingdom, or to the Officers of Customs in the Channel Islands and Isle of Man.

News of the Week.

THE official invitations from France and Austria were sent out on Tuesday to all the Powers who are to take part in the approaching Congress. It is understood in Paris that each Power will be represented by two Plenipotentiaries, the first to be a Minister specially appointed for that purpose, and the second to be the Minister accredited to the Court of the Tuileries. Lord PALMERSTON has been mentioned as the fittest statesman to represent England on this occasion as first Plenipotentiary; but it is not yet known whether he would be willing to undertake the duty. It is generally believed that the first sitting of the Congress will take place at the Hotel of the French Minister for Foreign Affairs on or about the 5th of January next.

Accounts from the Morocco coast inform us that a sharp engagement took place on the 25th ult. between the Spanish expeditionary force and the Moors, in which the latter sustained a heavy loss, and the Spaniards had 80 killed and 400 wounded. An engagement has also taken place between four French war steamers and the Moorish forts at the mouth of the river Tetuan. The commander of these forts having cannonaded the frigate St. Louis without any provocation, Admiral ROMAIN DESFOSSES, commanding the French fleet at Algesiras, proceeded with four steamers to the spot and destroyed the forts. The Admiral has since made "severe representations" on the subject to the Morocco Government, and it is said that the Governor of Tetuan has given satisfaction by ordering the arrest of the Moorish officer who committed the aggression.

From the United States we learn that the excitement in Virginia, arising out of the affair at Harper's Ferry, has been increased to an alarming extent by the outbreak of numerous incendiary fires in the neighbourhood of Charlestown, and by the general report that the incendiaries were the advance guard of a body of Abolitionists who were to come from the north and rescue BROWN and his confederates. Large bodies of troops were under arms at Richmond and Alexandria, and Charlestown itself was so strictly guarded as to be really under martial law. A despatch from Washington states that the San Juan affair, in the present state of the negotiations with England, cannot form the subject of comment in the PRESIDENT'S forthcoming message, and will simply be mentioned as a question that is still pending.

The Bombay mail has arrived with news from Bombay to the 12th Nov. Lord CANNING has addressed the talookdars of Oude in open durbar at Lucknow with good effect. The campaign against the rebels in Bundelcund has been opened, and another upon the Chumbul is expected. The agitation against the Bill for licensing trades and professions continues at Bombay. The Waghurs have evacuated Dwarka after several days' bombardment, which reduced the town to ashes.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS FREDERICK WILLIAM will leave Windsor Castle to-day for Dover on their return to Berlin. Their Royal Highnesses will proceed to Dover, and thence cross to Calais, from which place they will travel by railway to Brussels, for the purpose of paying a visit to the King of the Belgians.

THE PRINCE OF WALES paid a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough at Blenheim Palace on Wednesday, and spent the day in shooting over the duke's domain. In the evening the duke and duchess gave a grand banquet to a party of 36, and an evening party to which upwards of 300 were invited.

THE EX-ROYAL FAMILY OF FRANCE.—The Count de Paris and the Duke de Chartres embarked at Trieste on Sunday in the Austrian Lloyd's steamer for Egypt.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Wednesday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street. Another Council was held yesterday.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—A proclamation was issued on Wednesday proroguing Parliament from the 15th inst. to Tuesday the 24th January, and summoning it then to meet "for the despatch of divers urgent and important affairs."

THE PEERAGE.—Lord Ebrington, eldest son and heir of Earl Fortescue, is to be called up to the House of Peers.

THE ROYAL DOCKYARDS.—The Admiralty have called for a return of the ages, pay, &c., of officers and clerks on civil salaries, with the view it is said of obtaining an Order in Council making it compulsory on all salaried men to retire at 65, instead of 70, as at present.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.—An influential public meeting of the parishioners of St. James's, Piccadilly, was held in St. James's Hall, on Wednesday, to take into consideration the propriety of forming a volunteer rifle corps for that Royal parish, to act in concert with those now in course of formation in the eight other parishes of the city of Westminster. Lord Elcho, M.P., took the chair, and the meeting was addressed by Lord Ranelagh, Hon. F. Byng, the High Bailiff of Westminster, Rev. J. E. Kempe, Mr. Bidgood, Mr. H. Grenfell, and other gentlemen, and it was unanimously resolved to form a corps in connection with the other parishes of Westminster. — On Wednesday afternoon Lord Radstock, the commanding officer of the Marylebone Rifle Corps, administered the oath of allegiance to about 200 of the effective members, who assembled in the Pavilion at Lord's Cricket Ground for the purpose. The ceremony took place in the presence of the principal members of the council. The corps now numbers about 400 members, half of whom are effective, and the enrolment of new members continues satisfactory, 20 or 30 young men presenting themselves each evening of drill for that purpose. The council are about to take a lease of the practice ground at Wormwood Scrubs, and erect a suitable butt.—The movement set on foot by the Irish noblemen and gentlemen in the metropolis for the establishment of a London Irish Volunteer Rifle Corps, similar to the one organised by the Scotch residents of London, is progressing favourably, and already the committee comprises the Marquis of Donegal, the Marquis of Conyngham, the Earl of Arran, the Earl of Donoughmore, Lord Cremorne, Lord Annesley, the Earl of Desart, the Right Hon. Sir W. M. Somerville, M.P., Colonel O'Brien, &c. Communications in support of the movement have also been received from various other distinguished Irishmen, and the greatest success is looked forward to. A meeting on behalf of the movement will be held in the course of a few days.—At a meeting of the London Brigade the Lord Mayor reported that additional contributions to a large amount had been received, and that the mercantile firms are giving signs of encouragement to the gentlemen in their establishments. His lordship added that he was much gratified at being able to state distinctly that the Government would shortly be in a position to hand the brigade a rifle for the use of every volunteer in the regiment, and that the long Enfields would be withdrawn and short ones with sword-bayonets substituted as soon as practicable.—The formation of the Civil Service Brigade is proceeding most successfully, the number of recruits being already nearly sufficient to form a battalion. In addition to the Audit Office corps already formed, companies are forming in the departments of the Post Office, Admiralty, and Inland Revenue. The preliminary drills are held in Westminster Hall, by permission of the First Commissioner of Works. A committee of representatives from the different departments is about to assemble to select the uniform, and a council or general committee will eventually be appointed to manage the general affairs of the brigade.—A meeting was held on Monday in the Museum at South Kensington, Mr. H. Cole, C.B., in the chair, at which it was resolved to organise an engineer corps, to be composed of the officers and others connected with the Department of Science and Art, and of such gentlemen of the neighbourhood as might desire to join. Before the meeting broke up 75 volunteers signed their names.—A general meeting of the members of the Railway Rifles corps was held at Camden Town on Tuesday evening, when it was arranged that there should be two additional drills on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, the afternoon drill on Saturdays at the Metropolitan Cattle Market remaining as at present. It was also decided to form a cadet class of youths from 14 to 18 years of age, to prepare them for enrolment; to be drilled by competent members of the corps.—The volunteer movement at the Victoria Docks has been attended with singular success, and much enthusiasm has been displayed by all the permanent staff of the establishment, who have volunteered to a man. At the first meeting it was announced that the manager intended to provide a complete outfit for those who were desirous of volunteering.—A committee, consisting of the local magistracy, the senior churchwarden, and a large number of the vestry and directors of the poor, with some of the clergy, is forming to carry out an effective organisation for the establishment of Rifle Corps for St. Pancras. The regulations and expenses of admission into other corps have been consulted, and it is determined to establish the St. Pancras Rifles upon a more liberal and popular basis than any other yet before the public.—A public meeting was held on Monday night at Battersea, at which it was resolved to adopt measures for establishing a Rifle Corps for Battersea and district; Mr. Baker, of the Cedars, liberally offering to guarantee all the money required, or, with the influence of himself and friends, to lighten the burden which otherwise would press upon the movement.—A large meeting was held on Monday at Putney, the Rev. C. T. Robinson, the incumbent, in the chair, at which it was determined to form a corps in Putney consisting of effective and non-effective members and subscribers, and forming a division of the Richmond volunteers. The Richmond corps, which has hitherto been only a subdivision, is rapidly increasing, and will at once become a company.—A preliminary meeting of gentlemen connected with Clerkenwell has been held, at which it was resolved to form a corps in Clerkenwell, and circulars were ordered to be sent out inviting persons favourable to the movement to attend a meeting to be held on a future day.—The members of the volunteer corps of the Inns of Court, of whom 320 are now enrolled, were drilled for the first time on Monday in the fine hall of Lincoln's Inn, the use of which has been granted by the benchers. The drill commenced at half-past 8 in the morning, and was repeated twice during the day and evening, lasting two hours on each occasion. The name of one learned judge figures in the list of enrolled members, and another is expected to join and to take his drill with the rest of the volunteers.—The Queen's Corps is progressing in a most satisfactory manner. The number of effective members is now close upon 200, and applications for enrolment are made daily. The members of the corps drill in Westminster Hall on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7 till 9, and on Saturdays from 4 till 6, and the committee have secured a piece of ground at the Crystal Palace for the purposes of a "range."—The St. George's Corps have applied to Lieut.-General Sir Harry Smith to become their commanding officer, but the gallant general has replied that his position in the army must prevent his accepting the offer, adding that "no man in England has a higher opinion of the rifle volunteer movement, and no general officer has ever found the well-armed people of a gallant nation more formidable in the field."—The 1st company of the 14th Middlesex (Highgate) corps is nearly approaching its full complement, and it is proposed to take steps to form a second. The commanding officer of the 2d battalion Scots Fusilier Guards has permitted the officers to learn company and battalion drill at the Wellington Barracks.— The services of the 3d Kent (Blackheath and Lee) company, which now numbers 90 effective members, have been accepted by her Majesty. The members have for some time past been actively engaged in light infantry drill.—The effective strength of the enrolled members of the Croydon and East Surrey corps now exceeds that requisite for a complete company. It has therefore been decided to proceed at once with the formation of a second Croydon company.—A public meeting was held at the Town Hall, Chertsey, on Saturday, attended by several influential gentlemen, magistrates, &c., Mr. Briscoe, M.P., in the chair, when resolutions were passed for the formation of a volunteer rifle corps for the hundred of Godley.—From the provinces we learn that meetings in aid of the movement or for the formation of local corps have been held during the week at Altrincham, Aberdeen, Ashton-under-Lyne, Aberdare, Beaufort, Boston, Birkenhead, Buckingham, Burslem, Burton, Bedford, Blackburn, Bradford, Bristol, Brixham, Bideford, Bilston, Barnard Castle, Chatham, Cirencester, Cardiff, Cupar, Carlisle, Cullompton, Dover, Dowlais, Doncaster, Dunbar, Dawlish, Derby, Dorchester, Egham, Edinburgh, Exeter, Framlingham, Guildford, Gravesend, Greenock, Hartlepool (West), Hereford, Hastings, Harrogate, Haddington, Kingston-on-Thames, Holmfirth, Hull, Ipswich, Kendal, Kidsgrove, Liverpool, Lynn, Lanark, Lichfield, Lytham, Leamington, Malmesbury, Malton, Middlesborough, Newark, Newton Abbott, Neath, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Newport (Monmouthshire), Nottingham, Portsmouth, Penrith, Pontefract, Pontypool, Penshurst, Perth, Petworth, Ross, South Shields, Swansea, Sheerness, Stockport, Sheffield, Stratford-upon-Avon, Stafford, Stoke-upon-Trent, Stourport, Sunderland, St. Leonard's, Truro, Thirsk, Tamworth, Tranmere, Totnes, Topsham, Tunstall, Trowbridge, Wakefield, Warwick, Weston-super-Mare, Weymouth, Worcester, Wimborne, Woodbury. At the General Sessions of the county of Kent on Tuesday Mr. Beattie, a magistrate for the counties of Kent and Sussex, gave notice of the following motion:—

"That this Court do take into consideration, at its next meeting, the expediency of having the police of the county instructed in the practice of the rifle, and such other drill as would enable them to act in a body, under legal authority, in any emergency; and that the chief constable be directed to report on the possibility of such instruction being afforded without detriment to the service or trenching on the daily duties."

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Moniteur announces that the communications convoking the assembling of the Congress were sent out on Tuesday to the several Powers who are to take part in it. The first sitting of the Congress will take place on the 5th January next, and all the Powers which take part in the Congress will be represented by two Plenipotentiaries. The Moniteur, in addition to the treaties published in our Italian news, gives the text of the treaty concluded between France and Austria. It is as follows:—

"The Emperor of the French and the Emperor of Austria, desirous of putting an end to the calamities of the war, and to prevent the renewal of the complications which gave rise to it, by contributing to erect on solid and durable foundations the internal and external independence of Italy, have resolved to convert into a definitive treaty of peace the preliminaries signed by their hand at Villafranca. [Here follow the names and titles of the Zurich Plenipotentiaries.] Art. 1. There shall be in future peace and friendship between the Emperor of the French and the Emperor of Austria, as also between their heirs and successors, their respective States and subjects, for ever. Art. 2. All prisoners of war shall be immediately returned on both sides. Art. 3. To attenuate the evils of war, an exception is made to the general law, and all Austrian vessels captured, not yet condemned as prizes, shall be restored. The vessels and cargoes shall be restored in the same state as when taken, after payment of all expenses, charges, &c., incurred by their capture, and on payment of the usual allowance to the captors; no indemnity can be claimed on account of prizes sunk or destroyed, nor for the loss of merchandise, even not condemned as prize property. It is also understood distinctly that all decisions given hold good. [Art. 4 declares the cession of Lombardy to the Emperor of the French, with the details given in the treaties with Sardinia.] Art. 5. The Emperor of the French declares his intention of handing over to the King of Sardinia the territories ceded by the preceding article. Art. 6. The territories still occupied in virtue of the armistice of the 8th of July last shall be reciprocally evacuated by the belligerent Powers, the troops of which will retire immediately beyond the frontier line stipulated in Art. 4. [Art. 7 to 17 inclusive are verbatim the same as those which are published in the treaty between France and Sardinia, relative to the settlement of the financial points between the two countries, and the money indemnity to be paid to Austria and France.] Art. 18. The Emperor of the French and the Emperor of Austria engage themselves to favour with all their efforts the creation of a Confederation between the Italian States, to be placed under the honorary presidency of the Holy Father, and the object of which would be to maintain the independence and the inviolability of the Confederated States, to assure the development of their moral and material interests, and to guarantee the internal and external safety of Italy by the existence of a federal army. Venetia, which remains placed under the Crown of his Imperial, Royal, and Apostolic Majesty, will form one of the States of this Confederation, and will participate in the obligations as well as in the privileges resulting from the federal pact, the clauses of which shall be determined by an assembly consisting of representatives of all Italian States. Art. 19. As the territorial eliminations of the independent States of Italy which took no part in the late war cannot be changed except with the sanction of the Powers that presided at their formation and acknowledged their existence, the rights of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, of the Duke of Modena, and of the Duke of Parma are expressly reserved between the high contracting parties. Art. 20. Desirous of seeing the tranquillity of the States of the Church and the power of the Holy Father assured; convinced that such object could be more efficaciously attained than by the adoption of a system suited to the wants of the populations and conformable to the generous intentions already manifested by the Sovereign Pontiff, the Emperor of the French and the Emperor of Austria will unite their efforts to obtain from his Holiness that the necessity of introducing into the Administration of his States the reforms admitted as indispensable shall be taken into serious consideration by his Government. Art. 21. With a view to contribute by every effort to quiet the public mind, the high contracting parties declare and promise that in their respective territories, and in the latter restored or ceded, no individual compromised by the recent events in the Peninsula, no matter what his rank or position in society, shall be prosecuted, annoyed, or troubled, in person or property, on account of his conduct or political opinions. Art. 22. The present treaty shall be ratified, and the ratifications exchanged within one fortnight, or earlier if possible. In faith of which the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed it and fixed their seals thereunto. Done at Zurich on the 10th November, 1859. — BOURQUENEY, BANNEVILLE, KAROLYI, MEYSENBURG."

"ADDITIONAL ARTICLE.—The Government of the Emperor of the French engages itself towards the Government of his Imperial, Royal, and Apostolic Majesty to make, on account of the new Government of Lombardy, which will guarantee its repayment, to pay to it 40,000,000 florins (C. M.), stipulated by the 7th article of the present treaty, in instalments, as [illegible]—Eight millions of florins shall be paid each, by a bill [illegible] Paris, without interest, on the expiration of the three months, dating from the day on which the present treaty was [illegible] which will be handed to the Plenipotentiaries of [illegible] Royal, and Apostolic Majesty when the exchange [illegible] shall have taken place. The payment of the remaining [illegible] shall take place at Vienna, cash, in 10 successive instalments, to be made every two months, by bills on Paris, each of 14,000,000 florins. The first of these payments will be made two months after the payment of the last of 8,000,000 florins above separated. For that date, as for the other following, the interest will be reckoned at 5 per cent., dating from the first day of the month which will follow the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty. The present additional article shall have the same force and value as if inserted [illegible] in the treaty of this day. It shall be ratified in one single act, and the ratifications exchanged at the same time. In faith of which the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present additional article, and affixed their seals thereunto. Done at Zurich on the 10th November, 1859. BOURQUENEY, BANNEVILLE, KAROLYI, MEYSENBURG.

"Art. 2. Our Minister and Secretary of State in the Department of Foreign Affairs is charged with the execution of the present decree. Done at Compiègne, the 27th November, 1859. Seen and sealed with the Seal of State. NAPOLEON. (Countersigned) DELANGLE, Keeper of the Seals, Minister of Justice; A. WALEWSKI, Minister of Foreign Affairs."

It has been currently rumoured this week that the French fleet has bombarded Tangiers or Tetuan. In explanation of this report the official journals state that the French squadron has bombarded neither of those places. The forts at the mouth of the Tetuan river having fired at the French line-of-battle-ship St. Louis, the French Admiral proceeded with four steamers to the mouth of the river and dismantled the fortifications. The Moniteur of yesterday contains the following despatch on the subject:—

"The Bretagne, off Algesiras, Nov. 26.

"Yesterday the vessel St. Louis was cannonaded by the forts at the entrance of the river Tetuan. Informed of that the same night, I have this morning, with four steamers, destroyed the two forts, which have been abandoned by the Moroccans. To-morrow the Foudre will proceed to Tangiers to make severe representations to the Minister Katil. Justice fulfilled, I resume the part of neutrality. Admiral ROMAIN DESFOSSES."

It is stated that this event does not change in any respect the relations between the two countries; and that the Governor of Tetuan has ordered the arrest of the commander of the Moorish fort, who has without orders' been guilty of an unjust aggression against a nation at peace with Morocco. The 101st and 102d Regiments of the Line, forming part of the Chinese expeditionary force, embarked at Toulon on Monday. The Dryade got under way during the evening. A great movement is visible among the vessels in the Toulon roads. It is stated that four merchants of Liverpool, who had written to the Emperor in order to express their fears on the subject of the unsatisfactory relations between France and England, have been honoured with a reply from his Majesty. The Moniteur of Friday announces the appointment of the Marquis de Moustier to the post of Ambassador to the Emperor of Austria. M. de Bourqueney has received from the Emperor of Austria the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Stephen, accompanied by a letter from the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs, regretting, in the name of his Sovereign, the definitive retirement of the Marquis from the post of the French Ambassador at Vienna. M. de Banneville at the same time received from the Emperor of Austria the Grand Cordon of the Order of the Iron Crown of Lombardy. On the other hand the Emperor of the French has raised Baron Meysenburg and Chevalier Joctau to the dignity of Grand Officers of the Legion of Honour, and presented Count Karolyi and Chevalier Des Ambrois with gold snuff-boxes with the portrait of his Majesty set in diamonds. The other members of the Austrian and French missions have also received decorations, according to their rank. The Moniteur of Thursday publishes a decree, placing the Prefect of Police under the authority of the Minister of the Interior, who is henceforth charged with the general direction of the public safety, and the officers of the Ministry of the Interior forming this division are placed under his control.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.—Advices from the seat of war state that a sharp engagement took place on the 25th ult. between the Spanish troops and the Moors. The losses of the latter were heavy. On the Spanish side the casualties were 80 dead and 400 wounded.

HOLLAND.—The Amsterdam Crystal Palace is to be completed and opened in 1861. It will be 400 feet in length by 200 feet in width, and the central dome will be 200 feet in height, at the junction of which will be a transept and the nave of the edifice. The structure is to be of iron and glass; the iron to be obtained from England.

DENMARK.—Accounts from Copenhagen state that by a letter of the King, dated the 24th ult., the Councillor Rottwitt has been intrusted with the formation of a new Ministry. The Danish Government has made to the Federal Diet, through the medium of its representative at Frankfort, the following proposal for settling the difficulties of the Holstein question:—

"A committee, one half appointed by the Danish Council of State and the other half by the Diet of Holstein, to meet at Copenhagen, and propose the modifications to be made in the Constitution of Holstein. The proposed modifications to be submitted to the direct examination of the Diet of Holstein before the Danish Government decides definitively on them, thereby giving the Diet of Holstein a consultative vote on the project of the proposed reforms of its constitution."

PRUSSIA.—Prussian agents have left Berlin for England to inspect those places in the Isle of Wight and Dorsetshire which may be suitable as a residence for the King during the winter months, and to make such preparations as may be requisite. The Minister of War, General Bonin, has tendered his resignation, and is to be replaced by General Herrmann. M. von Scheele has refused the office of Lord Chamberlain, which had been offered to him, stating that he does not intend to take any part in the present political movement.

HESSE.—A quarrel seems likely to occur between Prussia and Electoral Hesse. For some time past there has been a conflict on the subject of a constitution between the Elector and his subjects. The Prussian Government 10 years ago lent its weight and authority to the Elector and enabled him to get the upper hand, but is now inclined to repair this wrong, and support the re-establishment of the old liberal constitution of 1832. The simultaneous departure of the Hessian Minister from Berlin and of the Prussian Minister from Cassel is supposed to be connected with these disputes.

AUSTRIA.—In consequence of the conclusion of peace at Zurich the diplomatic relations between Austria and Piedmont, which have been interrupted for the last three years, will be immediately re-established by the mutual nomination of official representatives having the rank of Minister Plenipotentiary. Count Edmund von Hartig, son of an ex-Governor of Lombardy, is to be the new Austrian Minister at Turin.

ITALY.—The Piedmontese Gazette of the 23d inst. publishes the text of the two treaties concluded at Zurich, as follows:—

"Victor Emmanuel II., &c., to all whom the present letters may concern, greeting. A treaty having been concluded between us and the Emperor of the French, and signed by our respective plenipotentiaries at Zurich on the 10th of November, 1859, with a view to consolidate an alliance and regulate, by a definitive agreement, the results of our participation in the late war, the tenour of which is as follows:—'In the name of the Most Holy Trinity. The King of Sardinia and the Emperor of the French, wishing to consolidate their alliance, and regulate by a definitive agreement the results of our participation in the last war, have resolved to confirm by a treaty the dispositions of the preliminaries of Villafranca relative to the cession of Lombardy, to which purpose they appointed, as their plenipotentiaries, for the King of Sardinia, M. Francis Louis Chevalier des Ambrois de Nerache, &c., and the Chevalier Joctau, &c.; for the Emperor of the French, Baron de Bourqueney, &c., and the Marquis de Banneville, &c. Art. 1. By a treaty of this day's date, the Emperor of Austria having renounced, for himself and for all his descendants and successors, in favour of the Emperor of the French, his claims and titles to Lombardy, the Emperor of the French transfers to the King of Sardinia the claims and titles which accrue to him in virtue of article 4 of the above-quoted treaty, of which the tenour follows:—The Emperor of Austria renounces for himself and for his successors in favour of the Emperor of the French, his claims and titles to Lombardy, with the exception of the fortresses of Peschiera and of Mantua, and of the territories determined by the new delimitation, which remain in the possession of his Imperial Majesty. The frontier, starting from the southern limit of the Tyrol, on the Lake of Garda, will follow the middle of the lake as far as the height of Bardolino and Manerba, whence it will join in a straight line the point of intersection of the zone of defence of the fortress of Peschiera with the Lake of Garda. That zone shall be determined by a circumference at a range of 7000 metres from the centre of the fortress plus the distances of the said centre to the glacis of the most advanced fort. From the point of intersection of the circumference thus drawn with the Mincio the frontier will follow the valley of the river to Le Grazie, will extend from Le Grazie in a straight line to Scorzarolo, will follow the valley of the Po to Luzzara, from which point there is no alteration in the frontier line already existing before the war. A military commissioner appointed by the Governments interested will be charged with drawing out the line on the localities within the shortest possible delay. Art. 2. The King of Sardinia, in taking possession of the territories ceded to him by the Emperor of the French, accepts the charges and conditions attached to that cession, such as they are stipulated in articles 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16 of the treaty concluded under this day's date between the Emperor of the French and the Emperor of Austria, which are thus conceived:—(a). The new Government of Lombardy will be charged with three-fifths of the debt of the Monte Lombardo-Veneto. It will also be charged with a portion of the national loan of 1854, fixed between the high contracting parties at 40,000,000 florins* (C. M.). (b.) An international commission shall be immediately appointed to wind up the affairs of the Monte-Lombardo-Veneto; the creditor and debtor balance to be drawn on the principle of three-fifths to the new Government, and two-fifths to Austria. (c.) The new Government of Lombardy succeeds to the rights and obligations resulting from contracts regularly stipulated by the Austrian Administration for objects of public interest, concerning especially the ceded territory. (d.) The Austrian Government is charged to refund all sums paid in by Lombard subjects, communal districts, religious societies, public establishments, &c., as caution money, deposits, &c. Vice versâ, the new Government is charged to refund any such sums paid in by Austrian subjects. (e.) The new Government of Lombardy recognises and sanctions the railway concessions granted by the Austrian Government on the ceded territory, and for their full length of time, and especially the concessions resulting from the contracts passed under date of March 14, 1856, April 8, 1857, and September 23, 1858. Dating from the ratification of the present treaty, the new Government is bound to fulfil all the obligations which were incumbent upon the Austrian Government on account of the above mentioned concessions as regard railways on the ceded territory. A special convention will regulate the railway arrangements between the respective countries. (f.) Lombard subjects living on the ceded territory are allowed one year, dating from the exchange of the ratifications, to remove their goods and chattels to the Austrian territory; they are at liberty to retain their landed property in Lombardy. The same facility is given to individuals born on the ceded territory of Lombardy and established in the States of his Majesty the Emperor of Austria. Absentees are allowed an extension to two years to decide upon their movements. (g.) Lombard subjects belonging to the Austrian army, with the exception of those born on that portion of the Lombard territory which remains the property of the Emperor of Austria in virtue of the present treaty, are immediately free from military service, and may return to their homes. It is understood that those who prefer remaining in the service of his Imperial, Royal, and Apostolic Majesty shall not therefore suffer in their persons or property. The same applies to employés of Lombard origin in the service of Austria. (h.) Pensions, civil and military, will be paid as heretofore by the new Government of Lombardy. (i.) All deeds, titles, and documents relating to that portion of the Lombard territory which remains to Austria or to Venetia are to be handed over to the Austrian authorities, and vice versâ. (j.) Functionaries established in Lombardy are at liberty to dispose of their property, landed or movable, in case the new Government should not sanction the maintenance of their establishments. Art. 3. By the additional article of the treaty concluded under this day's date between the Emperor of the French and the Emperor of Austria, the King of Sardinia will hand over to the Government of the Emperor of the French Sardinian scrip of 5 per cent. income to bearer to the amount of [illegible] francs; the French Government takes them at the average rate of exchange of the Paris Bourse of the 22d of October 1859. The balance of the sum, after the payment in favour of France which [illegible] after the ratifications of the present [illegible]. Art. 4. To indemnify the expenses incurred by the French Government during the late war, the Government of the King of Sardinia engages to pay to the Government of the Emperor of the French the sum of 62,000,000 f. for the payment of which a 5 per cent. scrip of 3,100,000 will be handed over, on the budget of the public debt of Sardinia. The scrip will be handed over to the French Government, which accepts it at par. The interest on this scrip will be in favour of France when it is handed over, within one month after the exchange of the ratifications. Art. 5. The present treaty is to be ratified, and the ratifications to be exchanged at Zurich within a fortnight, or earlier if possible. In faith of which the respective plenipotentiaries have signed and affixed their seals thereunto. Done at Zurich on the 10th November, 1859. (Signed) LES AMBROIS, JOCTEAU, BOURQUENEY, BANNEVILLE.

"We, having adopted the above treaty in each and all the dispositions it contains, declare for ourselves and for our heirs and successors that it is approved, accepted, ratified and confirmed, and by these presents we approve, accept, ratify, and confirm it, promising to observe it and to cause it to be observed inviolable. In faith of which we have signed with our hand the present letters of ratification, and have affixed thereunto the great seal of our arms. Done at Turin the 17th November, 1859. VICTOR EMMANUEL. (Countersigned) DABORMIDA, Minister of Foreign Affairs; CARUTTI, Secretary-General of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs."

TREATY BETWEEN PIEDMONT AND AUSTRIA.

"Victor Emmanuel, &c., to all who these presents may concern, greeting. A treaty of peace having been concluded between us, the Emperor of the French, and the Emperor of Austria, signed at Zurich on the 10th November, 1859, by the respective plenipotentiaries of which the following is the tenour:—Art. 1. Dating from the day of the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, there shall be peace and friendship between the King of Sardinia and the Emperor of Austria, their heirs and successors, their respective subjects and States for ever. Art. 2. The Austrian and Sardinian prisoners of war shall be immediately restored on either side." There follow verbatim the articles already given in the first treaty, articles 3 to 16, &c., &c., with the following additions:—Art. 17. All treaties and conventions concluded between the King of Sardinia and the Emperor of Austria, which were in force before the 1st of April, 1859, are confirmed, in so far as they do not interfere with the present treaty. However, the two high contracting parties engage themselves to enter, within the term of one year, into new treaties and conventions to replace, revision, to make by common agreement, such modifications as may be in the interest of both countries. Meantime those treaties and conventions are extended to the territory recently acquired by the King of Sardinia. Art. 18. The navigation of the Lake of Garda is free except the particular port and coastguard regulations. The free navigation of the Po and its tributaries is maintained conformable to treaties. A Convention to put a stop to smuggling on those waters shall be concluded between Sardinia and Austria, within the term of one year dating from the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty. Meanwhile the regulations will be enforced as stipulated in the Convention of November 22, 1851, for the suppression of smuggling on the Lago Maggiore, the Po, and the Ticino, and during the same interval no new regulations shall be made respecting the navigation of the Po and its tributaries. Art. 19. The Sardinian Government and the Austrian Government engage to settle by a special agreement everything connected with the maintenance of bridges and passes on the frontier line of the Mincio, and the tolls to be levied. Art. 20 stipulates that the two Governments will act in common as regards embankments and alterations in the bed of the river, if required. Art. 21. The inhabitants on the frontier line shall reciprocally enjoy the same advantages as were formerly granted to the dwellers on the banks of the Ticino. Art. 22. To contribute, by all means in their power, to calm the public mind, the King of Sardinia and the Emperor of Austria declare and promise that, in their respective territories, and in the countries restored or ceded, no person compromised by recent events in the Peninsula, no matter what his position in society, can be prosecuted, annoyed, or disturbed, either in his person or property, on account of his conduct or of political opinions. Art. 23. The present treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications exchanged at Zurich within a fortnight or earlier if possible. In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed it and affixed their seals thereunto. Done at Zurich on the 10th of November, 1859. DES AMBROIS, JOCTEAU, KAROLYI, MEYSENBURG, BOURQUENEY, BANNEVILLE."

"We, having seen and examined the above treaty, have approved it, accepted it, ratified it, and confirmed it, and by these presents we approve, accept, ratify, and confirm, promising to observe it and to cause it to be observed inviolate. In faith of which we have signed with our hand the present letters of ratification, and have affixed thereto our great seal. Done at Turin, the 17th November, 1859. VICTOR EMMANUEL. (Countersigned) DABORMIDA (Minister of Foreign Affairs), CARUTTI (Secretary General of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs)."

TURKEY.—Advices from Constantinople to the 23d inst. state that during the preceding six days storms of unparalleled violence had prevailed in the Euxine. All the vessels out at sea had been driven on shore, and about 80 vessels had been lost. The coast was strewed with wrecks and with hundreds of corpses. The inhabitants of these inhospitable shores had stripped the survivors of the wreck of their property. Tug steamers had been sent to the Black Sea to render assistance in the recovery of property wrecked. The Grand Vizier had given a very good reception to M. de Lesseps.

INDIA.—The Bombay mail has arrived with news to the 12th November. The following are the details:—

Peerla.—The Wagheers have evacuated Dewarka, after several days' bombardment, which reduced the town to ashes.

Lucknow.—Lord Clyde has arrived at Lucknow, where he has addressed the Talookdars of Oude in open durbar with good effect.

Bundelcund.—The campaign against the rebels in Bundelcund has been opened, and another upon the Chumbul is looked for.

Bombay.—The agitation against the Bill for Licensing Trades and Professions continues.

Calcutta.—A force of 5000 men will be sent from India to China, but there is a hitch of some kind about the Sikhs.

CHINA.—Accounts from Hong Kong to the 13th

* 10 florins to 1*l.* sterling.

Oct. state that his Excellency the Hon. F. Bruce remains at Shanghai. Admiral Hope arrived at Hong Kong in her Majesty's ship Chesapeake on the 9th. Oct. and has quite recovered from his wounds. A story is in circulation apparently derived from a Chinese pamphlet translated in the Northern Bee, which attributes to the Cabinet of Pekin an idea of invading India.

UNITED STATES.—The Harper's Ferry negro insurgents are to be executed on the 16th of December, and the whites on the afternoon of the same day. The excitement in Virginia arising out of this affair has revived with augmented energy. On the 17th ult. the most alarming accounts were forwarded from Charlestown to Richmond to the effect that a movement for the liberation of Brown was hourly anticipated, and that various barns and sheds had been fired by his confederates. Large bodies of troops were at once placed under arms at Richmond and at Alexandria, with orders to move next morning upon the scene of the contemplated hostilities. The panic throughout the State suddenly attained the wildest stage. Indiscriminate arrests were made; the pedlars, who are to be found in every village and upon every road, were imprisoned in large numbers; and the pursuit of them appeared to be universal. In the meantime all the parties supposed to have been implicated have secured their safety by flight. Dr. Howe, of Boston, has fled from Boston to Canada. Mr. F. Douglass has left for England, and Mr. Gerrit Smith has been sent to a lunatic asylum, the rebellion having overturned his mind. A Washington despatch says that, in the present state of the negotiations with England concerning the San Juan affair, the correspondence cannot be submitted to Congress, or form the subject of comment in the President's message, which will refer to it only as a question that is still pending.

CANADA. — The Reform Convention at Toronto adjourned on the 11th ult., after passing resolutions almost unanimously declaring the existing union between Upper and Lower Canada to have resulted in a heavy public debt and burdensome taxation; also declaring for the dissolution of the present union between Upper and Lower Canada, with local government for each section, and a central power for dealing with matters affecting both sections. About 600 delegates were in attendance.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.—A meeting of the inhabitants of Victoria was held in the Assembly Hall on the 1st October for the purpose of concerting measures to effect an extension of the elective franchise. Resolutions defining the qualifications of voters and members, the union of districts, and the time of polling, and limiting the duration of the House of Assembly to two years from the day of election were unanimously agreed to.

MEXICO.—The Liberal expedition against Tehuacan, Orizaba, and Cordova has proved a disastrous failure, General Mejia retreating without firing a gun, losing 600 men, who were taken prisoners, also 1000 muskets and 12 cannon, which General Minon captured without killing a man. General Marquez had pronounced for Santa Anna, after seizing a conducta with 120,000*l.* of treasure belonging chiefly to French and Spanish merchants, of which he appropriated 600,000 dollars to himself, and detained the rest at Guanajuato. The British and French Ministers had energetically protested against this conduct. The same General Marquez, on taking possession of Tepic, shot, in the Plaza, many persons who were suspected of sympathy with the constitutionalists, and imposed a very heavy contribution upon the population. An American citizen called Chase having been ordered to be shot without trial, and afterwards hung to a tree as an example to all foreigners who opposed the Government, Mr. Matthew, the British Minister, in the absence of any Minister from the United States, had demanded that General Marquez should be arrested and brought to trial. A repayment of the duties exacted by Marquez having been demanded, the British Consul, Mr. Allsopp, refused to pay, and was instantly consigned to a dungeon, whence he escaped and took refuge on board her Majesty's ship Amethyst. General Miramon, against the wishes of his Cabinet, with only four aides de camp, had left the capital, ostensibly to collect troops and pursue Marquez as a traitor; but it was feared that he was really leagued with him. General Degollado had defeated General Alford, capturing his artillery, and entering Guanajuato with 5000 men. General Woll was at Legros, and General Degollado was pushing on to attack him. A portion of the band of Cortinas had attacked the city of Rio Grande, pillaging nearly every house. It was reported that the two bands of Cortinas numbered 700 men. The people of Brownsville were in the greatest distress. All the mails were interrupted by the outlaws, and Cortinas had threatened to destroy the town and cut off and murder all the reinforcements that might be sent on to the relief of the terror-stricken citizens.

Public Addresses.

SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON at the Glasgow Volunteer Meeting last week spoke as follows on the subject of the national defences:—

"This great movement is felt from the Land's End to the furthest extremity of Scotland, and it will, I trust, enable the united British empire to show a front to every hostile force which may set the united powers of the world at defiance, and make us maintain that high position among the nations, and those liberties and that religion which has been handed down to us by our predecessors. I need not say that the policy, the wishes, and the interest of England and Scotland are to remain at peace. No defensive preparations, no eliciting of unanimous enthusiasm in defence of the country, can ever give a foreign nation a pretext to say that we are actuated by aggressive motives, that we are disposed to invade or disturb other countries. We are essentially a pacific people. There is no war can be waged in any part of the world which does not strike at some British industry, and there is no war can be waged by ourselves that would not bring upon us, if it were with a great Power, an amount of distress and suffering which it is painful to contemplate. Therefore we are a pacific people. And if we now show a warlike attitude, if we now show that we are determined to maintain the independence of the country and its honour and the honour and reputation of the State, it is not because we are a warlike or aggressive people, but because we are a free and independent people, and that while we will do no injury to any man we will allow no man to injure us. It is not surprising to me that this crisis has arisen. It has arisen, I think, not so much from the aggressive policy of any foreign Power by which we may be immediately threatened—but partly from a feeling of unbounded security and confidence which has arisen from the magnitude of our former triumphs—and partly from the jealousy of other nations, which have seen in us a wealth which they had not the industry to acquire, a liberty which they had not the stability to bear, a glory which they had not been able to attain. Such has been the effect of the cause I have mentioned—an exhibition of envy on the one hand, and a remissness of preparation on the other. We see the effect of this in the serious wars in which European nations have been lately engaged. We see that our want of preparation tempted the Russians to cross the Pruth and led to the Crimean war. We see that immediately afterwards it led to a dreadful revolt in our Indian empire. We are already engaged in hostilities with China, we are approaching to hostilities with America, and we are on very doubtful terms even with the great Power on the other side of the Channel. You will see, therefore, that our ideas of security have not been realised. On the contrary, so far from being secure, our danger arises from those circumstances, mainly, that we have not made sufficient preparations to maintain our position. I have taken especial care in these remarks to say nothing in regard to that great Power, recently our ally—I hope it may never become our enemy—from which an attack is more immediately apprehended. I will always speak with respect of the Emperor of the French. I admire the talent and I know the ability of the French Emperor. It is because I know the bravery of France, because I know the power of France, and because I know the spirit and the ability of the Emperor—it is just for this reason that I say the volunteer movement is indispensably called for by Great Britain. There are many circumstances independently of what I have said which loudly call for this movement. It is often said by people in this country that we need not be afraid of the French, for we have a great mercantile navy of 220,000 sailors, who at any time can be added to our regular navy, and therefore we are perfectly secure. Now in the present state of matters the great mercantile navy of England, so far from being a refuge or support, is—people say that it can easily be made otherwise—but as matters stand it is the most serious weakness that we have. The wages of the seamen in the mercantile navy are 50*s.* a month, while the wages of seamen in the Royal navy are only 31*s.* a month. It has been often said, how does it happen that there are so many English sailors in the American navy? And in the late strife with that country we were really often fighting our own navy. The answer to that question simply is, that there is a wonderful strength in half a dollar a day. That is the way that matters stands as regards our mercantile navy. Then, again, consider the state of the army. When the militia was called out in January last there were 100,000 men less in the militia and regular army than had been voted by the Parliament of last year. It was just an affair of money, like the other. The pay of the soldiers is 1*s.* 1*d.* a day, and the same class of men are earning at their respective employments 2*s.*, 2*s.* 6*d.*, 3*s.*, 4*s.*, or 5*s.* a day. Can you wonder that there is a difficulty in raising men for the Royal army when you see that there is a difference in the reward? There is another consideration of the last importance, and it is this—unlike any other country in Europe, we are compelled to maintain an immense standing army in India and in the colonies. At this moment there are 90,000 men in India, and 30,000 or 40,000 in the colonies, making a total of 130,000 veterans who are out of the country. The only other State which has to maintain an army abroad is France, which has a certain number of soldiers in Algeria. They, however, can be brought over in a few days to be of service in Europe. But there is another most important consideration—we have for the last 15 years been subject to so serious a drain in the way of emigration. Parliamentary returns prove that during that time about 3,000,000 persons have emigrated, averaging about 250,000 a-year; and you will be able to form some idea of the drain that has been made on the military service, when I say that the annual drain by emigration has been double the loss sustained by the empire of France from the retreat from Moscow. Now, I think I can point out how it is that these evils may be remedied, and how it is that we will be able to make our strength of what at present is the source of our weakness. The first step I would take would be at one blow, and without the least delay, to raise the pay of the soldiers and sailors and the militia from 1*s.* 1*d.* to 1*s.* 8*d.* or 2*s.* a day. If you do this you will find that the ships of the line will be filled with sailors, and that the ranks of the regular army will be filled with able and valiant men, and you will have no difficulty whatever in raising such a force as is requisite to defend the country. I have gathered from a Parliamentary return issued the other day that since the year 1814 we have repealed taxes to the amount of 31,500,000*l.*, 10,000,000*l.* being the double income tax. There remains therefore 21,500,000*l.* that has been given up since 1844. Now, one fourth of that sum would raise the pay of our soldiers and sailors to an adequate amount, and would put us in a state of comparative security. What in comparison with the restoring of those indirect taxes in a question of pounds, shillings, and pence, is the danger of being conquered by the French? I will just give you one or two facts to let you know what you may expect if the French ever conquered this country, in addition to the horrors of war and the massacre of men. In the matter of pounds, shillings, and pence it will affect the pockets of every human being in the country. In 1808 when Napoleon went to Portugal as a liberator he levied a contribution of 4,000,000*l.*, equal to at least 10,000,000*l.* in Scotland. In 1796 he went to Milan as a liberator, and levied 800,000*l.* upon the liberated city. He next went to Venice, and imposed there 2,500,000*l.* In 1806 he went to Prussia, and levied upon that country a contribution of 24,000,000*l.* sterling, and actually squeezed the money out of the people in five years by military occupation. In 1812 he ordered Davoust to levy about 2,000,000*l.* upon the city of Hamburgh, which at that time contained only 80,000 inhabitants. You see at what price the peace-at-any-price gentlemen would purchase their salvation. I would say that although we may by increasing the pay increase our regular forces, and of course our militia, yet it is indispensable that we should, in addition, have the support of a great body of volunteers. I hope that the time is coming when we shall see 30 sail of the line in the Mediterranean, 100,000 regular troops in Great Britain, and 80,000 militia. I am sure the object could be gained if the Government would adopt the plan which I propose, and I am sure no one would feel it a burden. That done, all that we require is the assistance of a great volunteer force. A force that would bring 100,000 men together [illegible] of 20,000, which could be done now in front of London, would not be sufficient, unless it were supported by a great force in the rear, for the French, if they once got the command of the Channel, could throw as many men over in a week as were brought to fight at Solferino. But if there is a sufficient and adequate volunteer force in the country, then, I say, we may be altogether invincible. I do not pretend to say that volunteers, however brave and skilful they may be, can at once be brought to equal efficiency with regular soldiers, but I say that volunteers may be the greatest of supports to a nation engaged in a struggle for independence. What should be done is that there should be a thorough organisation. The point of danger would be London or Woolwich. Woolwich, being our only arsenal, would probably be one of the first places attacked. We must not only have great resources in Scotland and England, and other parts, but we must have the means to bring these resources at once to bear on the point of danger. Now, if France landed on the coast of Sussex, in five days they would be in London, if they were not resisted. Now, consider that we have a railway system throughout the whole country, and by its means the volunteers might be sent up to the support of the regulars from Plymouth and other places. They could support them as light troops in every possible way, and in that way they could more than double the strength of the whole army. With these volunteers in the various parts of the country Great Britain would be altogether invincible."

MR. BRIGHT, M.P., was present at the soirée of the Liverpool Financial Reform Association on Thursday evening, and delivered a long address, of which the following is an abstract:—

"He should always be ready to come and co-operate with the association in carrying out the great and noble principles on which it was founded. These principles he defined to be—firstly, to require from Government an economical expenditure of the public money; and, secondly, the act of simple justice, that whatever money the Government might require should be levied in proportion to the property which every man possessed by reason of the security which Government gave him. That justice, he contended, could only be arrived at by a system of direct taxation, for although there might be an equal consumption of articles of food amongst all classes, that was no guarantee that there was an equal possession of property. In other words, the consumption of taxed articles was no test whatever of the means of particular individuals or families, and therefore could never honestly be adopted as a rule or measure of taxation by those who admitted the principle that taxation should be regulated by the means of the taxpayer. Touching upon the results of free trade policy so far, he observed that twice as much cattle had come into the country since the repeal of the corn laws, or an increased value of nearly 20,000,000*l.* sterling per annum. When the repeal of the corn laws was agitated most of the landed interest were dreadfully alarmed. One noble duke went so far as to say that if the repeal was carried he would leave the country: and it was generally understood that in a very few years, if you wanted to see an English duke you would have to go out of England to find him. Yet those dukes were not gone, land was more valuable, the class of farmers was higher, more capital was laid out on the land, and millions of our countrymen who were previously suffering periodical starvation of the bitterest kind were now living in a degree of comparative comfort to which in previous times they were wholly unaccustomed. He would go a little further. When the income tax was first levied there was a great dislike to it, especially on the part of the landed proprietors. Yet the effect of the income tax had been to give additional security to the property of the landed proprietors—in short, every step hitherto taken towards reducing the taxes on articles of general consumption had given additional salvation and comfort to those who happened to be poor, and additional security to those who happened to be rich. After answering with considerable minuteness the statements of several metropolitan journals, he showed by statistics the great increase which had taken place during the last twenty years in tea, sugar and tobacco. He contended that the great bulk of that increase was owing to increased consumption by the working classes in consequence of the reduction of price through the reduction of duties. Taking the whole proportion of the customs and excise duties he put down revenue yielded by the consumption of the higher classes about 7,350,000*l.* a year, of the middle classes about 15,960,000*l.* a year, of the working classes at about 18,690,000*l.* a year. They must remember, too, that one-half of the consumption of the upper classes was really the consumption of their servants, and not what was properly called 'the family.' Taking the calculations of Professor Newmarsh, of the Statistical Society, he stated that there were 24,000,000 of people in the United Kingdom who lived in houses under the yearly value of 10*l.*, and 6,000,000 only in houses above the yearly value of 10*l.* Was it not fair to presume that the 24,000,000 consumed more of the taxed articles than the 6,000,000 who lived in houses of the better class. Now, what was the change they proposed? He was not going to propose that the Chancellor of the Exchequer should this next session advertise all the custom-houses to be let, and that the last custom-house officer and the last smuggler should be preserved in the British Museum; but he would state what he thought would be a practicable step towards the legitimate object which the association had in view. The value of the whole property of the country approached seven hundred thousand millions a year. He advocated, therefore, a direct property tax—say of 8*s.* a year on every 100*l.* worth of property, which would produce 17,000,000*l.* sterling, or about four times the amount of the income tax produced last year. At this rate a man with real property worth 1000*l.* a year would pay 4*l.*; a man worth 10,000*l.* would pay 40*l.*; and a man with 1,000,000*l.* would pay 4000*l.* a year. Was there any revolution in that? By direct taxation, he argued, trade and commerce would be benefited. He complained that the rich people who governed this country were not informed, and did not care to be informed, of the great injustice they were committing on the poorer classes. Only a fortnight ago they had had on that very platform the members of the lately expelled Cabinet. They know the ignominious way in which the Cabinet was thrust from office, for their utter inattention in their abortive Reform Bill to the wants of the people. They had now another Cabinet considering the very same question. He knew there were men in that Cabinet who were sincerely anxious for the welfare of the working classes; he knew the pledges with which a majority was secured against the Government of Lord Derby, and he also knew the difficulties which the present had to contend with. There might be colleagues who were not anxious, who were not even courageous in the cause. He made no comment upon the Cabinet, but he only hoped and prayed that they might have courage enough to avow that the future of their Government, and for a long time to come the future of their party, depended upon the honesty and courage with which they dealt with great and unavoidable questions. He only desired to state what were facts; yet because he did so he was attacked by those masked conspirators who wrote against the commonwealth in the leading columns of the Times; and congenial slanders were vomited forth weekly in the columns of the great Saturday reviler. But these facts remained, to the dishonour of our country. They made government and authority insecure, for authority of every kind must be insecure, and must pass away, unless it were based upon the true interest and commended itself to the consciences of the people. He asked, then, that Parliament should be made a ...representative of the property, of the industry, of the intelligence of the nation—that we might be delivered, if possible, from chaotic legislation, from reckless expenditure, and from a taxation oppressive, unequal, and unjust. The monopolists of power rejected this demand with scorn; but the day would come when it would be made with a louder voice than his, when the question would be grasped with a ruder hand than his, and when it was so made, as was the case in 1832, that would be surrendered amid terror and humiliation which reason and justice now appealed for in vain."

Mr. Roebuck, M.P., at a meeting at Bath on Wednesday made the following remarks on the relations of this country with France under the Bourbon dynasties;

"I have been lately in foreign countries, where I have heard a good deal talked about the position of England. A friend of mine, a gentleman well known in the world, M. de Montalembert, has said that the position of England is 'ignoble.' Why? Because England will not go to war for the principles which M. de Montalembert delights to support. But we have gone to war before this for great principles. We have a debt of 800,000,000*l.* incurred in support of great principles. We spent that, and 800,000,000*l.* more on the top of that, and we gave the lives of many millions of our sons to maintain great principles. We freed the people of Spain, and we placed the Bourbons on the throne of France, and what was the result? I will tell you two results? When the Duke of Wellington passed from Spain into France circumstances occurred which led him to prepare his retreat, and he found it impossible to retreat through that part of Spain which he had just liberated because he would have been risen on by the Spaniards themselves. That was the gratitude of the Spanish people for the many thousands of lives and of pounds we spent on their behalf. Well, we put the Bourbons on the throne of France, and the consequence was that the elder portion of the Bourbon race were always our enemies. From the very moment that Louis XVIII. got into Paris their intrigues against us began. But there is something worse than that. We acknowledged the second branch of the Bourbons. They were driven out of France in 1848, and they were received in hospitable England. Sheltered by her mighty ægis they were safe. When they put their feet on the shore of England none could harm them. What was the gratitude of these illustrious personages? Why, one of these illustrious exiles actually made plans of the southern shores of England, pointing out where we could be best attacked, and sent these plans to the Ministry of France, saying that though an exile he was still a child of France, and would be willing to enter into the ranks of those who were to carry French principles across the Channel. That was told me by a nobleman now dead, whose name I don't think it right to mention, and who said that he himself had seen the letter. He told me that circumstances had then occurred which would render it not a politic proceeding to mention it at that time. The present is the proper time for mentioning it, when we are asked to entangle ourselves in European disputes, and to risk again the blood and treasure of England to obtain gratitude like this. 'Ignoble' indeed! M. de Montalembert may wish to keep the Pope on his throne by English bayonets; other friends of Italy may wish to drive out the three Dukes by English bayonets; but we should make enemies whichever course we took. We should make enemies of those we put down, and ungrateful friends of those whom we set up. Therefore, I say, keep yourselves, my insular countrymen, to your own island, and mix not yourselves up with European contests. If you are attacked strike back a blow which shall annihilate the offender. If you wish for friends, look to the great colonies you have established all over the world. Believe me, I know what I am saying, if you were to adopt this course there are millions of men speaking the English language, who have derived from England their literature, their institutions, and their laws, who would then be ready to maintain us in the position we now hold—the only really free people in Europe."

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

The Shipping Interest.—A large and influential meeting of shipowners, shipbuilders, and others interested in British shipping, was held on Tuesday at the London Tavern, "to take into consideration the present ruinous condition of the British shipping interest, and to adopt petitions to Parliament praying for a comprehensive, searching, and impartial inquiry into the actual state of British navigation, and the causes that have led to its present depression, as well as into all the laws and regulations under which it is now conducted." The meeting was attended by deputations from Hull, Sunderland, Middlesborough, Montrose, Scarborough, Topsham, Liverpool, West Hartlepool, and Jersey; while letters were read from the shipowners' societies of Glasgow, Plymouth, Maldon, Yarmouth, Dover, Falmouth, Greenock, Brixham, North Shields, Bristol, and Swansea, cordially agreeing with all the objects of the meeting, but not considering it necessary to send a deputation. Mr. R. W. Crawford, M.P., took the chair, and explained the object of the meeting at some length. Mr. Somes, M.P., proposed the first resolution, which was as follows:—

"That in the month of December of the past year the shipping interest, with an unanimity without precedent, declared by public resolution that British shipping was 'in a state of deplorable and ruinous depression,' and addressed the Crown, praying for a specific measure of relief. That the Executive Government, while admitting the fact of depression, declared it in reply to be 'temporary and accidental,' and that British navigation was even then 'recovering' therefrom; while the shipowners insisted that, its principal cause being the impolicy of the existing system of maritime commerce, no permanent improvement could take place while that system remained unaltered; that nearly 12 months have submitted to the test of practical experience the correctness of these respective opinions; and that at the expiration of that time the shipping interest of the country now finds itself placed in a position of continued depression, difficulty, and distress, threatening the ruin of all who are engaged in the varied and extensive pursuits connected with navigation."

Mr. Bramley Moore seconded the motion, stating that he took an active part in opposing the repeal of the Navigation Laws, and saw no reason for changing the opinion he then entertained, for the foreign shipping had now secured so much of the carrying trade that even our coasting trade was now chiefly carried on by foreigners. Mr. Lindsay, M.P., next addressed the meeting, and was received with mingled cheers and hisses. He said that he could not concur in the resolution, as it called upon the Legislature to enforce reciprocity, which would be not only retaliation but protection in its worst and most pernicious form. This remark was received with cries of "shame" and "question;" and after a scene of great uproar, during which Mr. G. F. Young rose to order, Mr. Lindsay proceeded to say that under a free trade policy the British shipping had increased in a far greater ratio than it ever did under a Protectionist policy, and that the entries and clearances of British shipping had also increased. Loud cries of "Turn him out!" "Turncoat!" "Sit down!" and other signs of disapprobation interrupted the remainder of the speech, and Mr. Lindsay concluded amidst renewed uproar in moving as an amendment:—

"That a petition be presented to both Houses of Parliament, praying for an inquiry into the actual condition of British navigation and for relief from all peculiar burdens and restrictions that still fetter maritime enterprise."

Mr. Duncan Dunbar now rose and said he would not call Mr. Lindsay his friend, but the man who called himself a British shipowner, and moved such an amendment, was the worst enemy the British shipowner could have. Every one must admit that the shipowners were on the road to ruin, and he assured the meeting that the very property he had made by his industry and hard labour was melting away like snow before the sun. Mr. Bramley of Liverpool read extracts from two letters written by a merchant and M.P. for a shipping port during the emigration movement of 1852, to his American correspondent at Liverpool, telling them that his position was such that he was quite prepared to guarantee to any American friend to obtain for them from the Government the highest rate given on the day of tender and to place more ships than they had sent. The reading of these letters was followed by loud cries of "name," and the announcement that the writer was the hon. member for Sunderland was received with bursts of derisive cheers, and cries of "Turn him out," "Don't call him honourable," and Mr. Bramley proceeded to say that it would have better that the hand should have withered than moved to write so un-English a letter. He believed that the House of Commons was composed of 653—he would leave out one—English gentlemen and loyal subjects of the Queen who would not assist in making the "stars and stripes" triumph over the flag of England, or rejoice to see this country anything but mistress of the seas. Mr. Clint, of Liverpool, and Mr. Potts, of Sunderland, next addressed the meeting, after which the chairman put Mr. Lindsay's amendment to the meeting. Five hands only were held up in its favour, the great majority of those present holding up their hands against it. The original resolution was then put and carried, only one dissentient hand being raised against it. Mr. John Smith, chairman of the Liverpool Shipowners' Association, moved, and Mr. H. Taylor seconded, the next resolution as follows:—

"That Parliament, the Government, and the public opinion of the country, fully recognising the peculiar importance of the shipping interest as connected with national safety, public policy and justice to great private interests alike demand that the system of maritime commerce should be forthwith submitted to full and fair examination by competent authority."

The resolution was carried, with only one dissentient. Mr. Wigram moved, and Mr. Cave, M.P., seconded the next resolution:—

"That it be, therefore, earnestly recommended to all persons interested in British shipping at the various seaports of the United Kingdom to prepare petitions for presentation to Parliament at the opening of the approaching session, which, while abstaining from all expression of opinion on disputed points, should pray for a comprehensive, searching, and impartial inquiry into the actual condition of British navigation, and the causes that have led to its present disastrous depression as well as into all the laws and regulations under which it is now conducted; and that they be further recommended, by public meetings, and by communication with the members representing in the House of Commons their respective localities, to invite and enforce a consideration of a question so clearly involving the safety as well as the prosperity of the nation."

Mr. Carroll, M.P., of Cork, supported the resolution, which was put and carried. Mr. Marshall then moved, and Mr. Digby Seymour, M.P., moved the adoption of a petition to be presented to Parliament by Lord John Russell, and the appointment of a deputation to wait upon Lord Palmerston previous to the meeting of Parliament for the purpose of soliciting the Government to give their favourable consideration to its prayer. The petition having been read and adopted, Lord Valletort, M.P., moved, and Sir James Duke, M.P., seconded a vote of thanks to the chairman, which was carried by acclamation.

The Great Eastern.—The surveyors appointed to examine the Great Eastern for the purpose of ascertaining whether the contract to fit her for sea had been properly carried out, have transmitted to the solicitors of the company the following report, accompanied by some general remarks containing very unfavourable criticisms of the deck beams and pillaring, the deck fittings, capstan, anchor gear, &c.:—

"Great Eastern Steam-ship, Holyhead, Oct. 18.

"Gentlemen,—In compliance with your request we have made a complete survey of the Great Eastern, but not having had time to prepare our detailed report we beg to submit the following remarks upon the points referred to in your letter, and some others which we think it important you should bring under the consideration of the board. With reference to the intimation that Mr. Russell alleges that his contract is completed, we remark that the hull of the ship to which our survey has been specially directed (exclusive of the engines) is not completed either as to the 'general scope' or the 'details of the contract,' as a first-class passenger ship, such as those of Cunard's line or the Royal West India Mail Company, and that in her present state it would be imprudent to send her to sea on a lengthened voyage. We are unable at present to arrive at a definite opinion as to the cost of the works necessary for the completion of the ship in all respects in accordance with the contract. The amount must be very large. We are unable to state the amount of damage consequent on the delay in sending her to sea. We may remark generally that, with the exception of a few cabins, the accommodations are by no means equal to the requirements of a first-class passenger steamer, such as Cunard's line or the Royal West India mail steamers, but are very inferior—materials, workmanship, and furniture. The accommodation for the officers and crew is by no means such as ought to have been provided and is required by the contract. The decks are not tight, and a great deal of inferior material and workmanship has been used in them. There is no heating apparatus for warming the cabins in winter. There is a considerable amount of work which is absolutely necessary to be performed before the ship can be trusted on a lengthened voyage across the Atlantic, which work would require a considerable time to execute in an efficient manner, and, even with this done, the ship would not be what the contract requires her to be; and deficiencies in other respects would be a constant source of expense and annoyance to the company.—We are, gentlemen, your obedient servants,

"George Bayley, William Patterson, John Jordan."

The Mastership of Harrow.—The head mastership of Harrow School, rendered vacant by the resignation of the Rev. Dr. Vaughan, has been conferred upon the Rev. Henry Montagu Butler, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Mr. Butler graduated in 1855, when he was placed first in the first class of the classical tripos, and 32d junior optime in the mathematical tripos. He is a son of the late Dean of Peterborough, who was formerly head master of Harrow. In 1852 he gained the "Bell's Scholarship." In 1853 and 1854 successively he obtained Sir William Browne's medal for the Greek ode. In 1854 he gained the Porson prize for a translation into Greek verse, the Camden medal for Latin hexameters, and the prize given by the members of the university for the best dissertation in Latin prose. He was elected fellow of Trinity in 1856.

Metropolitan Board of Works.—At the last meeting of the Board Mr. Robert Taylor presented a communication, stating that at a recent meeting of the vestry of St. Mary's, Lambeth, a resolution was passed requesting the Board to stay any further proceedings in reference to the appointment of Mr. Woolrych as standing counsel to the Board, until the vestries and district boards throughout the metropolis had had an opportunity of expressing their opinions on the subject. On the motion of Mr. Leslie the communication was received and ordered to be entered on the minutes of the Board; as was also a protest against Mr. Woolrych's appointment, on the ground of expense to the Board, in the employment of additional clerks, emanating from the vestry of Bermondsey. At a meeting of the Marylebone vestry on Saturday, a resolution was unanimously adopted declaring that the vestry "regards with great dissatisfaction the recent appointment by the Metropolitan Board of a 'legal adviser' and standing counsel, and desires to record its earnest protest against it; first, because by the terms of this appointment the highly objectionable and universally condemned practice of paying a public officer by fees in addition to a fixed stipend is adopted, thereby offering a direct premium to litigation; and secondly, because it is a direct violation of those economic principles by which the administration of the Metropolitan Board of Works should be characterised."

THE NORTHERN HIGH LEVEL SEWER.—At a meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works on Friday a long discussion took place in reference to certain mistakes that had been made in taking out the quantities for the contract for the great sewer on the north side of the Thames. Those quantities had been taken out by engineers, appointed jointly by the Board and the contractor, but paid by the latter. After the contract had been partially executed, discrepancies were discovered which induced the Board to appoint an independent surveyor to test these quantities; and the result has been that inaccuracies have been found of a serious character. All parties are agreed that the difference will at least be 7,000*l.*, while the majority of the professional members of the Board estimate the amount at between 15,000*l.* and 30,000*l.* As this is only one of about eight contracts that will be required before the main drainage of the metropolis is completed, the matter was made the subject of serious discussion, and it was at first ordered that the bill of the engineers who had made the errors, Messrs. Roberts & Gotto, should not be paid. After several divisions on Friday it was resolved by 21 to 7, that the report of the independent surveyor, Mr. Pole, did not contain a sufficient justification to continue the previous order of the Board not to pay the claim, and that such order ought to be rescinded.

SUPPLY OF GAS TO THE METROPOLIS.—A deputation from the vestries and district boards of the metropolis had an interview on Wednesday with the President of the Board of Trade, and another on Thursday with the Home Secretary, to call attention to the conduct of the companies in dividing the metropolis into districts, and to ask the intervention of Government, as in the case of the water supply in 1852, with a view to secure the passing of an Act for the regulation of the companies and for fixing the price and quality of the gas. Mr. Gibson and Sir G. Lewis said that the subject should receive the attention of the Government. The latter added that he had been asked to receive a deputation from the companies, and after he had heard their views he should be able to state what course the Government would take.

ST. GEORGE'S-IN-THE-EAST.—On Sunday night there was a marked change for the better in the behaviour of the congregation at the evening service in this church. The attendance was scarcely so large as on most previous occasions during the disturbances, though there were not less than 2000 people present. Half of them, at least, were very young men and women, having the appearance of shop-boys and domestic servants, and what unseemly conduct there was chiefly proceeded from that class.

THE LOSS OF THE ROYAL CHARTER.—The Board of Trade inquiry terminated on Friday, the last witness being Mr. Clay, managing partner of the Mersey Ironworks, who said the tests made as to the tensile strength of the iron proved that the plates were of first-rate quality. Mr. Mansfield then made some remarks in reference to the gallantry of the captain and crew, and repudiated the calumny which had been circulated as to the sobriety of Captain Taylor. During the last few days several bodies have been washed ashore at Moelfra, as well as on the coast of the Isle of Man, and even so far off the scene of disaster as the coast of Ireland. Among those which have been identified are Miss F. Davis, Mrs. Foster, John Mawle, John Grise, Robert Evans, J. C. Ellison, J. Potts, and H. J. Walsh. The subscriptions in aid of the sufferers by the wreck of the Royal Charter have reached fully 3000*l.* in Liverpool alone.

THE ARMSTRONG GUN AT SEA.—Her Majesty's ship Wrangler returned to Woolwich on Friday from an experimental cruise to try the 40-lb. and 80-lb. Armstrong guns at sea. A complete course of experiments was carried out under the inspection of Capt. Sir William Wiseman, Vice-President of the Royal Ordnance Select Committee of Woolwich Arsenal, and Lieut. Ward, of the gunnery-ship Excellent. Sixty rounds of ammunition with the elongated shot were fired with perfect success, and every equipment pertaining to the gun was pronounced faultless.

MURDER IN SHOREDITCH.—A very shocking murder was committed on Monday morning in King's Head Court, Shoreditch, a man named James Moore, an umbrella maker, who had only lately been discharged from a lunatic asylum, having murdered his wife by stunning her with a poker and then cutting off her head and ripping up her abdomen. It appears from the evidence given at the police station on Tuesday, that the murderer and his wife, with one child about two years and a half old, entered their lodgings on Friday last and were considered by the landlord and landlady to be quiet and respectable people. On Monday morning, however, cries of murder were heard to proceed from their room, and on the landlady running up to see what was the matter, the cries ceased and she obtained no reply to her questions. She called out to the prisoner through the door that he should leave her house that day, and her husband agreed to give a formal notice to quit in the course of the day. The prisoner subsequently went out and did not return till the afternoon, when he went up to his room but suddenly came down again, and in a tone of great anxiety asked the landlord if any one had been into his room while he was out, requesting him to go up to the room immediately, as something very dreadful had occurred there. On entering the room the landlord was horrified at seeing the headless body of the woman lying stretched at full length upon her back, nearly naked, with a large open wound in her abdomen, and her head placed upright in a washhand basin by her side and partly covered by a pillow, while the child was lying on the other side wholly unconscious of the fate of its mother. In one corner of the room was a pail, containing a quantity of blood and clothing, while the boards bore evidence of having been recently washed, as they were covered for a considerable distance with smears and dampness, only partially dried. The prisoner told the landlord that he had not the slightest idea as to who had committed the murder, and declared that he had only that moment discovered it on returning home. The landlord asked him to go with him to the police court, which he did without the slightest objection, and stood quietly by, and seemingly without any indications of participation in the crime, while the landlord related the frightful particulars to the office-keeper. The latter however on looking at the prisoner's trousers saw stains of blood upon them, and the sergeant on duty after examining the room took him into custody and lodged him in the Old Street station. It was then ascertained by the police that the prisoner, who has two other children in addition to the one referred to, but who were not at home at the time of this sad occurrence, was convicted a few months ago of violently assaulting a woman and biting her severely in the hand, and sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, but before he had been three months in prison he displayed such manifest symptoms of his mind being affected that he was transferred to a lunatic asylum at Hoxton, from which it is not yet known whether he was formally discharged or escaped. After these facts had been proved in evidence the magistrate remanded the prisoner, and issued a summons for the attendance of the surgeon attached to the asylum.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's weekly return states that the deaths in London continued to increase in the week that ended Saturday, Nov. 26. The numbers registered in the two previous weeks were successively 1051 and 1233; last week the number was 1307. In the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1849-58 the average number was 1210; which, if raised in proportion to the increase of population, will become 1331. The deaths of last week were therefore slightly below the average. During the week the births of 904 boys and 881 girls—in all 1785 children—were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1849-58 the average number was 1548.

DERBY.—A shocking attempt at wholesale poisoning has been brought to light at Stuffynwood Hall, the residence of Mr. Joseph Paget, a magistrate of this county. The coachman, who had been engaged to marry one of the maidservants, drugged the beer which they drank at supper with cantharides, and afterwards drugged the coffee with the same poison. Five of the six maidservants were first taken ill, and then the whole of the servants, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Paget and their aunt who was staying with them; but fortunately no lives were lost. Mr. and Mrs. Paget were taken ill while riding to a meet of the Derbyshire Hounds. The coachman was taken into custody and identified as having bought an ounce of cantharides at Mansfield. He was taken before the magistrates at Chesterfield on Tuesday, when after a consultation the presiding magistrate, Mr. E. G. Maynard, decided that there was no criminal law to meet the case. The prisoner was therefore discharged.

DURSLEY.—One of the most deliberate murders which has ever been known in this neighbourhood was perpetrated on Saturday evening at North Nibley. The murderer's name is John Shepherd; he is about 32 years of age, the son of respectable parents, who have been farmers and were possessed of some property, but the whole, or nearly so, has been spent by the son, who has always borne a bad character, and is of a very vicious turn of mind. He has been in several police forces, among them the Somerset county police, but was discharged for bad conduct. For some time he has done nothing to gain a livelihood. It appears that he had for some time been paying his addresses to a respectable young woman named Ann Smitham, the only daughter of a weaver at Nibley, but from circumstances which came to her knowledge she determined not to receive his attentions any longer. This exasperated him very much, and he has been heard to say that he would kill her; but it was not thought that he would carry out his threat. On Saturday evening, at about 6 o'clock, he was observed near the cottage of the Smithams, and on the inmates hearing a noise outside the young woman looked out to see what it was, and finding it was Shepherd said, "What! are you there again?" and immediately after the report of a gun was heard and the unfortunate girl fell to the ground with a scream and never moved afterwards. She had been shot through the heart and died in about 10 minutes. After the discharge of the gun search was made for Shepherd, but without success until 8 o'clock the next morning (Sunday), when he was discovered by the police in a small orchard still alive but with half of his face shattered in a most fearful manner, having shot himself in a shed about 15 yards from the place where he was lying. An inquest was held on Monday on the body of the young woman, when the jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against John [illegible], who died during the inquiry. A second inquest was therefore held on his body, and a verdict of felo de se returned.

PORTSMOUTH.—Five separate Courts-martial have been ordered by the Admiralty to assemble here on the late outbreak on board the Princess Royal. The first Court met on Saturday, and proceeded to try the prisoners on the following charges:—

1st. For making a mutinous assembly; 2d, for endeavouring to do so; 3d, for being present at a mutiny on board the Princess Royal, and not using their endeavours to suppress the same; and 4th, for disobeying the lawful commands of their superior officers when the drum had beaten to quarters, and going on the upper deck when the well disposed men were piped to do so.

The inquiry occupied the whole of Monday and Tuesday, when the Court after six hours deliberation found the fourth charge not proved against the whole of the prisoners; found four prisoners guilty on the first, second, and third charges; three prisoners guilty on the third charge; and in consideration of the peculiar circumstances of the case, only sentenced six of them to 18 months' imprisonment in Winchester gaol with hard labour; one to 12 months' imprisonment in Winchester gaol, with hard labour; and three to six months' imprisonment in Winchester gaol with hard labour. The Court added that they would separate without noticing with approbation the conduct of one of the witnesses, George Hoad, in standing under the sentries when released from irons in the cockpit. Hoad was found guilty a few days since of assault on the second master of the Princess Royal, and sentenced to receive 48 lashes, to lose six months' pay, undergo two years' imprisonment. No part of the sentence has, however, been yet carried out. The Court again assembled on board the Victory on Wednesday morning to proceed with the second case, and found the prisoner on trial guilty of four of the five charges against him, and sentenced him to 18 months' imprisonment with hard labour in Winchester gaol. The third case was then entered upon with the same result, and the prisoner was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and hard labour. On Thursday the Court proceeded with the fourth case, and have found the prisoner guilty of four of the charges, and sentenced him to the same punishment—two years' imprisonment with hard labour. The Court then proceeded to try the last case, in which the prisoners were charged—1st, with being present at the mutiny, and not using their utmost endeavours to suppress the same; and 2nd, with disobeying the lawful commands of their superior officers by not repairing to their station when the drum beat to quarters, and by not subsequently going on the upper deck when the well-disposed men were piped to do so. The trial was not concluded when the Court rose.

SYMPATHY WITH THE POPE.—On Sunday a meeting in favour of the Pope was held at Kingstown after morning mass. The meeting was convened by the Roman Catholic priest of the parish, and was held in the chapel, which was crowded. The chair was taken by Mr. Waldron, M.P., who addressed the meeting at some length, and was followed by Mr. P. O'Brien, M.P., and other gentlemen. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

"That while the spiritual authority of the successor of Peter is recognised by the Catholic world, irrespective of temporal power, yet it is necessary for the free exercise of the Church that the Pope should be an independent sovereign. That the interests of nations forbid the spiritual head of 200,000,000 Catholics to be the subject of any State or reign; that the Catholic people of Ireland feel deeply for the troubles which oppress the Supreme Pontiff, fomented by foreign intrigue, aided by the enemies of Catholic faith all over the world. That the elevated morality displayed by his Holiness Pius IX., when ascending the throne, proves that his anxiety for the amelioration of his subjects is only surpassed by his paternal solicitude for the welfare of his faithful children."

MR. JOHN MITCHELL.—The Irish newspapers received in New York are republishing the letters which Mr. Mitchell is contributing weekly to the Dublin papers. In one of his latest productions he makes the following remarks on the amnesty movement in his favour, and the possible invasion by France:—

"I do not know whether my two friends and countrymen of the United States would avail themselves of the amnesty if granted. For my part, I certainly would not. I hope never to go to Ireland again, but never by the Queen's [illegible] good-will. It would be impossible for me to live under her Government without endeavouring to overthrow it. I should instantly conspire, confederate, and combine against the person and persons, once more, against the peace and dignity of Lady the now Queen, her crown and dignity. And then whereupon she would again pack a jury of true Protestants, again steal my letters in the Post Office, get Baron Lefroy upon my track (does the baron still live?), get all the detectives and suborners, again seize [illegible] plunder my children, under a false pretence of [illegible] I cannot go back to live in Ireland under her rule; yet I hope to go back to live in Ireland [illegible] Emperor of the French pouncing down upon [illegible] or invading England, that is a mere panic [illegible] Bull; the rogue knows he has a bad conscience [illegible] there is a heavy balance outstanding against [illegible] the uttermost farthing of which he must pay. LORDSHIP OF ST. ANDREWS.—Colonel Mure, of Caldwell, has been elected Lord Rector of St. Andrews by a majority of 22 over Sir Ralph Anstruther, the numbers being 73 to 51.

THE COLLISION ON THE FIRTH OF CLYDE.—On Friday morning about 12 o'clock, while the steamer Arran was off the Arran shore, on her passage from Ardrossan to Londonderry, she came into collision with the outward-bound timber laden ship Pladda. She was struck heavily abaft the funnel, and sunk in a quarter of an hour. About 12 passengers and the second mate are believed to be drowned. Forty-six persons, including the captain and crew, were saved by the Pladda and a tug. The steamer had also 200 sheep on board, which were drowned.

Law.

COURT OF CRIMINAL CAUSES. Trial of Dr. Smethurst for bigamy.—On Wednesday morning Dr. Smethurst was brought from Bedford to Bedmarsh on the charge of bigamy. It appeared by the evidence that the prisoner was married in 1858 to a young woman named Mary Duriam, who is still living, and was only last year to Isabella Banks under circumstances which, in some measure, led to the recent trial for the murder of Miss Banks. It was proved that Mary Duriam, before she was married to the prisoner, had lived with Mr. Laporte as his wife, and had children by him, under the name of Johnson, one of her sons being Mr. Laporte, who was brought into Court. Shortly after the prisoner's marriage with Miss Banks, he was informed by Mr. Laporte, who was not aware until that marriage was made that his father's name was Laporte, or that Mrs. Johnson was not his wife. On the other hand it was clearly proved that Mr. Laporte had a family by a lady who bore his name, and who was recognised as his wife by the relatives of both; and one of the witnesses for the defence was called to prove that the father's reputed wife was Mrs. Johnson, otherwise Mary Duriam, and not Mrs. Laporte. At the same time there was no legal proof that Mary Duriam was the married name of Mrs. Smethurst. For the defence a theory was taken of these circumstances, in order to set up the probability that Mary Duriam, otherwise Mrs. Johnson, was really the wife of Laporte, that she was the person who was guilty of the crime of bigamy in marrying the prisoner, and that he was not guilty of that offence when he married Miss Isabella Bramwell, in summing up, said that there was nothing logically any one in coming to the conclusion that Mary Johnson was a married woman at the time she went through the ceremony of marriage with the prisoner, and that nothing in the case appeared to him to point the other way. The jury immediately found the prisoner Guilty. Baron Bramwell, in passing sentence, said that there could be no doubt that Miss Banks knew the prisoner was married when she went through the ceremony with him, and that she knew perfectly well what she was about, and, so far as she was concerned, therefore, she was not one that called for severe punishment. There was, however, one fact in connection with the case which was, that the prisoner, in order to carry out the intercourse with the deceased lady, had made a false oath in saying that there was no impediment to it, when he must have known that this was not true. It was an offence, perhaps, strictly to the crime of perjury, but undoubtedly a false oath, and he, as a man of education, must have known what he was doing, and the consequences of such a proceeding. When, therefore, he took into consideration that he had deserted his first wife, that he had taken a false oath, and that he had endeavoured to impute to his first wife the crime of bigamy, without any probable justification, he had arrived at the conclusion that the case required a more severe punishment than was usually passed under similar circumstances. He had consulted Mr. Justice Byles and the other Judges of the Court upon the subject, and they concurred with him that the sentence he was about to pronounce was a proper one, and this was that he be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for the term of one year. The prisoner, who did not say a word during the proceedings, was then removed from the bar. Serious Assaults.—The Rev. Henry John Hatch, the late chaplain of the Wandsworth House of Correction, was charged with an assault upon two little girls, one 11 and the other 9, the daughters of a Mr. Plummer, a gentleman residing in Wiltshire, who had placed them in the temporary charge at a school kept by him at Wandsworth. The children who were examined gave their evidence in a clear and precise manner, and detailed the conduct that had been practised towards them by the prisoner, even in the presence of his wife. They were subjected to a severe cross-examination by Serjeant Ballantine, but very little was elicited from them that in any way tended to invalidate their testimony. A great number of magistrates and clergymen were present to speak to the prisoner's high character. Baron Bramwell, in summing up said that it certainly was most extraordinary that the prisoner should have commenced such a course of conduct almost before the mother of the children was cold, and still more so that he should have acted as he appeared to have done while his wife was in the room, who, if the evidence was to be believed, must really have been an accessory to the transaction. The jury after deliberating for about a quarter of an hour returned a verdict of Guilty. Baron Bramwell, in passing sentence, said that he had considered the case very carefully, and had come to the conclusion that he would be acting most mercifully to the prisoner if he sentenced him to be imprisoned for the period of about 18 months. It was impossible to conceive worse conduct than that of the prisoner, who had taken advantage of his position, and acted in such a way to two poor little children who had been placed under his protection, and he therefore felt it his duty to pass the full sentence of the law for such an offence, which was to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for seven years. In each charge, the second period of two years to commence on the expiration of the first. The prisoner addressed the Court, with great excitement, declaring that the witnesses had been telling abominable lies, and that the time would come when his innocence would be made out.—Mr. Thomas Hall, watch-maker, of Cornhill, was found guilty of [illegible] a young lady who had been entrusted to his care on a journey to London by the Brighton Railway, and was sentenced to a month's imprisonment in Newgate.—Murder on the High Seas.—Francis Bidwell, 48, seaman, was indicted for the wilful murder of Edmund Hayward on the High seas. The boy Hayward, a nephew of Bidwell's, had been apprenticed on board the ship Hindostan, and he was subjected to the most brutal ill-treatment by the prisoner. Verdict, Guilty.—Sentence deferred.—Wilful Murder of Jessie White.—A short time ago a girl named Jessie White, a child about six years old, was found murdered in a field at Hackney. It was a very mysterious case. The prisoner lived with the father of the child and two of his other children in Chandos Cottages, Hackney Wick, and he was proved to have taken the child out on the night of Saturday 3 with great cruelty and then strangled it in the ditch. On the 5th September she returned and this was discovered with such severity that the child was left all night exposed to the inclemency of the weather, and during the whole of the following day. The prisoner, in her defence, said that she had been ill-used by the father of the child, and that she was afraid to go home, as he would beat her. She had been in a very excited state, and was not aware of what she was doing. The jury, after a short consultation, found the prisoner guilty of Manslaughter. The learned Judge, in passing sentence, said there could be no doubt that she entertained an animosity for the poor child, and that she must, on being questioned as to another matter, have told a falsehood. Sentence deferred [illegible] penal servitude for six years.

THE NORTHERN HIGH LEVEL SEWER.—At a meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works on Friday a long discussion took place in reference to certain mistakes that had been made in taking out the quantities for the contract for the great sewer on the north side of the Thames. Those quantities had been taken out by engineers, appointed jointly by the Board and the contractor, but paid by the latter. After several divisions on Friday it was resolved by 21 to 7, that the report of the independent surveyor, Mr. Pole, did not contain a sufficient justification to continue the previous order of the Board not to pay the claim, and that such order ought to be rescinded.

SUPPLY OF GAS TO THE METROPOLIS.—A deputation from the vestries and district boards of the metropolis had an interview on Wednesday with the President of the Board of Trade, and another on Thursday with the Home Secretary, to call attention to the conduct of the companies in dividing the metropolis into districts, and to ask the intervention of Government, as in the case of the water supply in 1852, with a view to secure the passing of an Act for the regulation of the companies and for fixing the price and quality of the gas. Mr. Gibson and Sir G. Lewis said that the subject should receive the attention of the Government. The latter added that he had been asked to receive a deputation from the companies, and after he had heard their views he should be able to state what course the Government would take.

ST. GEORGE'S-IN-THE-EAST.—On Sunday night there was a marked change for the better in the behaviour of the congregation at the evening service in this church. THE ARMSTRONG GUN AT SEA.—Her Majesty's ship Wrangler returned to Woolwich on Friday from an experimental cruise to try the 40-lb. and 80-lb. Armstrong guns at sea. A complete course of experiments was carried out under the inspection of Capt. Sir William Wiseman, Vice-President of the Royal Ordnance Select Committee of Woolwich Arsenal, and Lieut. Ward, of the gunnery-ship Excellent. Sixty rounds of ammunition with the elongated shot were fired with perfect success, and every equipment pertaining to the gun was pronounced faultless.

MURDER IN SHOREDITCH.—A very shocking murder was committed on Monday morning in King's Head Court, Shoreditch, a man named James Moore, an umbrella maker, who had only lately been discharged from a lunatic asylum, having murdered his wife by stunning her with a poker and then cutting off her head and ripping up her abdomen. It appears from the evidence given at the police station on Tuesday, that the murderer and his wife, with one child about two years and a half old, entered their lodgings on Friday last and were considered by the landlord and landlady to be quiet and respectable people. On Monday morning, however, cries of murder were heard to proceed from their room, and on the landlady running up to see what was the matter, the cries ceased and she obtained no reply to her questions. She called out to the prisoner through the door that he should leave her house that day, and her husband agreed to give a formal notice to quit in the course of the day. The prisoner subsequently went out and did not return till the afternoon, when he went up to his room but suddenly came down again, and in a tone of great anxiety asked the landlord if any one had been into his room while he was out, requesting him to go up to the room immediately, as something very dreadful had occurred there. On entering the room the landlord was horrified at seeing the headless body of the woman lying stretched at full length upon her back, nearly naked, with a large open wound in her abdomen, and her head placed upright in a washhand basin by her side and partly covered by a pillow, while the child was lying on the other side wholly unconscious of the fate of its mother. In one corner of the room was a pail, containing a quantity of blood and clothing, while the boards bore evidence of having been recently washed, as they were covered for a considerable distance with smears and dampness, only partially dried. The prisoner told the landlord that he had not the slightest idea as to who had committed the murder, and declared that he had only that moment discovered it on returning home. The landlord asked him to go with him to the police court, which he did without the slightest objection, and stood quietly by, and seemingly without any indications of participation in the crime, while the landlord related the frightful particulars to the office-keeper. The latter however on looking at the prisoner's trousers saw stains of blood upon them, and the sergeant on duty after examining the room took him into custody and lodged him in the Old Street station. It was then ascertained by the police that the prisoner, who has two other children in addition to the one referred to, but who were not at home at the time of this sad occurrence, was convicted a few months ago of violently assaulting a woman and biting her severely in the hand, and sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, but before he had been three months in prison he displayed such manifest symptoms of his mind being affected that he was transferred to a lunatic asylum at Hoxton, from which it is not yet known whether he was formally discharged or escaped. After these facts had been proved in evidence the magistrate remanded the prisoner, and issued a summons for the attendance of the surgeon attached to the asylum.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's weekly return states that the deaths in London continued to increase in the week that ended Saturday, Nov. 26. The numbers registered in the two previous weeks were successively 1051 and 1233; last week the number was 1307. In the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1849-58 the average number was 1210; which, if raised in proportion to the increase of population, will become 1331. The deaths of last week were therefore slightly below the average. During the week the births of 904 boys and 881 girls—in all 1785 children—were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1849-58 the average number was 1548.

DERBY.—A shocking attempt at wholesale poisoning has been brought to light at Stuffynwood Hall, the residence of Mr. Joseph Paget, a magistrate of this county. The coachman, who had been engaged to marry one of the maidservants, drugged the beer which they drank at supper with cantharides, and afterwards drugged the coffee with the same poison. Five of the six maidservants were first taken ill, and then the whole of the servants, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Paget and their aunt who was staying with them; but fortunately no lives were lost. Mr. and Mrs. Paget were taken ill while riding to a meet of the Derbyshire Hounds. The coachman was taken into custody and identified as having bought an ounce of cantharides at Mansfield. He was taken before the magistrates at Chesterfield on Tuesday, when after a consultation the presiding magistrate, Mr. E. G. Maynard, decided that there was no criminal law to meet the case. The prisoner was therefore discharged.

DURSLEY.—One of the most deliberate murders which has ever been known in this neighbourhood was perpetrated on Saturday evening at North Nibley. The murderer's name is John Shepherd; he is about 32 years of age, the son of respectable parents, who have been farmers and were possessed of some property, but the whole, or nearly so, has been spent by the son, who has always borne a bad character, and is of a very vicious turn of mind. He has been in several police forces, among them the Somerset county police, but was discharged for bad conduct. For some time he has done nothing to gain a livelihood. It appears that he had for some time been paying his addresses to a respectable young woman named Ann Smitham, the only daughter of a weaver at Nibley, but from circumstances which came to her knowledge she determined not to receive his attentions any longer. This exasperated him very much, and he has been heard to say that he would kill her; but it was not thought that he would carry out his threat. On Saturday evening, at about 6 o'clock, he was observed near the cottage of the Smithams, and on the inmates hearing a noise outside the young woman looked out to see what it was, and finding it was Shepherd said, "What! are you there again?" and immediately after the report of a gun was heard and the unfortunate girl fell to the ground with a scream and never moved afterwards. She had been shot through the heart and died in about 10 minutes. After the discharge of the gun search was made for Shepherd, but without success until 8 o'clock the next morning (Sunday), when he was discovered by the police in a small orchard still alive but with half of his face shattered in a most fearful manner, having shot himself in a shed about 15 yards from the place where he was lying. An inquest was held on Monday on the body of the young woman, when the jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against John Shepherd, who died during the inquiry. A second inquest was therefore held on his body, and a verdict of felo de se returned.

PORTSMOUTH.—Five separate Courts-martial have been ordered by the Admiralty in connection with the late outbreak on board the Princess Royal. The first Court met on Saturday, and proceeded to try seven prisoners on the following charges:—

1st. For making a mutinous assembly; 2d, for endeavouring to do so; 3d, for being present at a mutiny on board the Princess Royal, and not using their endeavours to suppress the same; and 4th, for disobeying the lawful commands of their superior officers when the drum had beaten to quarters, and for going on the upper deck when the well disposed men were piped to do so.

The inquiry occupied the whole of Monday and Tuesday, when the Court after six hours deliberation found the fourth charge not proved against the whole of the prisoners; found four prisoners guilty on the first, second, and third charges; three prisoners guilty on the third charge; and in consideration of the peculiar circumstances of the case, only sentenced three of them to 18 months' imprisonment in Winchester gaol with hard labour; one to 12 months' imprisonment in Winchester gaol, with hard labour; and three others to six months' imprisonment in Winchester gaol, with hard labour. The Court added that they could not separate without noticing with approbation the conduct of one of the witnesses, George Hoad, in remaining under the sentries when released from irons in the fore cockpit. Hoad was found guilty a few days since of an assault on the second master of the Princess Royal, and sentenced to receive 48 lashes, to lose all pay, and undergo two years' imprisonment. No part of the sentence has, however, been yet carried out. The Court again assembled on board the Victory on Wednesday morning to proceed with the second case, and found the prisoner on trial guilty of four of the first charges against him, and sentenced him to 18 months' imprisonment with hard labour in Winchester gaol. The third case was then entered upon with the same result, and the prisoner was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and hard labour. On Thursday the Court proceeded with the fourth case, and having found the prisoner guilty of four of the charges sentenced him to the same punishment of two years' imprisonment with hard labour. The Court then proceeded to try the last case, in which the prisoners were charged—1st, with being present at the mutiny, and not using their utmost endeavours to suppress the same; and 2nd, with disobeying the lawful commands of their superior officers by not repairing to their station when the drum beat to quarters, and by not subsequently going on the upper deck when the well-disposed men were piped to do so. The trial was not concluded when the Court rose.

SYMPATHY WITH THE POPE.—On Sunday a meeting in favour of the Pope was held at Kingstown after morning mass. The meeting was convened by the Roman Catholic priest of the parish, and was held in the chapel, which was crowded. The chair was taken by Mr. Waldron, M.P., who addressed the meeting at some length, and was followed by Mr. P. O'Brien, M.P., and other gentlemen. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

"That while the spiritual authority of the successor of Peter is recognised by the Catholic world, irrespective of temporal power, yet it is necessary for the free government of the Church that the Pope should be an independent Sovereign. That the interests of nations forbid the spiritual head of 200,000,000 Catholics to be the subject of any State or sovereign; that the Catholic people of Ireland feel deep sympathy for the troubles which oppress the Supreme Pontiff—troubles fomented by foreign intrigue, aided by the enemies of the Catholic faith all over the world. That the enlightened morality displayed by his Holiness Pius IX., when called to the throne, proves that his anxiety for the amelioration of his subjects is only surpassed by his paternal solicitude for the spiritual welfare of his faithful children."

MR. JOHN MITCHELL.—The Irish newspapers in New York are republishing the letters which Mr. Mitchell is contributing weekly to the Dublin papers. In one of his latest productions he makes the following remarks on the amnesty movement in his favour, and the alleged possible invasion by France:—

"I do not know whether my two friends and comrades in the United States would avail themselves of the 'amnesty' granted. For my part, I certainly would not. I hope, indeed, to go to Ireland again, but never by the Queen of England's good-will. It would be impossible for me to live there under her Government without endeavouring to overthrow it. I should instantly conspire, confederate, and combine with person and persons, once more, against the peace of Our Lady the now Queen, her crown and dignity, and so forth; whereupon she would again pack a jury of true blue Protestants, again steal my letters in the post office, as Baron Lefroy upon my track (does the baron still live?), all the detectives and suborners, again seize my person, plunder my children, under a false pretence of law, and I cannot go back to live in Ireland under her dominion yet I hope to go back to live in Ireland. As to the Emperor of the French pouncing down upon England, or invading England, that is a mere panic terror of John Bull; the rogue knows he has a bad conscience, and that there is a heavy balance outstanding against him, the uttermost farthing of which he must pay; but Emperor Napoleon is no brigand; he is not going to seek quarrel, nor to rush over at a day's warning with horse and dragoons to harry England, burn the factories, and rob the Bank. By no means, but he intends simply, honestly (as fully if he can) to elevate France to that commanding position by sea and shore which the allied Sovereigns of Europe conspired to take away from her. It needs nothing else but development of France will be the ruin of England; and England, or any other Power, shall interfere with that development

...ed by unfair means—à la bonne heure! But this all comes to the same point. There will be a war. England cannot stand ... and see this mighty Power growing to proportions which ... overshadow Europe and Asia. There will be war, but it is ... that England will be the first to declare it. England ... who will make the pounce, and the guet à-pens—in her usual Copenhagen style. I hereby prophesy that England will ... more pursue the policy of Pitt; will make the best ... she can, and burst on France (for you know she ... puck enough) in a sudden tempest of battle by land ... sea."

EDINBURGH UNIVERSITY COURT.—The Chancellor, Lord Brougham, has appointed Sir John Melville, late Lord Provost of the city, as his assessor, and the rector, Mr. Gladstone, has chosen Dr. John Brown, a medical gentleman of high literary standing, as his assessor in the University Court.

RECTORSHIP OF ST. ANDREWS.—Colonel Mure, of Caldwell, has been elected Lord Rector of St. Andrews by a majority of 22 over Sir Ralph Anstruther, the numbers being 73 to 51.

FATAL COLLISION ON THE FIRTH OF CLYDE.—On Tuesday morning about 12 o'clock, while the steamer Eagle was off the Arran shore, on her passage from Glasgow to Londonderry, she came into collision with the waterlogged timber-laden ship Pladda. She was struck heavily abaft the funnel, and sunk in a quarter of an hour. About 12 passengers and the second mate are believed to be drowned. Forty-six persons, including the captain and crew, were saved by the Pladda and a tug. The steamer had also 200 sheep on board, which were drowned.

Law.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT: Trial of Dr. Smethurst for bigamy.—On Wednesday morning Dr. Smethurst was tried before Baron Bramwell on the charge of bigamy. It appeared from the evidence that the prisoner was married in 1828 to a person called Mary Durham who is still living, and was married last year to Isabella Banks under circumstances which have become notorious by his recent trial for the murder of that lady. It was proved that Mary Durham, before her marriage with the prisoner, had lived with Mr. Laporte as his wife and had children by him, under the name of Johnson, and one of her sons by Mr. Laporte, who was brought into court to identify her signature to the register of her marriage with the prisoner, said he was not aware until that marriage took place that his father's name was Laporte, or that Mrs Johnson was not his wife. On the other hand it was clearly proved that Mr. Laporte had a family by a lady who bore his name, and who was recognised as his wife by the relatives of both; and one of the sons of this marriage was called to prove that his father's connection with Mrs. Johnson, otherwise Mary Durham, was an adulterous one. At the same time there was no legal proof that Mary Durham was the maiden name of Mrs. Smethurst. For the defence advantage was taken of these circumstances, in order to set up the probability that Mary Durham, otherwise Mrs. Johnson, was really the wife of Mr. Laporte, that she was the person who was really guilty of the crime of bigamy in marrying the prisoner, and that he was not guilty of that offence when he married Miss Bankes. Baron Bramwell, in summing up, said that there was nothing to justify any one in coming to the conclusion that Mrs. Johnson was a married woman at the time she went through the ceremony of marriage with the prisoner, and that everything in the case appeared to him to point the other way. The jury almost immediately found the prisoner Guilty. Baron Bramwell, in passing sentence, said that there could be no doubt that Miss Bankes knew the prisoner was married when she went through the ceremony with him, and that she did so voluntarily, and was of an age to know perfectly well what she was about, and, so far as she was concerned, therefore, the case was not one that called for severe punishment. There was, however, one fact in connection with the case which was, that the prisoner, in order to carry out the marriage with the deceased lady, had made a false oath in swearing that there was no impediment to it, when he must have known that this was not true. It might not amount, perhaps, strictly to the crime of perjury, but it was undoubtedly a false oath, and he, as a man of education, must have known what he was doing, and the consequences of such a proceeding. When, therefore, he took into account that he had deserted his first wife, that he had taken a false oath, and that he had endeavoured to impute to his first wife the crime of bigamy, without any probable justification, he had come to the conclusion that the case required a more severe punishment than was usually passed under similar circumstances. He had consulted Mr. Justice Byles and the Judges of the Court upon the subject, and they concurred with him that the sentence he was about to pronounce was a proper one, and this was that he be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for one year. The prisoner, who did not say a word throughout the proceedings, was then removed from the bar.

Indecent Assaults.—The Rev. Henry John Hutch, the late chaplain of the Wandsworth House of Correction, was charged with an indecent assault upon two little girls, one 11 and the other 9 years old, the daughters of a Mr. Plummer, a gentleman of some residing in Wiltshire, who had placed them in the prisoner's charge at a school kept by him at Wandsworth. The two children who were examined gave their evidence in a simple and artless manner, and detailed the conduct that had been practised towards them by the prisoner, even in the presence of his wife. They were subjected to a severe cross-examination by Serjeant Ballantine, but very little was elicited from them that in any way tended to invalidate their testimony. A great number of magistrates and clergymen were called to speak to the prisoner's high character. Baron Bramwell in summing up said that it certainly was most extraordinary that the prisoner should have commenced such a course of proceeding almost before the mother of the children was out of sight, and still more so that he should have acted as was represented while his wife was in the room, who, if the evidence was to be believed, must really have been an accomplice in the transaction. The jury after deliberating about an hour found the prisoner Guilty. Baron Bramwell in passing sentence said he had been convicted of about as hateful an offence as could possibly be imagined. It was impossible to conceive a worse crime than for a man to take advantage of his position, and act in such a manner towards two poor little children who had been placed under his protection, and he therefore felt it his duty to pass upon him the extreme sentence of the law for such an offence, which was, that he be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for seven years upon each charge, the second period of two years to commence at the expiration of the first. The prisoner addressed the Court, and, with great excitement, declared that the parents had been telling abominable lies, and that the time would come when his innocence would be made out.—Mr. Henry French, watchmaker, of Cornhill, was found guilty of assaulting a young lady who had been entrusted to his care in a journey to London by the Brighton Railway, and was sentenced to a month's imprisonment in Newgate.—Murder on the High Seas.—Frances Boland, 45, seaman, was indicted for the wilful murder of Edward Hyland on the high seas. The jury returned a verdict of Manslaughter, and he was sentenced to four years' penal servitude.—Child Murder at Hackney.—Sarah Jane Wynne, 14, was indicted for the Wilful Murder of James White, a child about 3½ years old. This was a very shocking case. The prisoner lived with the father of the child and two of his other children in Clarence Cottages, Hackney. She conceived a violent dislike to this child, and was in the habit of beating it with great cruelty and then strapping it to the bedpost. On the 22d September she carried out this punishment with such severity that the child was left all night strapped to the bedpost in an upright position, and nature at last becoming exhausted, his head fell back in such a position as to produce apoplexy, and when released the child was quite dead. The jury after a very short deliberation found the prisoner Guilty of Manslaughter. The learned Judge, in passing sentence, said there could be no doubt that she entertained an aversion for this poor child, and that she went on from one cruel act to another until she had caused its death. He then sentenced her to be kept in penal servitude for 16 years.

POTATOES.—SOUTHWARK, Monday, Nov. 28

During the past week, the arrivals both coastwise and by rail have been plentiful, and more liberal from France and Belgium. The former week's prices have been barely maintained. The following are this day's quotations:—Yorkshire Regents, per ton, 80s to 110s.; Lincolnshire do., 70s. to 90s.; Dunbar do., 70s. to 110s.; Perth, Forfar, and Fifeshire do., 60s. to 85s.; Kent and Essex do., 70s. to 90s.; French Whites, 70s. to 80s.; Belgian do., 55s. to 65s.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, Nov 28.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was again moderate, the quality and condition poor, and sales could only be effected at a decline of 1s. per qr. upon the prices offered this day se'nnight, or 2s. below the rates of this day fortnight. The attendance was very small, and to have forced the sale of foreign Wheat lower prices must have been submitted to, but it was generally held firmly at former quotations. Fine malting Barley is 1s. to 2s. per qr. cheaper, secondary sorts very unsaleable; grinding and distilling bring last week's rates. New Beans are 2s. per qr. cheaper. Peas unaltered in value. The Oat trade is quiet, and in some instances 6d. per qr. less money is accepted. Flour remains the same as last week.

FRIDAY, Dec. 25.

The weather during the last eight days has been wet, with snow, and occasional night frosts. The Wheat trade throughout the kingdom has been very inanimate, and a decline of 1s. per qr. has been general, but considering the unusually large arrival into the Scotch ports, and of Black Sea cargoes on the coast, the trade evinces very great firmness and confi dence. Spring Corn of all kinds has also declined slightly in value. In several markets Flour is quoted 6d. to 1s. per sack cheaper. The arrivals of grain and seed cargoes off the coast for the week amount to 178 cargoes, consisting of 41 Wheat, 11 Rye, 77 Maize, 20 Barley, 9 Beans, 2 Oats, 17 Linseed. The sales comprise Odessa Ghirka Wheat at 45s. to 46s., Taganrog Ghirka at 47s. to 48s., Marionopoli at 48s., all per 492 lbs.; Odessa Maize at 31s. to 32s. 3d., Ismail at 32s. 6d. per 492 lbs., Ibrail at 30s. 1½d. per 480 lbs.; Galatz Barley at 26s. 6d. per 400 lbs.; Egyptian Beans at 34s. per qr. imp., and Taganrog Linseed at 48s. 6d. per qr. delivered. The quantity of foreign Wheat reported as arrived up to last night was 760 qrs. only, but we believe there are several vessels in the river; of Barley and Oats the arrivals are large, and good of English grain. The English Wheat fresh up or left over from last day met a slow sale on previous terms, and the business transacted in foreign was to a limited extent at late rates. In Spring Corn but few sales were effected, and prices must be considered nominally as on Monday.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday, Nov. 29.—We had only few buyers at our Corn Exchange this morning, and the demand for all articles was quite in retail. Wheat must be noted 1d. to 2d. per bushel, Flour fully 6d. per barrel and sack, and Indian Corn 6d. per quarter lower than last market day. Oats might have been bought at 6d. per bushel, and Oatmeal 6d. per load less money. Beans and Peas each declined 6d. to 1s. per qr., and Barley 1d. per bushel. The market closed extremely dull.

FRIDAY, Dec. 2.—There was a moderate business in Wheat, but no change. Flour steady at Tuesday's prices. Indian Corn a turn dearer. Beans steady. Oatmeal 6d. lower. Oats in favour of buyers. There was a limited attendance at market.

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.
THE BEARD, WHISKERS, AND MOUSTACHIOS.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL is universally in high repute as the most successful article ever known for the growth, restoration, and in improving and beautifying the human hair, proved beyond question by its unprecedented results for more than half a century past, and when every other specific has failed. It prevents it from falling or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, cleanses it from scurf and dandriff, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. For children it is especially recommended, as forming the basis of a beautiful head of hair. Its invaluable properties have obtained the patronage of Royalty and the aristocracy throughout Europe; while its introduction into the nurseries of Royalty, and the high esteem in which it is universally held, with numerous testimonials constantly received of its efficacy, afford the best and surest proofs of its merits. Price 3*s.* 6*d.* and 7*s.*; family bottles (equal to four small), 10*s.* 6*d.*; and double that size, 21*s.*—CAUTION: on the wrapper of each bottle are the words, ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, &c., in white letters, and their signature, "A. ROWLAND & SONS," in red ink. Sold at 20, Hatton Garden, London, E.C.; and by Chemists and Perfumers.

Canisters 1 lb., 2*s.* 9*d.*; 2 lb. 4*s.* 6*d.*; 5 lb. 11*s.*, 10 lb. 22*s.* The 12 lb. free of carriage on receipt of Post-office order.—BARRY DU BARRY & Co., 77, Regent Street, London, W.; 60, Gracechurch Street, E.C.; 63, at 182, Piccadilly, W.; 150, Oxford Street, W.; 4, Cheapside, E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS do not belong to any especial and exclusive class of remedies. They seem to comprehend the finest remedial properties of the great specifics. Thus the Ointment in cases of eruptive diseases appears not only to remove the external inflammation, but to sink deeper into the recesses of the system, putting out in the last spark the fires of fever, invigorating the circulation, and purifying the fluids which course through the flesh to the glands, and the skin. In most cases the operation of the Ointment is materially assisted by an occasional dose of the Pills, which acting in unison with the Ointment combine to form a bulwark impregnable to any known disorder.

News of the Week.

M. MOCQUARD, the Secretary of the EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH, has addressed a letter to four merchants of Liverpool who had written to HIS MAJESTY inquiring his intentions in regard to England. In this letter M. MOCQUARD states that until now, under whatever circumstances, there has not been a word or an act of the EMPEROR which could permit a doubt of his sentiments, and, consequently, of his intentions towards England; that his conduct, invariably the same, has not ceased for one moment to show him a faithful and irreproachable ally; and that what he has been hitherto, he will continue to be. M. MOCQUARD urges the Liverpool merchants to oppose the imaginary trouble which appears to have seized England with the "rapidity of an epidemic," and concludes by observing that "great nations should appreciate, not fear each other."—The five Great Powers, with Sardinia, Portugal, and Spain, have sent in their adhesion to the Congress, which will assemble at Paris on the 5th of January. The report which prevailed last week that Lord PALMERSTON was likely to represent the British Government on this occasion has proved to be premature. At a Cabinet Council held on Friday it was resolved that his lordship's absence from England at the opening of Parliament would be productive of serious inconvenience; that no special Plenipotentiary should be sent; and that Lord COWLEY, the resident Minister in Paris, should attend the Congress as the representative of Great Britain.

Accounts from Madrid inform us that the Spanish expeditionary force has sustained very serious losses in its first encounters with the Moors, who not only fight well, but are commanded by officers who are evidently skilled in European strategy. It is reported at Madrid that Marshal O'DONNELL will shortly return to Spain, and that the army will remain encamped in Africa for the winter.

From Italy we learn that the separate Governments of Parma, Modena, and the Romagna have been suppressed, and that the three provinces will henceforth have one Government, with a Ministry sitting at Modena, and a Legislative Commission and Commander-in-Chief sitting at Bologna. The question of the Regency has been arranged to the satisfaction of all parties, and M. BUONCOMPAGNI will proceed immediately to Florence, with the rank of Governor-General of the League of the States of Central Italy.

By the arrival of the Indian mail we have the important intelligence that the Talookdars or great landowners of Oude, whose estates had been in most cases forfeited by rebellion, have received fresh grants of their lands as the beneficial lessees of the British Crown. They are established and confirmed in feudal supremacy, and their possessions and privileges are to descend in perpetuity to their heirs on fixed conditions, which give them such an interest in the country that they will henceforth be deeply concerned in the maintenance of British rule.

The United States Secretary of War has received a despatch from General SCOTT, dated "Straits of Fuca," stating that he had proposed to Governor DOUGLAS a temporary adjustment of the difficulties in regard to the island of San Juan, on the basis suggested by the PRESIDENT, and had no doubt that the proposition would be accepted. General HARNEY left Portland soon after General SCOTT's arrival, having taken offence at being superseded in his command. The British naval force had been withdrawn from San Juan, with the exception of the steamer Satellite.

The Queen, Prince Consort, Prince of Wales, and Princess Alice accompanied their Royal Highnesses to Paddington, where the Prince and Princess took leave of her Majesty. The Queen and Prince Consort, with Princess Alice, returned to Windsor after the departure of their Royal Highnesses, and the Prince of Wales proceeded from Paddington to Oxford. In the afternoon the Duchess of Kent visited the Queen. The Judge-Advocate-General had an audience of her Majesty, and submitted the proceedings of some courts-martial. On Sunday morning the Queen and Prince Consort, the Princess Alice, Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, and Prince Arthur attended Divine service in the private chapel; the Rev. C. F. Tarver officiated. On Monday morning the Queen and Prince Consort walked in the grounds of the castle. Her Majesty afterwards visited the Duchess of Kent at Frogmore, and the Prince Consort came to London, and visited the Cattle Show. On Tuesday morning the Queen and Prince Consort accompanied by the Princesses Alice, Helena, Louisa, and Beatrice, Prince Arthur, and Prince Leopold, left Windsor for Osborne. On Wednesday the Prince and Princess Leiningen visited her Majesty. On Thursday the Queen, Prince Consort, and Royal family walked in the grounds.

THE PRINCE DE JOINVILLE has addressed a letter to the daily papers stating that there is no foundation for the assertion made last week by Mr. Roebuck at Bath that his Royal Highness had supplied the French Ministry with a plan of the English coast, pointing out where we could be best attacked. The following is a translation of the letter:—

"Sir,—Your number of to-day contains an extract from a speech delivered a few days ago by Mr. Roebuck, in which I am pointed out too clearly for me not to feel obliged to reply to it. The assertion of Mr. Roebuck is entirely devoid of foundation. I have made no plan of the coasts of England. I have drawn up no project for an attack on this country: and lastly, it is unnecessary for me to say I have sent nothing to the French Ministry. I may add that, although I always consider myself a 'son of France,' I would be the last to wish that the 'principles' which now govern her should cross the Straits I request, sir, from your sense of justice, the insertion of this letter in your next number, and I beg you to accept my compliments. "FR. D'ORLEANS, PRINCE DE JOINVILLE."
"Claremont, Dec. 2, 1859."

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Monday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street. Another Council was held on Thursday.

THE PEERAGE.—The Queen has ordered a writ to be issued under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, summoning Viscount Ebrington to the House of Peers by the title of Baron Fortescue, of Castle Hill, in the county of Devon.

THE ARCHDEACONRY OF SURREY.—The Rev. J. S. Utterton, Vicar of Farnham, has been appointed Archdeacon of Surrey, in the room of the Rev. J. C. Hoare, who has resigned.

THE VOLUNTEER RIFLE MOVEMENT.—At a meeting of the Court of Aldermen on Tuesday it was resolved unanimously to allow Capt. G. Montagu Hicks, Governor of Whitecross Street Prison, and late of her Majesty's 41st Regiment, to accept the office of Lieutenant-Colonel of the London Rifle Brigade.—On Monday afternoon a public meeting of Irish noblemen and gentlemen resident in the metropolis was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, at which it was unanimously resolved to organise a corps under the name of the London Irish Volunteers. The Marquis of Donegal presided, and the Marquis of Conyngham, the Earl of Arran, Sir John Scott Lillie, Sir Justin Shiel, Mr. Cogan, M.P., Mr. Digby Seymour, M.P., Mr. Samuel Lover, and Mr. Morgan John O'Connell took part in the proceedings. It was announced that the Marquis of Clanricarde, the Earl of Donoughmore, the Earl of Desart, the Marquis of Londonderry, Lord Cremorne, the Earl of Kenmare, the Earl of Bessborough, Mr. Justice Hill, the Attorney-General for Ireland, Mr. W. H. Russell, Captain Agar Ellis, and Lord Palmerston had intimated their intention to enrol themselves members of the corps.—At the drill meeting of the London Scottish on Thursday in Westminster Hall Lord Elcho, the commanding officer, made some remarks on the Knickerbocker dress which appears to be very unpopular in the corps, and stated that a Government commission was about to examine the value of the Knickerbocker for military purposes, and, if advisable, to recommend its adoption by all the rifle corps in the kingdom. The directors of the Oriental Bank of London have equipped a company of about 60 strong from their establishment for this corps. Recruits are coming in at the rate of about 40 a week, and the strength of the corps is already so great that they have been obliged to secure Westminster Hall, on alternate nights with the other corps, to afford space for the drill.—A numerously attended meeting of gentlemen belonging to the Admiralty was held a few days since, at which it was unanimously resolved that a corps of volunteers should be enrolled at the Admiralty in connection with the Civil Service brigade. A Whitehall company of the Brigade is also to be formed, under the sanction of the Government, to be composed of volunteers from the various public offices in the vicinity of Whitehall.—The enrolled members of the Inns of Court corps now amount to upwards of 400, not less than 100 having been added within the last week. They are divided into five companies, composed of from 80 to 90 men each; two additional drill sergeants have been engaged, making now five; and the drill proceeds daily with great spirit.—A body of gentlemen, principally barristers, who are about to join the South Middlesex corps, and who now amount to about 50 in number, met on Friday evening in Tichbourne Street, for the purpose of enrolment and drill. Viscount Ranelagh attended, and administered the requisite oath. The Adelaide Gallery has been secured for drill, until the 23d inst., after which day they will join the main body of the corps at Beaufort House, Walham Green.—About 90 of the students of the Working Men's College in Great Ormond Street have formed themselves into a corps, and fresh accessions are made to the number daily. Mr. Thomas Hughes, the author of "Tom Brown's School-days," who has long taken a practical interest in the college, has been instrumental in organising this small force of working-men, which will probably become the nucleus of a large body enrolled from the same class of the population.—The committee appointed to organise the establishment of a rifle corps for the parish of St. Pancras held a meeting on Tuesday at the vestry hall, St. Pancras Road, at which it was resolved to commence subscriptions forthwith, and Mr. J. Shoolbred, on the part of the firm, headed it with a donation of 50*l*.—An influential meeting of the parishioners and inhabitants of St. Giles-in-the-Fields and St. George, Bloomsbury, was held on Monday, the Rev. Emilius Bayley in the chair, at which it was resolved to form a corps for those parishes.—Mr. W. H. Smith, of the Strand, has resolved to equip and pay the first annual subscription of 20 of the persons employed by him, in order that they may be enabled to join the St. Clement Danes corps.—About 250 of the artisans employed at the Royal Carriage Department at Woolwich have expressed their anxiety to commence the formation of a corps, to be composed exclusively of Government workmen, and a requisition has been forwarded to the War Department to sanction the formation of the corps.—It is intended to form a Brewers' Corps in the metropolis, and Messrs. Truman, Hanbury, Buxton, & Co. have given the first impulse to the movement by agreeing to pay the expenses of a corps formed in their establishment, the number to be at first limited to 100.—The officers and men employed at the great railway stations in the metropolis have determined to form a Railway Rifle corps. 800 persons employed at the King's Cross Station of the Great Northern have already offered themselves; and the persons employed at the Stratford station of the Eastern Counties have commenced a similar movement, and invited the inhabitants of the district to join it.—On Monday night a public meeting of the inhabitants of Southwark was held at the Literary Institution, Borough Road, with the view of adding to the effective strength of the 7th Surrey corps. It was stated that all the preliminary arrangements in connection with this body are now completed, and that the services of one company have already been accepted by her Majesty; and it is expected that other companies will shortly be formed, thus raising the Southwark and Lambeth, or 7th Surrey, to a considerable strength.—A crowded meeting was held on Monday at the Horns, Kennington, the Rector of Lambeth in the chair, at which it was resolved on the motion of the borough members and other gentlemen to form a corps for the districts of Kensington, Lambeth, and Newington, in connection with the 1st Surrey Volunteers.—A meeting of the 13th Middlesex Corps was held on Saturday at Crouch End, when Mr. James Bird was elected lieutenant, and Mr. J. M. Fletcher ensign.—The Lord Lieutenant has accepted the services of the Sydenham Corps, which now numbers 60 effective members, and has nominated Mr. John Scott Russell as the captain, Mr. J. H. Crossman as lieutenant, and Mr. William Morphew as ensign, subject to her Majesty's approval.—At Glasgow separate corps have been formed by the warehousemen, the railway clerks, and the architects, surveyors, and engineers; and the students of the University have resolved to form two or three additional companies in connection with the one already in existence.—At Manchester a third regiment is about to be formed, in addition to a Scottish Corps and a corps of the working classes.—At Liverpool the Welsh, Irish, and Scotch residents and the clerks of the Telegraph Office have resolved to form separate corps in addition to those already in operation in that port.—Meetings for the formation of new corps and for the extension of those already formed have also been held during the week at Ashburton, Ayr, Aberdeen, Brighouse, Bury (Lancashire), Buxton, Beverley, Bradford, Berwick, Bewdley, Brighton, Bakewell, Bedford, Bridgnorth, the Cinque Ports, Coldstream, Congleton, Cuckfield, Colchester, Dartford, Denbigh, Droitwich, Dalkeith, Dronfield, Durham, Easdale, Falmouth, Grantham, Glastonbury, Grimsby, Gloucester, Henley-on-Thames, Huntly (Aberdeenshire), Harwich, Horsforth, Helston, Hereford, Halifax, Harwich, Ilford, Ipswich, Jersey, Kenilworth, Kilmarnock, Kelso, Leek, Leighton Buzzard, Leiston, Lunesdale, Ledbury, Lyme Regis, Mansfield, Mottram, Monmouth, Northfleet, North Walsham, Norwich, Newark, Newtown, Otley, Perth, Poole, Prittlewell, Romford, Redcar, Rochdale, Sidmouth, Shrewsbury, St. Agnes, St. Andrews, Stamford, Saxmundham, Southampton, Tenby, Tredegar, Tunbridge Wells. Ulverston, Wells, West Kilbride (Ayrshire), Windsor, Yarmouth, and York.

VACCINATION.—A Supplement to Tuesday's Gazette contains an order in Council, prescribing regulations to be adopted in regard to vaccination. To secure the efficient performance of vaccination by persons with whom contracts are made no person is in future to be admitted as a contractor or deputy of contractors for vaccination unless he shall possess the same qualifications as are required for a district medical officer. Instructions are given to vaccinators under contract. They are only to vaccinate subjects who are in good health unless there be immediate danger of smallpox. Certain precautions are also to be adopted in regard to the lymph to be used; and certain signs are noticed to denote when the vaccination has been successfully performed. After a notification of the qualities required for public vaccinators a list of places is given where vaccination is to be performed, and also of the names of public vaccinators, who are authorised to give certificates of proficiency in vaccination.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The following is a translation of a letter addressed by M. Mocquard, in the name of the Emperor of the French, to four merchants of Liverpool, who had written to his Majesty inquiring his intentions in reference to England:—

"Palace of the Tuileries, Nov. 30.

"To Messrs. Shaw, Mellor, Irving, and Gaskell, merchants at Liverpool.

"Gentlemen,—You have addressed yourselves direct to the Emperor 'to know what were his intentions as regards England.' Great fear or great confidence alone could explain this step. On the one side, you are possessed by the imaginary trouble which appears to have seized your country with the rapidity of an epidemic; and on the other, you reckon on the loyalty of him from whom you desire a reply. It was however easy for you yourselves to give it, if you had calmly examined the true cause of your apprehensions; that cause you would have found only in all those rumours created among your fellow-countrymen by the obstinate propagation of the most chimerical of alarms; because, until now, under whatever circumstances, there has not been a word or an act of the Emperor which could permit a doubt of his sentiments, and consequently of his intentions towards your country. His conduct, invariably the same, has not ceased for one moment to show him as a faithful and irreproachable ally. That what he has been, he will (I declare it to you in his name) continue to be—witness again to-day the approaching community of perils to be shared at a great distance by your soldiers and ours. Thus henceforth, fully reassured, oppose an error too much spread. Great nations should appreciate, but not fear each other. Receive, gentlemen, the expression of my distinguished sentiments.—The Secretary of the Emperor, Chef du Cabinet, MOCQUARD."

It is decided that the Congress shall assemble in Paris on the 5th January. Among the Powers which have already sent in their adhesion are Great Britain, Austria, Prussia, Russia, Spain, Sardinia, and Portugal. The answers of Rome, Naples, and Sweden have not yet been received. Lord Cowley is to represent her Majesty's Government as first Plenipotentiary. It is stated that Austria and France have agreed that no delegate or representative of the States of Central Italy, the Governments of which are not recognised by the European Courts, shall be admitted to the Congress, either in an official capacity or with any titre officieux. The trial concerning the publication of the apocryphal letter in the Ami de la Religion terminated on Wednesday. Its responsible editor, the Abbé Sisson, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment and a fine of 1000f., and the printer to one month's imprisonment and a fine of 500f. The Opinion Nationale has received a first warning for an article containing the following phrase:—"The temporal power of the Pope is a bleeding wound in the side of the Catholic Church, and disgraces it in the eyes of the world." The Juge d'Instruction has decided that there is no ground for further proceeding in the affair of M. Girardin's pamphlet, entitled "Napoleon et l'Europe." The copies seized by the police have been returned. The Emperor has just given to M. Aladenize, formerly French consul at Nice, an estate worth 300,000f., as a return for the services rendered by that gentleman when lieutenant of infantry to Prince Louis Napoleon, whose cause he zealously supported. The Emperor had already given a handsome dower to one of the daughters of M. Aladenize.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.—Official despatches from Madrid show that the Spanish forces have been roughly handled during the late engagements. On both sides religious fanaticism has been employed, and the losses already sustained by the Spanish army have produced a painful impression throughout all ranks of society. In the affair of the 25th ult., at the Serallo, the Bourbon and Barbastro battalions were almost cut to pieces, more than 300 men were killed including 40 officers, and nearly 1000 were put hors de combat. On the 30th ult. a considerable Moorish force attacked the redoubt to the right of the Spanish encampment before Ceuta, but was repulsed by the division Grasset, directed by Marshal O'Donnell, the Commander-in-Chief; 120 men of the Spanish army were put hors de combat, and the losses of the enemy were 500 killed and 1500 wounded. The Iberia says that in the engagements between the Spaniards and the Moors which have already taken place the latter not only fought well, but were commanded by officers who evidently understand European strategy. The embarkation of troops continues incessantly at Malaga, Algesiras, and Cadiz. It was rumoured that Gen. O'Donnell will shortly return to Madrid, and that the army will remain encamped in Africa for the winter. The Duke de Montpensier's offer to serve in Morocco not having been accepted, his Royal Highness has offered to go out as a simple volunteer in the Artillery, but the offer has also been declined.

PRUSSIA.—It is said that the intended journey of the King of Prussia to England has been entirely given up. The Prussian Moniteur announces the appointment of Lieut.-General Von Roon as Minister of War. General Bonin, the late Minister, has been appointed Commander of the Rhine Provinces and Coblentz. His retirement is attributed to a difference of opinion on the new organisation of the army.

HESSE.—The differences between Prussia and Hesse Electoral are in a fair way of being settled by the friendly intervention of the Federal Diet.

DENMARK.—The new Ministry has been provisionally formed as follows:—Councillor Rottwitt, President of the Council and Minister of Justice, and also ad interim Minister for Holstein and Lauenburg; Baron Blixen Fineck, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and also ad interim for Schleswig; Major-General Thestrup, Minister of War and Marine; Councillor of State M. Westenholz, Minister of Finance; the Chamberlain, M. Jessen, Minister of the Interior.

BADEN.—The Concordat with Baden has been published, and is similar to that concluded with Austria and Wurtemberg.

AUSTRIA.—The Vienna Gazette of the 3d publishes the treaties concluded between France and Austria, and between Austria and Sardinia. The affairs of Hungary occupy the chief attention of the Government. It is felt that the agitation which prevails in that country may take a dangerous turn, and means are adopted to calm down the excitement. For that object, it is in contemplation to suppress the tobacco monopoly, which is very obnoxious to the inhabitants. The famous steeple of St. Stephen's Cathedral at Vienna is in a dangerous state. A commission is about to examine the building, and to decide whether the steeple shall be removed, or whether it can be repaired.

ITALY.—Baron Ricasoli has returned to Florence from Turin, where he has had a long conference with the Minister for Foreign Affairs. The affair of the delegation of the Regency of Central Italy to M. Buoncompagni has been arranged to the satisfaction of all parties. M. Buoncompagni will proceed immediately to Florence, with the rank of Governor-General of the League of the provinces of Central Italy. The functions of the Governor-General will extend to the command of the military forces of the line, and to the relations of Central Italy with Piedmont and the foreign Powers. The separate Governments of the provinces of Parma, Modena, and the Romagna are suppressed by a decree of Signor Farini, the Dictator, from the 8th of December. These provinces will henceforth have one sole Government, with a Ministry sitting at Modena, and a Legislative Commission and commander of the military forces of the line sitting at Bologna. The Provisional Government of Tuscany has just despatched orders to all diplomatic agents and public functionaries appointed by the Grand Duke, and being at present abroad, to return to Tuscany within a fortnight, under penalty of losing their pecuniary allotments or pensions. The Austrians evacuated Rocca d'Anfo on the 29th ult. The report that the Pope had already consented to be represented at the approaching Congress, and that his Holiness had appointed Cardinal Antonelli First Plenipotentiary, is without foundation. The King of Naples has authorised the laying of a telegraph cable between Gaeta and Corsica, by means of which Naples will come into direct communication with Paris. The Piedmontese Gazette publishes a decree nominating M. Desambrois as Minister Plenipotentiary of Sardinia to the Emperor Napoleon. The session of the Roman Council of State was opened on Saturday by the President, Cardinal di Pietro. The Financial Consulta was afterwards received by the Pope; and Cardinal Sarelli, its President, frankly explained the wishes of the Assembly. His Holiness replied that he would consider what steps are necessary to give satisfaction.

TURKEY.—A Ministerial crisis has been brought about by the dissensions between Fuad Pacha and Riza Pacha. Fuad had tendered his resignation, which was refused by the Sultan, but a permanent agreement between the two Ministers appeared impossible. Fuad Pacha is the only Minister who continues to oppose the Suez Canal. M. de Thouvenel and Baron Prokesch, the Ambassadors of France and Austria, have made joint representations in favour of M. de Lesseps, and the adhesion of the other Continental Powers to his scheme was expected, as the language of their Ambassadors was extremely favourable. The retention of from 20 to 30 per cent. of the salaries of the employés in the superior public establishments and the taxation of licences had been ordered.

RUSSIA.—The following is an extract of a letter dated St. Petersburg, the 1st inst.:—"A courier arrived to-day in 42 days from the Amoor, with great news. The Emperor of China has given the Russians notice to quit, as he had never authorised the cession of territory, and had only just heard of the settlement! Meanwhile the Russian Embassy at Pekin is 'sealed up' in its palace."

INDIA.—We have accounts from Calcutta to the 14th, and from Bombay to the 15th of November. The following are the details:—

Lucknow.—The Governor-General made his triumphal entry into Lucknow on the 22d October, and received and decorated all the Princes and higher noblesse of Oude. Two days after a grand Durbar was held, attended by the majority of the Talookdars of Oude, at which the Governor-General delivered the following speech, which has since been circulated in an official handbill all over India:—

"Talookdars of Oude,—I am glad to find myself in your country and among you, and to have this opportunity of speaking to you in the name of the Queen your Sovereign. A year has not passed away since this province was the seat of anarchy and war. The conduct of its people had been such that the Government was compelled to lay a heavy hand upon it. But peace and order are now restored to every corner of Oude, and I am come to speak to you not of the past, but of the future. You have all of you who are here present received yesterday the grants of these estates which the Government has restored to you. You will have seen by the terms of those grants that the ancient Talookdaree system of Oude is revived and perpetuated. Be assured that so long as each one of you is a loyal and faithful subject, and a just master, his rights and dignity as a Talookdar will be upheld by me and by every representative of your Queen, and that no man shall disturb them. You will also have seen by those grants that the same rights are secured on the same conditions to your heirs for ever. Let this security be an encouragement to you to spend your care, and time, and money upon the improvement of your possessions. As the Government has been generous to you, so do you be generous to those who hold under you, down to the humblest tiller of the soil. Aid them by advances of money and other indulgences to increase the productiveness of the land, and set them an example of order and obedience to your rulers. Let the same security in your possessions encourage you to bring up your sons in a manner befitting the position which they will hereafter occupy as the chiefs of Oude. Learn yourselves, and teach them to look to the Government as a father. Talookdars, I trust that there are none among you who are so infatuated as to believe that the Government has had designs against your religion. Even if there be any such, I will not condescend to repeat the assurances which they have already received on this head. I leave it to time and experience, and their own senses to dispel their perverse suspicions. But for their own sakes I warn them not to be led into acts of opposition or distrust towards the Government by the false tales of designing men. Lastly, Talookdars, whenever in any matter you have doubts to be resolved or wishes to make known, address yourselves to the Chief Commissioner. He will tell you the truth in all things. He is the high and trusted representative of the Government in Oude, and, depend upon it, he will be your best adviser and your truest friend. I wish that I could speak to you in your own language. That which I have said will now be interpreted to you, and I enjoin you to bear it in your memories."

Dwarka.—Dwarka has been evacuated by the Waghers, who availed themselves of the darkness of the night to cut their way through the outlying pickets of her Majesty's 28th Regiment on the 30th October; losing only six or seven men in this brilliant feat. The town was closely invested by about 3000 men, nearly half of whom were Europeans, but they were unable to keep the Waghers in. There were about 2000 of them, including women and children, and they removed all their valuables and one mounted gun. The whole town is a heap of ruins.

Central India.—A campaign is about to open from Neemuch against a body of rebels said to be 5000 strong, encamped in a mud fortress on the banks of the Chumbul. In Bundlecund, in the fastnesses of the hills and jungle of which Feroze Shah and a body of rebels are still hiding, the campaign has been already opened.

Nepaul.—From Nepaul it is again confidently rumoured that the Nana is dead, but considerable suspicion, of course, hangs over a story which it is so much his interest to get believed.

Calcutta.—The 45 discharged Europeans who volunteered for China have been sent back as incurably bad characters. The Buffs left for China on the 15th November.

CHINA.—Accounts from Hong Kong to the 29th October state that the new Anglo-Chinese Customs' rules have been opened, but do not work well. A part of the 68th Regiment had arrived from Calcutta. A great fire broke out in Queen's Road, Hong Kong, on the 19th October, by which property to the value of 100,000 dollars was burnt. The James Hartley steamer had been lost on the rocks 80 miles from Hong Kong; the crew and treasure were saved. The ship Inkermann, of London, had also been lost.

JAPAN.—The United States' Minister has returned to Hong Kong from Japan, and was to leave for Washington by the Powhattan on the 22d February.

CEYLON.—The Chief Justice of Ceylon is dead. There is a great scarcity of labour.

JAVA.—The second expeditionary force for Boni left Batavia on the 22d Oct. Great fears were entertained that the natives of Java would rise. Every European was well armed. Much excitement prevailed among the natives, owing to their being forced on board ship as Coolies for Boni. A conspiracy to murder the European residents had been detected at Danda.

BORNEO.—The Datoo Patingi Gapoor had been seized for plotting with the Dyak Chiefs to murder the Europeans. The Datoo was to be banished to Singapore. Tranquillity was restored on the 17th Oct.

AUSTRALIA.—The Victorian Parliament was opened on the 13th of October, and Mr. Murphy was elected Speaker without opposition. The Want of Confidence debate was to commence on the 18th of October, and a majority against the Ministers was certain. The great horse race for the championship of the Australian colonies was run on the 1st of October, before a concourse of 40,000 persons—the largest number ever assembled in Australia. The winner (Flying Buck) was a Victorian horse, and was scarcely named in the betting. Accounts from Sydney of the 15th October state that a resolution against the separation of Moreton Bay had been carried in Council. The quarter's revenue had increased 90,000*l.*, and the capital of the Bank of New South Wales had been increased 50 per cent. The Ballaarat Star reports the arrival of a donkey in that district. The incident seems to have created much excitement among the population.

NEW CALEDONIA.—Three Englishmen have been shot in New Caledonia for having provided the natives with arms against the French Government. These men were the agents of a Mr. Padden, the owner of large tracts of land in the island, who secured his safety by escaping to Sydney.

UNITED STATES.—Congress was about to assemble at Washington, and the President was busy preparing his Message, which may be expected next week. The Secretary of War received on the 25th ult. the following despatch from General Scott, dated Straits of Fuca, and sent by way of Leavenworth:—"Two days ago I despatched from Fort Townsend a communication to Governor Douglas, proposing a temporary adjustment of the existing difficulties on the basis suggested by the President in his suggestions to me. There has been no answer yet, but there is no doubt the proposition will be accepted. Everything is tranquil in these islands." The reception of General Scott at Portland, Oregon, was enthusiastic. Soon after General Scott's arrival General Harney retired from his command with undisguised disgust and anger. The British naval force, with the exception of the Satellite, had been withdrawn from San Juan. It is believed at Washington that all differences between the United States and Great Britain, growing out of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, will soon be adjusted through the agency of Mr. Wyke, English Minister to Central America. A point of the arrangement was the recent settlement of the boundary of Honduras. The excitement at Charleston continues. The Governor of Pennsylvania had tendered the services of 10,000 men to guard the boundary between Pennsylvania and Maryland; and Governor Wise had ordered 500 additional troops to be present at the execution of Brown and his colleagues. The following telegram from St. Louis, dated November 18, received per Vanderbilt, announces the discovery of a new gold field:—

"The accounts from the Carson Valley (Walker River) Mines continue to excite great attention. The mines promise to be equal to those on the Fraser River. These mines are on the east side of the Sierra Nevada, and are supposed to extend from Honey Lake, north, to Walker's River, south. The distance is 200 miles. The principal discovery announced is called the Gold Hill, a mound 60 feet high, 5000 feet long, and 2000 wide, 20 miles north of the Carson Valley, with veins of auriferous quartz. Large quantities of silver ore continue to arrive from Carson Valley."

CANADA.—The first train, consisting of an engine and single carriage, passed over the Victoria bridge at Montreal on the 24th ult. Portland has been brought within 93¼ hours of New Orleans by means of the railway connections now completed. The distance between the two cities is 2045 miles. The first mails from the Western and North and South-Western States, contracted for by the Federal Government to be carried to Europe viâ the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Ocean Line, have been brought over in this packet.

MEXICO.—It was reported at Vera Cruz on the 11th ult. that President Miramon had joined Marquez, and that both had fled on board a British steamer, taking the two millions of specie seized by Marquez, whereupon Miramon's army had pronounced for Santa Anna.

Public Addresses.

LORD TAUNTON, at a recent meeting of Somersetshire agriculturists at Taunton, made the following remarks on the National Defences:—

"They were met at a time of profound peace—they entertained no projects of invasion or conquest against any neighbour—but they could not disguise from themselves that at this moment the attention of the country was being directed to the condition of our army and navy, and to the fact that throughout the length and breadth of the land Englishmen were arming themselves. For what were they arming? Not, he was sure, to attack any one. No foreign nation need add one soldier to her standing army, or one ship to her fleet in consequence of any designs that were entertained by the people of this country. Their object in arming themselves was the most legitimate, the most sacred, the most indispensable a people could have. It was that they might be safe at home—that their own shores might be safe from insult and attack. The people of this country had watched attentively what was going on abroad. They were willing to believe in the peaceful professions of their neighbours, and they anxiously hoped those peaceful professions might be true; but at the same time, when they saw the continent bristling with bayonets—when they saw the great military Powers of Europe girding up their strength, placing their armaments on a footing unparalleled in modern times—above all, when they saw the fleets of the maritime powers of Europe increasing more and more powerfully than they had ever been, the people of England felt that it was a sacred duty on their part to be prepared for all emergencies. He, therefore, for one, heartily rejoiced and heartily sympathised with the feeling that animated his countrymen from Land's End to John O'Groats' house, bidding them to be prepared for all events. He rejoiced at any of the manifestations of this almost universal feeling. He was glad to see the people of this country watching the conduct of the Government with regard to the army and navy, and enforcing upon their rulers that whatever money was voted, and liberally voted, by the representatives of the people for these purposes, should be strictly and judiciously applied. He had no doubt that the Government of this country were fully impressed with the responsibility of their situation. He must say that a most awful responsibility would lie upon them, or upon any other Government, if, when the people were offering their most liberal assistance—money and aid of every kind—only requiring the authorities to give efficiency and concert to that assistance, they were to neglect in any degree their duty in promoting the wishes of her Majesty's subjects. He might, perhaps, be led to speak with some partiality of old and respected colleagues now in office, but he must say that he believed their present Government were fully alive to their duties on this subject, and prepared to place the army and navy of this kingdom in the most efficient state possible. The nation had felt there was a duty to be performed by the country at large as well as by the Government. Our institutions, habits, and wishes were altogether opposed to the existence of a large standing army. It had never been the custom of this country—it was not now the desire of this country—to have a single soldier more upon its shores than was absolutely necessary. What was required was that any military force we might have should be of the best possible description, and be managed in the best possible manner. The duty the people of this country could perform and were performing was to aid in protecting their country by a volunteer force. Volunteer exertion had long been a field in which English activity had been particularly conspicuous. Englishmen had been accustomed not to look to the Government to direct their efforts, but to act for themselves when they felt occasions required them to act. He was quite satisfied, consequently, that the movement lately commenced in this country would not be a mere momentary or transitory thing, but that they should never rest till they had placed the country by means of volunteer forces in such a situation of perfect safety that she would be secure against any hostile attack."

MR. T. D. ACLAND at the Taunton meeting made the following appeal to the farmers on the subject of the yeomanry cavalry:—

"It was well expressed in an article in a northern newspaper the other day, that though England was an island it was an island moored close to a continent. The Duke of Wellington said that steam had bridged over the Channel. What was true in the Duke's life was true now, and he asked the farmers of England, as men of facts and not of theory, to look the facts fairly in the face. They were a part of the great continent of Europe, and whether for good or evil they must take the consequences of the railway and the telegraph. That consequence was, that they must be in a state to defend their country, that they must have a permanent institution for self-defence, and always be in a state of preparation to meet an enemy, whether he came from our neighbours the Gauls, or from the Sclavonians. They were aware that the admiral who landed the British forces in the Crimea had given it as his opinion that 200,000 men could be landed on the south coast of Devonshire, whence they might proceed to Exeter, along that way to Bristol, and thence to London. Would any man present stand up to say that at any time they could have on the south coast of Devonshire half or even a quarter of that force if they wanted to stop the French advance? Picture, then, what would happen near the coast. Either the French army would live upon their property, or the English General, as would be his solemn duty, would set fire to all their farmsteads and drive their cattle away to Exmoor, Dartmoor, or South Wales. That must inevitably be the case. That was the way the Duke of Wellington beat the French in Spain. Now, he was the captain of a troop of yeomanry, of which he had a very high opinion; but he said solemnly, in the presence of yeomen, that unless they had better instructions and more opportunity of exercise they were not fit for such times as these. He was happy to say his troop had volunteered to go out for six days between this and their time for permanent duty. That had been done as an experiment to see if the plan would be followed up. If well-drilled, the yeomanry would be a most useful body. A plan had been laid before Government, with the full sanction of the Lord-Lieutenant of the county in which he resided, by which the farmers of the West of England might organise themselves for defensive purposes. They did not want fast young men to join, but married men, men of business, men who knew the value of time, men who would not join the yeomanry, steady and respectable men, who had good reason for not joining the yeomanry as matters now stood. The proposed plan was that these yeomen should meet somewhere near their homes for a few hours each day for practice in the use of arms. They should have a guarantee for the perfect respectability of the body, for it was intended that every new member should be proposed by two members of the body. The members would have a similar voice in the selection of their officers. The plan had met with support from practical soldiers. The only objection they had met with was a proposal that the men should meet on horseback. It was said a farmer could not shoulder his musket and walk seven miles at the close of the day's labour, when he wanted to be attending to his own stock. The matter had been taken up by a large body of yeomanry, and they were now engaged in canvassing the several towns in their neighbourhoods. He had seen quite enough of Somerset men to know what they could do. He knew they were as good as their forefathers. Men of business in the towns were making [illegible] to join the rifle corps, and the farmers should be prepared to do the same. If Englishmen were only true to themselves for the next six months they would care nothing for any threats of invasion, come from what quarter they might. He asked them not to defer making some movement. The towns had set a noble example, and in the north the volunteers were to be counted by thousands.

MR. NEWDEGATE, M.P., at a meeting at Rugby on the 24th ult. spoke as follows on public affairs and the National Defences:—

"Towards the end of the session I appeared in what has been thought an anomalous character—namely, as the defender of the property rights of the Roman Catholic laity against the attacks of Cardinal Wiseman. The Roman Catholic laity possess certain endowments for the administration of their religion, which under the free laws of England they themselves administer; but Cardinal Wiseman, through the weakness of certain parties, grasped at those trusts in a manner which could not but be considered an aggression upon the institutions of the country. There are Roman Catholics in this country as loyal as ourselves, and it was against the introduction of the Jesuit system that I defended the Catholic laity at the fag end of the session, and happily succeeded. With reference to our foreign politics, I trust that there is no fear of an invasion, but that there is a possibility that an invasion might succeed, I say upon the authority of the late Duke of Wellington. In 1847 the Duke published a letter, in which he told Sir John Burgoyne that for years he had urged upon successive governments the dangerous state of our defences, and he concluded in these emphatic terms—emphatic as coming from a man of such undoubted courage—'I thank God that I may not live to witness the consummation of those dangers which I have failed to persuade my countrymen to prevent.' And what was it he thought necessary for the effective defence of the country? He said, 'He might be deemed rash, but with 16,000 well-organised militia, a small increase of the [illegible] and a considerable increase of the artillery he would undertake the protection of England.' Well, I read that letter in the House of Commons in 1852, during the discussion upon the Militia Bill, and to the honour of Lord Derby's government and the patriotic spirit of Lord Palmerston we with much difficulty passed that measure. But remember this, 16,000 well-organised militia was the minimum that the Duke of Wellington said was necessary, and we have never had 85,000. We have, in point of fact, never had half. Looking to the state of the navy, it has been observed that it is scarcely superior to the navy of France alone, and totally unable to resist any combination. Such was the length which the apathy of this country, and the economical mania of some, actuated by the designing policy of others, have gone, that it has rendered us exposed to the aggressions of France for years. Even Louis Philippe warned her Majesty that though he would be the last man to [illegible] he could not guarantee to leave the country in such a defenceless condition, before the people of France, who in some evil hour might be incited to impel their government, in remembrance of former victories of ours, to make an inroad on our shores. It is therefore a subject of congratulation to find such a [illegible] throughout the country as is manifested in the formation of volunteer corps. As to Portsmouth, though it is generally believed that as the principal arsenal of our navy, and the port which commands the Channel, it is defended, the truth is that the defences it possesses are utterly worthless, and you could not devise a better scheme for the destruction of the garrison than the present state of its fortifications. No man with any military knowledge can doubt that under certain circumstances it would be possible to land 50,000 men upon our shores, and if they turned Portsmouth, took it in the rear, and possessed themselves of that arsenal, they would have the best basis they could procure for their operations. No doubt in the course of time we should beat them back; but remember that the experience of the Crimea has shown that the sea is the best basis of operations, and if an army [illegible] a lodgement on our coast, and we happen to lose Portsmouth arsenal, the Channel would no longer be at our command, and the 50,000 invaders might soon be augmented by 50,000 more, and 50,000 after them. And we should have hard work indeed to stop an army of 100,000 men from advancing on the capital. I do not say that this will happen, but I do say that there ought not to be a possibility of its occurring."

LOSS OF THE CANADIAN MAIL STEAMER INDIAN.—The Royal Mail screw steamer Indian, Captain Smith, one of the line of the Montreal Ocean Steamship Company, which left Liverpool on the 9th ult. for Portland, was totally wrecked on the rocks off Mary Joseph Guysboro, at the eastern extremity of the mainland of Nova Scotia, and near the Gut of Canso, on the 21st ult., at 5 o'clock in the morning. The weather was thick and stormy, and the captain being deceived by soundings supposed he was off Sable Island. The ship, which was going under full steam and canvas, struck on a sunken ledge and parted amidships in half an hour afterwards; one boat was capsized and several persons drowned; another boat was stove alongside the hull, while two boats, containing a portion of the passengers and crew, drifted to sea and had not been heard of at the latest date. 24 persons were saved by the schooner Alexander and landed at Halifax, and five others, including Mr. Bingham, the third mate, and four seamen, were picked up by the schooner Wave. The breakers raged with force on all sides of the steamer, and the schooner Lutea was also lost while running close to the wreck. Very little cargo was saved, and the passengers complain of being plundered by people from shore. The mail was saved and forwarded to Windsor, in the care of the purser.

REFORM CONFERENCE.—A conference of "those who are in favour of a real and honest measure of parliamentary reform," convened by the Parliamentary Reform Committee, was held at the Guildhall Coffee House on Wednesday. Mr. W. Hargreaves took the chair, and the meeting was addressed by Mr. E. S. Pryce, Mr. W. Jansen, Mr. Bristow, M.P., Mr. P. A. Taylor, Lord Teynham, Mr. Serjeant Parry, Mr. Clay, M.P., Mr. Bright, M.P., Mr. Lucraft, Mr. C. A. Rawlins, of Liverpool, Mr. E. Potter, Mr. H. Cosham, Mr. S. Morley, and other gentlemen. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

"1. That this conference desires to express its cordia acknowledgments to Mr. Bright, M.P., for the ability with which he has urged the question of Parliamentary Reform on the attention of the country; and for the care and labour he has bestowed, at the request of a preceding conference, in the preparation of a Bill which, in its main provisions, as set forth by him, appears eminently adapted to meet the wishes of the great body of earnest reformers throughout the kingdom. 2. That, in the judgment of this conference, no measure will be regarded as a settlement which does not include a large extension of the suffrage, both in counties and in boroughs; an equitable redistribution of seats, in proportion to the population and property of the constituencies; an assimilation of electoral laws for England, Scotland, and Ireland; the repeal of the Septennial Act; and such protection to the voter, by means of the ballot, as may arrest that corruption and intimidation which have been so fearfully prevalent in the late election, and which threaten to undermine the political institutions of the country. 3. That a subscription be opened to meet the expenses of the Parliamentary Reform Committee for the ensuing year. 4. That, inasmuch as the defeat of the obnoxious and illusory Reform Bill of the Derby Administration was accomplished by the zeal and co-operation of Parliamentary Reformers, this Conference appeals to them to continue their efforts with unsparing earnestness, and to be prepared, on the production of a new Reform Bill by the present Government, to pronounce with equal promptitude upon its fitness to satisfy the just requirements of the country."

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE TEMPLE.—In a short time considerable improvements will be commenced in the Temple for the purpose of throwing open the architecture of the Temple church. The eastern side of Inner Temple Lane is to be pulled down, and a carriage drive made from Fleet Street to the church. The whole of Church Yard Court is to come down, including the corner house, No. 1, which is the only building that escaped the ravages of the Great Fire of London in 1666. The houses near the church, facing the new buildings, which are partly converted into shops, are to be demolished, in order to make the new approach. In future it is intended that the occupancy of chambers is to be confined to members of the bar. The alterations are expected to be commenced immediately after Christmas, as all the tenants have received notice to vacate their respective chambers in the next quarter.

HARROW SCHOOL.—On Tuesday night the Rev. Dr. Vaughan, late head master of Harrow, was entertained by his pupils at dinner in Freemasons' Hall. The chair was occupied by Mr. Charles Currer, and about 250 gentlemen joined in the demonstration, including Lord Spencer, Lord Radstock, Lord Sandon, Lord Hamilton, Lord Eustace Cecil, Lord Mahon, Mr. Abel Smith, M.P., the Hon. E. Ashley, the Hon. Reginald Capel, Mr. Spencer Percival, Mr. Vaughan Hawkins, Mr. Ralph Earle, and Hon. E. Chandos Leigh. In returning thanks for the toast of his health, Dr. Vaughan said:—

"The present was a marked, a peculiar, in one sense an unprecedented occasion. In ordinary cases the connection between a head master and his school was broken by one of these causes—death, failing strength, ecclesiastical preferment. It had been his ambition to add a fourth, and to allow it to be said that one man at least had left the school where he had served during a considerable part of his working life, at the very summit of its prosperity. He need hardly say that the life of a head master was a very fatiguing as well as a very responsible one. It had to know long days and short nights; it had to verify and illustrate a beautiful passage of Scripture—'There were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.' It was a life at all times of great anxiety. To control something like 3 0 human wills, especially if they were young wills, subject to every gust of temper and passion, must always be a difficult, arduous, and anxious task. In such a life, indeed, teaching was a relaxation. The hours he spent with his sixth form were the lightest he had known in the service of Harrow. Moreover, the life of a public school was a somewhat precarious one. The public judgment was not always just. A school might rise and might fall, and in neither case entirely by its own merits. His great master, Dr. Arnold, intended to have availed himself of the close of his 15th year of service for the same purpose of stepping not upward, but backward on the ladder of human advancement. But the execution of his design was prevented by death, which removed him from among the living at the end of his 14th year. What Dr. Arnold did not live to accomplish he had been permitted to do. It had always been his intention to retire at the close of 15 years. Unquestionably circumstances might have prevented him from carrying his resolution into effect. If the school had been exposed to difficulties from without, or if there had been any cause of peculiar anxiety within, he should have remained at his post. Never would he have thrown difficulties upon his successor which he was unable or too timid to face himself. Pecuniary considerations of course could not be overlooked, and he frankly stated that a year ago he should not have had the means of living in retirement. But when he saw that, with a due regard to the safety of the school, and in common prudence as respected himself, he might resign his post, his resolution was soon taken. The friends whom he consulted approved his intention, and one of them, a person of great distinction in the public service, told him that having been blessed with 15 years of remarkable prosperity he ought to tempt fortune no longer. He had always been a great lover of completeness. He liked to see a round period, a finished work, and he had from the first intended to quit Harrow at the exact end of 15 years, which to his mind was a very different thing from leaving it at the end of 15 years and a-half, or at the end of 17 years. He had always likewise been a lover of decision. The most important events of his life had been brief, rapid, almost sudden. In September, 1840, he commenced his residence in London as a student of law, and in September, 1841, he was a clergyman in full orders, and incumbent of a populous parish. In November, 1844, he was quietly pursuing his parochial duties, and in January, 1845, he was installed in the chair at Harrow and busily engaged in the administration of its affairs. If, then, in August, 1859, he formed the deliberate conviction that he could with safety and propriety retire from Harrow at the close of the year, they need not be surprised to find him in January, 1860, the occupant of a humble home in the parish of Southborough, near Tunbridge Wells."

It was announced in the course of the evening that it is intended to establish a Vaughan Library at Harrow, for the use of about 100 of the upper boys of the school. The cost is estimated at 4000*l.*, of which a half has been already subscribed. One of Dr. Vaughan's pupils has contributed the munificent sum of 1000*l.*

THE MORTARA CASE.—Signor Mortara, the Jewish father whose child is detained by the Pope in confinement at Rome, has just arrived in this country after passing a fortnight in Paris. On Friday last he had an interview with the committee of the Evangelical Alliance, and expressed in warm terms his obligation to the committee for having originated the movement for the liberation of his child. The precise course to be taken by Signor Mortara and his friends to influence the Congress of Paris in favour of the religious liberty of Italian Jews has not yet been decided upon.

THE GREAT EASTERN STEAMSHIP.—In consequence of the recent reports of the surveyors exaggerated rumours have been in circulation respecting the great ship, which have produced something like a panic among the shareholers of the company. In order to afford complete information respecting the actual condition of the ship, and the financial position of the company, an extraordinary meeting of the shareholders has been called by the directors for the 15th inst., at which the chairman will propose the appointment of a committee of shareholders for the purpose of instituting a thorough investigation into the affairs of the company from its formation, and of throwing some light on the circumstances which have tended to depress the property. Mr. Lever has made an offer for the purchase of the ship on the following terms, 60,000*l.* to be paid down to form a working capital to complete the ship, to charter her for 12 months, pay the shareholders 5 per cent. in advance, and to have the option of purchasing the ship for 330,000*l.*, being the amount of the capital of the present company. The Southampton Chamber of Commerce have determined on inviting the directors of the company to a grand commercial banquet. In addition to Lord Elgin and several other distinguished personages, Lord Palmerston has accepted an invitation to be present, and has stated that some time at the end of the present month will be most convenient to him. The precise day for holding the banquet has not yet been fixed.

MEETING OF THE CLERGY AND LAITY IN THE EAST OF LONDON.—On Monday evening an important meeting of the clergy and laity of the east end of London was held at Rokeby House, Stratford, for the purpose of concerting measures for extending the machinery more effectually throughout the diocese. The meeting was one of the series which the Bishop of London intends holding in the various rural deaneries of his diocese, and of which the late meeting at Ealing was the first. The Bishop presided and addressed the meeting at some length, recommending to their support the Diocesan Home Mission, the Diocesan Church Building Society, and the Diocesan Board of Education, and expressing an earnest hope that clergy and laity would henceforth combine energetically, according to an organised plan, for the extension of the influence of the Church throughout the diocese. Mr. W. Cotton, late Governor of the Bank of England, Mr. Money Wigram, Rev. T. Jackson, Mr. John Davis, Archdeacon Hale, Mr. Fowell Buxton, and the Rev. A. J. Ram afterwards addressed the meeting, and resolutions were unanimously adopted pledging the meeting to do all in their power to co-operate with the various diocesan societies already in operation; and to assist in forming ruridecanal associations where they do not at present exist, consisting of clergy and laity who may be willing to co-operate. Earlier in the day a private meeting of the Bishop and clergy, forming a ruridecanal chapter, was held, at which the clergy resolved to preach annual sermons on behalf of the societies indicated by the Bishop.

THE STATUE OF RICHARD CŒUR DE LION.—Baron Marochetti's statue of Richard I., the model of which was exhibited in 1851 in Hyde Park, and became so familiar to visitors to the Great Exhibition in that year, is about to be placed in Palace Yard, in the large open space opposite to the peers' entrance to the new palace at Westminster.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.—The Dean and Chapter have decided that the organ, which has been recently taken down for enlargement, shall not again be erected over the entrance to the choir. It is proposed to take away the present screen, and on the removal of the monuments of Lord Nelson and Lord Collingwood to some other part of the Cathedral to throw the whole space, to the verge of the dome area, open to the choir. This will be a great improvement as regards the increase of room—so much wanted on Sundays for the afternoon services, and also by its making all the three arches perfect in the choir. The organ will be retained in its present case, which was designed by Sir Christopher Wren, and will be removed to the gallery under the centre arch on the north side. The oak screen, with its marble columns, will be placed as an entrance to the dome area in the south transept. The rails of the Whispering Gallery and the heavy cornice under it have been recently gilded, which gives a splendour to the dome that is very striking. Since the organ has been taken away, the choral services and anthems have been sung without accompaniment by the vicars-choral and choristers in the early morning chapel at the western entrance.

VICARAGE OF ST. PANCRAS.—The Rev. Thomas Dale having announced his intention of resigning the vicarage of St. Pancras at the close of the present year, memorials signed by several hundreds of the parishioners and also by the clergy of the parish have been presented to him, earnestly requesting him to reconsider his determination, and if possible to continue at his post in order that he may be able to carry out the scheme of parochial church extension which he inaugurated, and which he has so successfully developed. Mr. Dale in reply has expressed his sense of the compliment paid to him, and his conviction that it is his duty to adhere to his intention of resigning, in order that the parish, which is far beyond the powers of any one man, may at once be divided into five separate incumbencies. The Bishop however had intimated to him that it would facilitate the passing of an Act of Parliament for the division of the parish if he retained the vicarage until the Act had passed. This he had agreed to do, and he was therefore spared the pain of fixing any day for his separation from the parish. The living, which is worth about 1200*l.* a year, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and, when vacant, will be conferred on the Rev. W. Champneys, of Whitechapel.

THE NEW STREET FROM SOUTHWARK TO WESTMINSTER.—The Metropolitan Board of Works, having purchased a large number of houses on the line of the new street from Southwark to Westminster, have issued notices stating that in a few days the first portion of the property will be sold. This will consist of a large number of houses on the west side of High Street, Borough, below the Town Hall, most of which have been built little more than 20 years, and are in good condition. As soon as these houses are taken down and removed a further sale will take place, the Board intending to proceed with the construction of the new line of street as rapidly as possible.

MONUMENT TO MR. BRUNEL.—A meeting of gentlemen, most of them members of the profession of which the late Mr. Brunel was so distinguished an ornament, has been held to consider the propriety of erecting a suitable monument to perpetuate his name and the memory of his genius and public services. The Earl of Shelburne took the chair, and the meeting was addressed by the Recorder of London, Mr. H. T. Hope, Mr. St. George Burke, Mr. Joseph Locke, M.P.; Mr. Errington, C.E.; Mr. Fowler, Mr. Hawkshaw, C.E.; Mr. Thomas Woollcombe, Chairman of the South Devon Railway; Mr. M'Clean, C.E.; Mr. Wyatt, and other gentlemen. The following resolution was unanimously adopted, and a committee appointed to carry it into effect:—

"That, in order to mark the high sense universally entertained of the genius and professional attainments of the late Mr. Brunel, as exemplified in his great public and national works, as well as of the worth of his private character, measures be taken for the erection of a public monument to his memory."

ST. GEORGE'S-IN-THE-EAST. — The three services on Sunday passed off with less interruption than usual, and the arrangements of the churchwardens and police prevented any renewal of the rioting in the chancel. It is hoped therefore that the fierce party spirit which has hitherto prevailed is beginning to subside. Three young men were brought before the magistrates of the Thames Police Court on Friday, charged, under an old Act of Queen Mary, with having disturbed the services on the previous Sunday by saying the responses in a loud tone of voice, and thereby interrupting the chanting. After hearing evidence at great length, Mr. Selfe said that there was a difficulty in the case, as the rubric permitted the responses "to be said or sung;" he should therefore endeavour to bring about a reconciliation by adjourning the cases for three weeks in the hope that in the meantime proper good sense and Christian feeling would prevail, and there would be no more of these disturbances. On Saturday the Rev. Bryan King, the rector, applied to the Consistory Court for the office of the judge to be promoted against two persons called Rosier and Chester for brawling in the church. The judge granted the application in the case of Rosier and refused it in the other. The Rev. Mr. Lowder, the curate, has since been summoned to the police court and fined 2s. for assaulting Mr. Sones, one of the parishioners, the magistrate expressing his belief that a religious principle did not actuate either of the parties. At a vestry meeting on Thursday it was unanimously resolved to petition the Houses of Lords and Commons on the state of the parish; and a requisition has been presented to the churchwarden, calling on him to convene a meeting of the parishioners to petition the Queen for the removal of the Rev. B. King from the office of rector. The Rev. Hugh Allen, the afternoon lecturer, has been appointed by the Lord Chancellor to the rectory of St. George's, Southwark.

The Loss of the Royal Charter.—Mr. Mansfield, the stipendiary magistrate at Liverpool, and Capt. Harris, the nautical assessor, have transmitted to the Board of Trade a long report on the results of their late inquiry into the loss of this vessel. They state that the iron plating of the vessel was decidedly above the average strength of the plating used for shipbuilding, that the anchors and cables were free from objection, and that the ship was seaworthy and fully equal in strength to the average of ships of her class built in 1855. They say that it is to be lamented that the masts were not cut away when the anchors were let go, as it is evident that with the top hamper aloft the steam power was inadequate to keep the ship under command; but they at the same time notice the probability that the captain was deterred from this course by the apprehension that the falling rigging and spars might foul her screw, thus repeating the catastrophe undergone by the Prince, in 1854, off Balaklava. They also express an opinion that it is a dangerous practice to steam ahead to the anchors in a gale of wind and in a seaway. "A gale of wind," they observe, "is not uniform in strength, but there are moments of comparative lull. During these the steam power not being readily controlled is apt to shoot the ship ahead. After this, when a violent gust occurs, the ship drops astern, bringing up with a sudden and a severe jerk on her cables—a kind of strain most likely to make them part. It is not impossible that such may be the true explanation of the parting of the cables of the Royal Charter." In conclusion they say that the officers and crew to the last were indifferent to the preservation of their own lives, and solely intent on their duty. Taking into account the unexampled fury of the gale, which entirely neutralised the powerful action of the screw propeller, so that the ship was no longer under command—a circumstance which Captain Taylor could not have anticipated; and considering also the apprehension he may have entertained, while at anchor, that the masts would foul the screw if they were cut away, and possibly that the action of the screw to ease the cables could not be safely intermitted—they do not think that this is a case in which they could report that the ship was lost by the default of the master.—The marine department of the Board of Trade have awarded Rogers, the Maltese seaman who swam from the vessel with a rope to the shore, the sum of 10*l.* and a silver medal for his gallantry in saving life before the ship broke up. On Monday afternoon the lumps succeeded in lifting the starboard quarter of the vessel, when the divers recovered 12 boxes and 12 bags of gold, besides several loose ingots, of a total value of at least 80,000*l.* On Tuesday 39 bars of gold, 2000 loose sovereigns, a quantity of gold dust, mixed with clay and sand, and several broken ingots of gold were recovered. The whole amount saved is about 180,000*l.*, being nearly one-half of the gold which was shipped on board the vessel. Several bodies have been washed ashore during the week, but very few could be identified. Among those who have been recognised, chiefly by the marks on their linen, were Mrs. Pitcher, Mrs. J. M. Murray, Edward P. Sanson, Matthew Scott, and Mrs. F. R. Munro.

The Finsbury Murder.—The adjourned inquest on the body of Mary Ann Moore was resumed on Saturday when Mr. Mather, divisional surgeon, and Dr. Letheby were examined, and expressed their opinion that the woman was stunned first by the tongs and poker, and that her head was then severed from her body. The coroner stated that he had applied for the attendance of the prisoner before the jury, and had received a reply stating that the Secretary of State had no power to grant them such an application. The foreman and jury declared that they would refuse to give any verdict unless the prisoner was brought before them, and the inquiry was accordingly adjourned. On Monday the prisoner was taken before the jury, and was afterwards examined before the magistrate. He was in a very excited state, and refused to allow a solicitor to act for him, saying that he could examine the witnesses upon various points better than any one, and that he was not labouring under any delusions. Mr. Mather the police surgeon, however, deposed that the prisoner had sent for him in his cell in order to make a private communication to him, and had told him that he had a tumour in his inside filled with steam or wind; and Dr. Dixon, of the Hoxton Lunatic Asylum, deposed that he had been confined in that place for more than a year, during which period he was subject to mania, with delusions of a limited character, believing that he had an engine in his inside, and that he had been electrified by wires passed round his cell. After some further evidence relating to the weapon with which the murder was committed, and to the general conduct of the prisoner to his wife, Mr. D'Eyncourt ordered a remand for the purpose of completing the depositions, on hearing which the prisoner insisted upon his solicitor applying for bail, and there was some difficulty in assuring him such an application would be useless. On Tuesday he was again brought up, and formally committed to Newgate for trial on the charge of Wilful Murder.

Double Suicide.—On Monday evening Mr. Humphreys held an inquest in the East Road, City Road, on Edmund Shirley, a photographer, aged 24, and Rosetta Greenwood, aged 18, who had poisoned themselves at the Railway Coffee House in the City Road by drinking a solution of cyanide of potass, used by photographers in their business. It appeared from the evidence that the deceased were recognised by their families as lovers, and that in consequence of some disputes connected with a stepmother the young man had been forbidden his father's house. In a state of desperation he told a friend of the family that as he had no shelter or home he should destroy himself, and the young woman who was with him declared that she would never leave him upon earth but would die with him. They went on the same night to the coffee house and engaged a bed, and as nothing was heard of them on the next morning, the door was broken open by the police, when they were found quite dead, the girl lying on her back with a white pocket handkerchief in her right hand, as though she was asleep: and the man with his right arm round the girl's waist. At the side of the bed was a tumbler and bottle labelled "poison," and two letters, one from the man to his father, the other from the girl to her aunt with whom she lived in Praed Street, Paddington, both announcing their intention to destroy themselves. The jury, after a short deliberation, returned a verdict in each case of "Death from the mortal effects of poison taken while in a state of unsound mind."

The Public Health.—The Registrar-General's return states that the number of deaths registered in London in the week that ended Saturday, Dec. 3, was 1304, being nearly the same as that returned for the preceding week. In the corresponding weeks of the ten years 1849-58 the average number was 1233; which, if raised in proportion to the increase of population, will become 1356. The present return is therefore 52 below the average. During the week the births of 915 boys and 912 girls, in all 1827 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1849-58 the average number was 1609.

Bath.—The Master of the Rolls has recently made an order of some interest in respect to an unclaimed fund of large amount in the Court of Chancery, belonging to the hospitals of Bath. It appeared that about 1790 a legacy of 500*l.* was bequeathed by General Joseph Smith to the Bath hospitals, and a similar sum of 500*l.* to the Madras Charity School for soldiers' children, and that the affairs of the testator were administered under the direction of the Court of Chancery. The money was set aside to meet the legacy, but, from some unexplained cause, no application had ever been made for it. During the long period of nearly 70 years the legacy had now accumulated to 3914*l.* in Bank Stock and 3158*l.* cash in the Bank of England, which sums the Court has ordered to be divided into two equal moieties, one moiety to be divided equally between Bellett's Hospital, the Bath Mineral Water Hospital, and the Bath United Hospital, and the other moiety to be carried to the account of the Madras Charity School, as at present represented by the Military Orphan Asylum at Madras.

Birkenhead.—The Birkenhead Commissioners held a special meeting on Tuesday for the purpose of taking into consideration a proposal made by Mr. John Laird to establish a naval arsenal in this neighbourhood. The following resolution was passed on the subject:—

"That the establishment of one of the Government dockyards and arsenals in the neighbourhood of Wallasey Pool, as proposed by Mr. Laird, would, in the opinion of the Board, be of advantage to the public as well as local interests, and that Mr. Laird therefore be authorised and requested to seek the co-operation of the members for Lancashire and Cheshire, of the Mersey Docks Board, and all other interests concerned, and to take such other steps as he shall deem expedient to give further effect to his proposal."

Cambridge.—A county meeting numerously attended, in behalf of the Cambridgeshire Auxiliary of "The United British Army Scripture Readers and Soldiers' Friend Society," was held on Friday in the town hall, the Earl of Hardwicke, Lord Lieutenant of the county, in the chair. The special object of the meeting was to send out and maintain at Lucknow a Scripture reader from Cambridgeshire, to be designated "The Sir Henry Lawrence Scripture Reader." Among those present were the Countess of Hardwicke, the Earl of Shaftesbury, Sir John Lawrence, General Lawrence, and Lieut.-Colonel Pitcairn, who attended as a deputation from the parent society; the Rev. Professor Selwyn, the Rev. C. Clayton, the Rev. O. T. Thorpe, the Rev. F. Chalmers, Mr. R. B. Williams, &c. Sir John Lawrence, who was received with great applause, said in his speech, speaking of his brother, "I need scarcely say that he was the originator and founder of the 'Lawrence Asylum,' at Sunawn, in the Simla Hills, Northern India—an institution established solely for the benefit of the orphans of British soldiers. For many years it was maintained almost entirely by private subscriptions, and no one contributed so bounteously as my brother did. From first to last his contributions exceeded 10,000*l.*, and it was partly through his influence that the asylum was liberally supported by others. At the time of his death 340 orphans were clothed, fed, and educated within its walls. There, in a climate which accords with the European constitution, these children lived and flourished, receiving an education which fitted them for the career in life they were to follow. This institution has been enlarged, and 10,000*l.* per annum allowed for its support, which will cover the expense of 500 children." Resolutions in favour of the establishment of a Scripture reader at Lucknow were unanimously adopted.—A meeting of clergy and laymen was held a few days since at Cambridge, at which it was resolved "That the persons present form themselves into a 'Church Defence Association;'" and also that the objects of the Association should be—1. The circulation by means of pamphlets and newspaper articles of information respecting the position, rights, and claims of the Church. 2. The furnishing replies to all attacks made upon the Church, and especially those of the Society for the Liberation of Religion from State Control; and 3. The presentation of petitions to Parliament in all cases when such a course should seem desirable.

Canterbury.—A case of wholesale poisoning has been under investigation by the magistrates of this city. A young man who had taken a black draught purchased at the shop of Mr. John Reeve, chemist and druggist, died suddenly last week, and as the surgeons believed that he had died of epilepsy, the jury returned a verdict of Natural Death. An inspector of police, however, having suspicions of the case, bought a similar draught at Mr. Reeve's shop, and was afterwards called upon by Mr. Reeve, who offered to pay him money, and even to keep him and his family if he would give it up. The officer refused, and reported the facts to the superintendent. The contents of the bottle were then analysed and found to contain one of the strongest preparations of opium. After hearing this evidence the magistrates committed Mr. Reeve for trial at the assizes on the charge of manslaughter, but admitted him to bail. Since this occurred, fresh facts have come to light, and there is reason to believe that other persons who have recently died suddenly in Canterbury and the neighbourhood have been poisoned in the same way. One of the bodies having been exhumed in order that a post mortem examination may be made, an inquest was opened upon it, but though the essential principle of opium was found in the body, the medical men stated that they could not ascertain whether the opium had been taken in sufficient quantity to cause death. The jury therefore returned a verdict of "Natural Death."

Chatham.—The Commissioners in Lunacy have paid a visit to Chatham garrison, for the purpose of instituting an investigation in connection with the recent case of discharging an insane soldier from the lunatic hospital at Fort Pitt, and turning him adrift in the public streets. The Commissioners during their visit placed themselves in communication with the military authorities, and also with the officials connected with the Poor-law, and from what has transpired it would seem that the Commissioners expressed themselves decidedly opposed to the course adopted by the authorities under the orders of the Government.

Chippenham.—A very full meeting of the committee appointed some time since to consider the best mode of putting the hiring of agricultural servants on a better footing was recently held in this town. Sir J. Neeld took the chair, and many of the leading gentlemen and farmers of the neighbourhood were present. A declaration signed by 140 of the principal clergy, landowners, and farmers of the neighbourhood was read, pledging themselves to discountenance in every way in their power the present mode of hiring servants, and to use their best exertions to induce young men and women to avail themselves of the facilities offered them by the proposed system of registration. After considerable discussion the following resolutions were carried unanimously:—

"That in lieu of the present mops or hiring fairs held at Chippenham at Lady Day and Michaelmas, a central register office for servants be established at Chippenham, with branch offices at the following places, to communicate with the central office, namely, — Box, Colerne, Christian Malford, Castle Coombe, Corsham, Calne, Dauntsey, Grittleton, Lacock, Hillmarton, Stanton St. Quintin, Somerford Magna. It was also resolved that the clergy in each of the above-named parishes be requested to recommend to the committee a proper person to act as registrar, to assist the secretary in providing the necessary books and forms, and to make such other arrangements as may be required to enable them to carry out the proposed system of registration. It was further resolved that servants on entering their names for a situation should pay 6*d.*; that masters or mistresses on procuring a servant should pay 1*s.*; that returns be made by the several branch offices to the central office at Chippenham at least once a month, and as much earlier as circumstances will admit."

Devonport.—Col. Greene and Mr. Wilberforce surveyed the land to the north of the steam-yard at Keyham last week, with a view to the extension of that establishment. The land in question belongs to the St. Aubyn estates, and the foreshore belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall. It includes Weston Mill Creek, which is close to the powder-works at Bull Point. Should the Government succeed in making the purchase, it will then possess nearly all the Devonshire coast of Hamoaze, from Plymouth Sound to the Albert Bridge at Saltash.

Exeter.—A meeting of churchmen was held in this city on Friday, for the purpose of adopting a petition to Parliament in favour of church-rates. The Rev. H. Sanders, rural dean, presided; and among those present were the Right Hon. Sir J. T. Coleridge, Sir Stafford Northcote, Bart., M.P.; Sir E. S. Prideaux, Bart.; Mr. Kekewich, M.P.; Admiral Moresby, Archdeacon Bartholomew, and the Hon. and Rev. J. Fortescue. Sir John Coleridge moved the first resolution, to the effect that the meeting viewed with great regret the repeated attempts to procure the unconditional abolition of church-rates, and spoke to the following effect:—

"He maintained that their 'title' to church-rates was unquestionable. We have had the question of church-rates before the judges of the law again and again; and what has been the result? The result has been that in the Court of Queen's Bench, in the Exchequer Court, and in the House of Lords, without a single dissentient voice, even when they have decided against the maintenance of a particular rate, not one judge has been found who has not laid it down (ay, and the same law has prevailed in Doctors' Commons, in the ecclesiastical courts), that by the common law of England the burden of repairing the nave of the church lay with the parishioners. When you come to examine it, who may be said truly to pay the rate? Why, clearly the landowners of the country, the owners of land, and not the occupiers. I know very well that in point of form the rate, for the purposes of collection, is upon the occupier of land; but suppose at this moment that the rates were done away with. Let me address you, gentlemen, who hold land from the landowner. Does not the tenant consider that the rates are an outgoing upon the estate, and when he takes his estate, when he settles with his landlord, does he not consider the rates and taxes which he has to pay, and does he not include in them church-rates? But there is still another observation to be made. I deny that either the landowner or the occupier pays the rate It is a charge upon the estate which existed before he took the land. It never was his, and if you were now to abolish the rate you would be making a present to the landowners of this country of the value of that rate. It has been calculated—it may be a rough calculation, but it is enough for our purpose—that the church-rate of the kingdom amounts to about 300,000*l.* a year. [Archdeacon Bartholomew: 350,000*l.*] Sir. J. Coleridge: Well, I will take it at 300,000*l.*, multiply that by 30 years' purchase, and you get a sum of 9,000,000*l.* I do not hesitate to say that it would be 9,000,000*l.* put into the pockets of the land for nothing. It would be giving them that which they had not before if the church-rate was abolished. The history of this fight is curious. It began with a proposition for substituting something for church-rates; and again and again a scheme was proposed; but nobody was ingenious enough to frame a scheme that was satisfactory. And because you cannot do justice, you will do the greatest possible injustice. Support therefore the Church here and elsewhere, and among your friends; and try to excite a feeling among churchmen to declare with one voice, 'We will not surrender the Church of our fathers into the hands of any one whatever.' We have no right to surrender it. Creatures of a day, our interest in the church will pass away. We have been baptised in it, we have carried our children there, we go Sunday after Sunday to hear the word of God, and from time to time receive the Holy Communion; and we trust to lie in the yards of our parish churches. We are but creatures of a day, but we are trustees for others. We are trustees for our forefathers who have gone before us. They sleep around and in those churches; we are trustees for the precious associations connected with their memories, but we are also trustees for those who are to come after. The treasure which we have received we are bound by God's grace to hand down, untouched, to those who come after us. Do not let it be said that we have done anything to weaken that strong hold which the Church of England has upon the hearts and feelings of this nation."

The Ven. Archdeacon Bartholomew seconded the resolution, which was carried. Sir S. Northcote, M.P., in proposing the adoption of a petition to Parliament, said: "I go so far as to say that if we had not church-rates it would be necessary to invent them, because I do not see how we can more satisfactorily provide for the maintenance of religious worship throughout the country. It is all very well to talk of populous districts, where there may be other means to accomplish the purpose, but if you are really anxious to maintain the Church throughout the length and breadth of the land, you must come to a system of rating." Mr. W. H. Peters seconded the resolution, which was also carried unanimously.

LEEDS.—The late Mr. J. Redfearn, chief cashier of the Leeds Banking Company, who died suddenly in a railway carriage near Wakefield, while on his return with his wife and children from Hastings a few weeks ago, has been found a serious defaulter at the bank. It appears that after his death his post at the bank was duly filled by the next clerk in rank, who soon discovered a very serious falsification in the accounts. Mr. Redfearn, as cashier, had charge of the London agency account with Messrs. Smith, Payne, & Smith, of London. In this account falsifications have been discovered to the amount of nearly 13,000*l.* The exact mode in which this was effected has not been allowed to transpire, but it is understood that the "cooking" has been managed in a manner which only an experienced accountant could have devised. As soon as the discovery became known a meeting of the directors was held, when the deceased's pecuniary position at the time of his death was carefully considered. It was then found that Mr. Redfearn's personal and real estate—to be made available for the loss—amounted to nearly 4000*l.*, which will leave the bank a loser to the extent of 9000*l.*

LIVERPOOL.—The local papers state, in reference to the recent correspondence between the four merchants of Liverpool and the Emperor of the French, that the letter in question was concocted in a railway carriage and written by the four gentlemen while enjoying the pleasures of a "full board" one evening, about a fortnight since. It is alleged that the letter was so laconic in its terms, and so discourteous in its intention, that although a copy is in existence, the holders refuse to give it publicity. On Friday, when the reply of the Imperial Secretary arrived, not one of the four could read it, as it was written in the French language. The conduct of the writers of the letter to the Emperor has been met with a hearty denunciation by nearly all the local papers. The affair also appears to be assuming a more serious aspect than the writers could have anticipated. The Law Society of Liverpool, having on Wednesday discussed the matter, came to the following resolution:—"That the president be requested to inform her Majesty's Attorney-General that, in case it be the intention of her Majesty's Government to take any proceedings against the four Liverpool merchants who recently made a communication to the Emperor of the French, this committee will be happy to render the Attorney-General any assistance in its power." It turns out that the "four merchants" have been guilty of petty treason; and some persons insist that, for the credit of the nation, a prosecution against them should be instituted. The names of the four merchants are Mr. Godfrey B. Shaw, cotton broker; Mr. Henry Gaskell, of the firm of Sleigh, Gaskell, & Co.; Mr. Frederick Irving, of the same firm, produce brokers; and Mr. Samuel Mellor, of the firm of Mellor & Southall, in the Brazil trade.

NORWICH.—On Thursday the city magistrates were engaged for nearly four hours in further hearing the charge preferred against Mr. Albert J. Collins, of conspiring with Mr. Henry Croxford and others to bribe Mr. Joel Fox, by offering him 500*l.* to vote for eight Tory aldermen on the 9th November. After a long and desultory discussion, the examination of several witnesses, and the speeches of counsel, the Mayor said there were three courses open to the magistrates—first, to commit Mr. Collins for trial; secondly, to dismiss the case; and, thirdly, to call upon Mr. Collins to enter into recognisances to answer any charge which might be preferred against him. On these questions the magistrates retired to consult in private, and it was decided by a majority of 15 to 6 not to commit the defendant, but, at the same time, it was determined by 12 to 10 to call upon him to enter into two recognisances of 250*l.* each, and himself in 500*l.*, to answer any future charge. On this decision being announced, Mr. Serjeant Ballantine said he should advise his client to decline entering into the proposed recognisances, except under protest, and until he had been taken into custody by force. This "force" having been theoretically exhibited by one of the officers of the court laying his hand on Mr. Collins, the recognisances were entered into. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine then announced that it was not his intention to offer any evidence to support the charge of bribery at the general election preferred against Sir W. Foster and the Messrs. Wilde. Mr. Askew, solicitor, also withdrew, amid laughter, the counter-charges preferred by the Liberals against Sir Samuel Bignold, Captain Ives, and other Conservatives.

PORTSMOUTH.—The trial of the 108 prisoners who were the objects of the fifth Court-martial in connection with the outbreak on board the Princess Royal terminated on Friday, when the Court found the first charge proved, and the second charge not proved; but in consideration of the peculiar circumstances of the case, they only sentenced the prisoners to three months' imprisonment with hard labour. On Thursday evening Captain Farquhar read on the quarter-deck of the Victory a letter addressed to the Commander-in-chief, by the direction of the Lords of the Admiralty, in which their lordships stated, "that having taken into consideration the paragraph appended to the sentence of the Court on Tuesday, in which they noticed with approbation the conduct of George Hoad in remaining under the sentry's charge in the fore cockpit when released from irons by the rioters, their lordships had fully considered this expressed opinion of the Court-martial, and the previous good character of George Hoad, and had recommended her Majesty to grant him a free pardon. He is to remain on board the Victory a prisoner at large until her Majesty's pleasure is known."

RYDE.—The Bishop of Winchester has directed proceedings to be instituted against the Rev. Dunbar Heath, vicar of Brading, in the Isle of Wight, for a volume of sermons published by him in this town. Under the provisions of the 3d and 4th of Victoria, cap. 86, the Bishop has the option of sending the case in the first instance by letters of request to the Court of Appeal of the province, and this course will be adopted. Mr. Heath is known to scholars by his translation of six Egyptian Papyri previously undeciphered, and is the author of the "Future Human Kingdom of Christ," a work which has excited considerable attention in certain quarters. The doctrines impugned by the Bishop are of the same class as those held by Messrs. Maurice, Jowett, and others, and the point sought to be determined is whether these doctrines, especially that of the Atonement, are comprehended within the limits of our articles and formularies.

STOCKTON.—Messrs. Pearse & Co., of this port, have on the stocks for the Government a river steamer for India of such immense proportions that she will be the largest river steamer in the world. Her water line is 350 feet; over all 375 feet; breadth, 46 feet, and engines 200 horse-power. She will be impelled by paddles, and is expected to attain a speed of 13 miles an hour. She will contain sleeping berths and every suitable and sanitary arrangement for about 800 soldiers. She is to be flat-bottomed, and when laden will only take 2 feet of water. She is to be made of steel, and will weigh about 370 tons. Her framework will be completed in about a month, when she will be taken to pieces and fitted up entirely on the Thames, on which she will perform two experimental trips. She will then be taken to pieces again and sent to India by ship. If she be successful, it is thought a number of other vessels of this kind will be built for the transport of troops in India.

VENTNOR.—The ship Marabita from Ma[illegible] with oats and barley, was wrecked on Sunday evening in Chale Bay, 10 of her crew being drowned and 5 saved. On Monday morning the schooner Sentinel of Carnarvon then was wrecked in the same bay, and two of the crew were drowned. Both vessels have gone to pieces.

SYMPATHY FOR THE POPE.—Lord Castlerosse has addressed a letter to the requisitionists for the Killarney demonstration in favour of the Pope, stating though in common with every sincere Catholic he sympathises most deeply with the Pope in his present position, he "cannot conceal from himself that the calling together large masses of the rural population in country districts may (without giving additional weight to the expression of sympathy with the Holy Father) be construed into a menace to the home, and possibly to a foreign Government, and also give rise to alarm and distrust in the minds of our fellow-subjects who differ from us in religious opinions." He has therefore returned the requisition unsigned. Mr. James O'Connell (brother of the late Daniel O'Connell) and his son, Mr. Thomas Gallwey, and Mr. Cronin Collsman, all Roman Catholic gentlemen of position in the county, have expressed their concurrence in his lordship's views. Mr. Michael Joseph Barry, a Roman Catholic gentleman of literary attainments, a member of the Irish bar, and secretary to a late Parliamentary commission, has published a letter in the Cork Reporter in which he declares without reserve that though he sympathises sincerely with the Pope, he has no sympathy with him as a Sovereign. On the contrary, he considers that the maintenance of his rule in its existing state is a grievous infliction on his subjects, and is, so far as anything human can be so, a serious injury to Catholicism. A meeting of the Christian Doctrine Confraternity was held on Sunday in the Carmelite Church, Dublin, for the purpose of adopting an address to the Pope. The Rev. Dr. Bennett, the Provincial of the Carmelite Order, presided, and the meeting was addressed at great length by Father Fox and some of the lay brotherhood. Resolutions were adopted, pledging the meeting "to use every legitimate means in their power to counteract the treacherous and foul attempts that are now being made by base and designing enemies to overthrow not only his temporal but also his spiritual domination in those States which an all-wise Providence has committed to his charge." The Cork and Waterford demonstrations also took place on Sunday in the Roman Catholic Cathedrals. At Waterford the meeting was addressed by the bishop, Mr. Thomas Meagher, and Sir Henry Winston Barron. At Cork, the bishop, the Messrs. Murphy, Maguire, and Hennessy were the principal speakers. The following scene occurred during the speech of Dean Murphy, in which he maintained the advantage of government by priests, and concluded thus:—

"Contrast Leo X., Pauls IV. and V., Pius IV and V Gregory XVI., with the Monarchs of England—the Henries the Charleses, the Georges—(oh, oh)—monsters of lust, and imbecility, until the list was closed by her present gracious Majesty—(groans)—who has commenced a new dynasty and has given an example of virtue. (Here the cries of 'No, no,' and other expressions of disapproval rendered the reverend speaker inaudible except to those in his vicinity. A Voice—'She starved 2,000,000 of Irish.' (Hear, hear, and groans.) The speaker concluded by hoping that God would give her Majesty grace to direct her councils and see justice done to all, and especially to the Holy Pope, the Father of the Church."

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY.—A public collection was made on Sunday by order of Archbishop Cullen in all the chapels in Dublin, in favour of the Catholic University, but the result is said to have by no means answered the expectations of the promoters. In the metropolitan church (Dr. Cullen's own) the amount was about 15*l.* less than on the occasion of a former appeal, and as the collection in other quarters was also a small one, it has been determined to allow the subscription lists to remain open for a week.

MR. SMITH O'BRIEN has been delivering a series of lectures at the Mechanics' Institute on America and her institutions. The following is an extract from one of his addresses:—

"For my own part, I denounce as nefarious usurpation wherever or by whomsoever it may have been effected denounce, as a national crime, the piratic war which has been carried on against China—a war in the guilt of which, as Ireland, as well as England, is at present participating, and feel convinced that speedy retribution will avenge these crimes. Even now the fate of England hangs upon the caprice of a single individual who may be found more dangerous as a friend than he would have been as an avowed enemy. It is difficult to conjecture what would have been the fate of the Eastern empire of Great Britain if the moment of the Sepoy mutiny had been chosen as the suitable occasion for wiping out the stain upon French honour which still clings to the memories of Waterloo. If, when a moment even more propitious shall arise, the avenger of Waterloo shall strike a blow at the heart of a Power which is hated by the whole French nation—if, at such a moment, the forces of the British empire shall be scattered, and its resources exhausted in buccaneering expeditions, the people of England will repent, when it will be too late, that they lent themselves in the hour of prosperity to the rapacious and unprincipled career of plunder and usurpation."

THE GOLDSMITH MONUMENT.—The committee of the Goldsmith memorial, which is to be erected in front of Trinity College, Dublin, have decided that its execution shall be confided to Mr. Foley, R.A.

TESTIMONIAL TO CAPTAIN M'CLINTOCK.—A subscription has been opened in Dublin for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to this gallant officer, and expressive of the high esteem in which his chivalrous and daring services are held by his countrymen. The subscription is confined to 1*l.* a head.

MURDER IN WICKLOW.—The county of Wicklow, which has hitherto borne a good name, has been the scene of a frightful murder committed in the open day. On Monday week, at Mucklow, near Tinnahely, the agents of Earl Fitzwilliam were taking possession of some land from a man named Behan in order to restore the farm of an old man named Boland. Behan and his wife, with about 20 or 30 others, rushed upon Boland, threw him down the ditch, and inflicted such injuries that he died in a few minutes. When he was dead Behan danced on the road with joy, thanking God that he had "struck him dead" before "he got possession;" and five or six of the women were seen kneeling on the road praying that he might never recover, and that the priest-selling dog might never be forgiven "in this world or the next." The jury at the inquest, after deliberating for about three-quarters of an hour, found the following verdict:—"That Michael Boland came by his death from a rupture of the heart which might or might not be caused by excitement and violence which he received on Monday, the 28th November, at the hands of Richard Behan and Bridget Behan, assisted by Edward Behan, Catherine Behan, and Mary Byrne." One of the jury observed that the country could have no complaint to make against Earl Fitzwilliam, and that Mr. Lawrenson had always given general satisfaction. Behan, his son and wife, and three women who had previously been arrested, were then committed to gaol on the warrant of the coroner.

MURDER IN WESTMEATH.—On Sunday last a shocking murder was perpetrated in broad daylight at Newtown, near the village of Drumrany, 7 miles from Athlone. The victim was a man named Laurence Kelly, a comfortable farmer, holding about 300 acres of land, and who was shot dead while eating his dinner in his own house, the murderer having fired through the window. No person was at the time in the house with deceased except his man servant and housekeeper, neither of whom made any effort to secure the murderer. Death must have been instantaneous, as several slugs passed through his head and lodged in the wall of the apartment. The deceased had in the morning attended mass at the chapel of Ballymore, and was murdered immediately after his return. The jury at the inquest on Monday returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against some persons unknown.

MURDER IN DUNGANNON.—A dreadful affair occurred on Monday in the town of Dungannon. A constable, named Holden, who had for 15 years maintained an exemplary character in the police, had privately married, contrary to the rules of the service. He was on the point, however, of obtaining the permission when the fact transpired that he was already married. For this offence he was reduced to the rank and pay of a sub-constable for six months. This information was conveyed to him by a brother constable named M'Clelland, who was suspected by Holden of being instrumental in discovering the secret marriage. Acting upon this suspicion Holden fell upon M'Clelland and shot him dead. The assassin then started off, and in his flight encountered his sub-inspector coming out of a house where he had been paying a visit, and was about to mount his horse, when Holden rushed upon him and inflicted upon his head several fearful wounds with some dagger-like instrument with which he was armed. The sub-inspector, Mr. W. H. Mathew, is reported to be in an extremely precarious state. The murderer then mounted his victim's horse and rode off at a furious speed, and was not heard of till Tuesday morning, when he was arrested in the town of Dundalk, where it was supposed he was about to embark on board one of the steamers for Liverpool.

THE TOBERMORY SEQUESTRATION CASE. — The second division of the Court of Session has delivered a final judgment on the petition of Mr. Joel for recall of the sequestration granted to Mr. William Gill, at Tobermory, in the Island of Mull, in August, 1858. The petitioner sought the recall of the sequestration on the following grounds:—

"1. Because the designation of the bankrupt in the petition for sequestration was in itself so inaccurate, defective, and insufficient as to come short of the requisites of the Bankruptcy Act of 1856. 2. Because the process of sequestration was a fraudulent scheme on the part of the bankrupt to obtain his protection and discharge without due notice to his creditors, and without allowing them due facilities for protecting their interests."

The judges, by a majority of three to one, dismissed the petition, holding that the designation given by the bankrupt, though not full, was sufficient, there being no special statutory designation requisite, and that the allegations of the present petitioner were insufficient to support a case of fraud. Lord Benholme dissented from the judgment, holding the designation to be imperfect; and Lord Wood was absent. Subsequently Lord Ivory, in relation to an analogous case, expressed regret that the Tobermory proceedings were not laid before the whole Court. It is now said that the question is to be carried by appeal to the House of Lords.

Railways.

NEW CITY OF LONDON LINE.—Notice of intended application to Parliament has been given for authority to incorporate a company to construct a railway from the Grand Junction Canal, Paddington, to Moorgate and Finsbury Square, and Limehouse, and to form junctions with the North London at Camden Town and the Great Northern near Maiden Lane; to enter into traffic and other arrangements with those companies, and to purchase the Regent's Canal and convert it into a railway.

THAMES TUNNEL LINE.—It is intended to apply to Parliament for power to construct a railway from the London, Brighton, and South Coast, and South Eastern Lines, passing through the Thames Tunnel to the London and Blackwall. It is proposed to purchase the Tunnel, and to authorise the Brighton, South Eastern, London and North Western, Eastern Counties, and North London Companies to subscribe to the undertaking, and to make traffic arrangements.

Law.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER Pentallow v. The Mersey Harbour and Docks Company.—The Great Liverpool Shipping Case. This case, which has been before the Court two days, terminated yesterday afternoon shortly before five o'clock, when the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, with £1200 damages, the amount claimed by him for the injury sustained by his vessel.

THE ASSIZES.—NORTHERN CIRCUIT: NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—Murder of an American Seaman.—John Watson Manley, second mate of the American ship Mary, was indicted for the wilful murder of Daniel Witham, one of the seamen, by fracturing his skull with an iron bolt, while the ship was lying in the Northumberland Dock. This case was noticed at the time in our Provincial News, and excited a good deal of attention in connection with the frequent acts of cruelty practised by the mates of American ships upon their crews. It was clearly proved that the blow inflicted by the prisoner caused the death of deceased, but the witnesses for the defence asserted that deceased had threatened to rip up the prisoner, and had put his hand to his side for the purpose of doing it. A knife The judge therefore left it to the jury to say whether such provocation had been given as to reduce the crime to manslaughter. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty of Manslaughter, and the prisoner was sentenced to penal servitude for life.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS.—Shoplifting by a Dressmaker. — On Tuesday Sarah Dyer, a dressmaker, pleaded Guilty to the charge of stealing from the shop of Messrs. Shoolbred a few yards of ribband, a few yards of silk braid, and a reel of cotton. It appeared from the evidence that the prisoner for many years past had been a customer of Messrs. Shoolbred, of whom she purchased her materials, and that though she had an abundance of work and abundance of customers, the ladies for whom she worked omitted to pay her their debts. There were several ladies who owed her money, two of whom living Montague Place, Russell Square, and Highbury Terrace, owed her 11*l.* or 12*l.*, but she could not get a penny from any of them, not even in repayment of the sums she had expended in materials purchased on their account. Her landlord, with whom she had lodged for 14 years, deposed that, up to this occurrence, she had borne a most excellent respectable character. She was a widow, had a young and well-conducted, and had a son, whom she had apprenticed to a tailor. She was in the habit of working until 2, 3, and even 4 o'clock in the morning at dressmaking, in order to support herself and her son. But in spite of all her industry she was without money; she had been many times seriously ill and on the verge of starvation; she could not pay her rent; and on the day on which the offence was committed she was at a standstill, unable to complete her work for want of money to purchase the materials required. These facts, which elicited Court, excited the deepest commiseration. Messrs. Shoolbred, the prosecutors, who had no choice but to institute the prosecution, implored the mercy of the Court in her behalf. The Assistant-Judge, in giving his decision, said that he considered this to be a case in which the greatest amount of mercy might safely be extended to the prisoner, and said that if what had been stated found its way into publicity, those who had so cruelly used this poor creature by depriving her so long of the reward of her labour would understand what must be thought of their conduct. No sentence was passed upon the prisoner, but she was ordered to be discharged at once. She fell down on her knees in the dock and thanked the Court for the mercy shown to her.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT. The Kaffir at Hadgate.—On Friday morning the Zulu Kaffir who was found in Highgate Wood and sent for trial on a charge of sheep-stealing, was ordered to be discharged, the grand jury having ignored the bill against him. The poor fellow, who can only be made to understand by signs, kept grinning and dancing with the gaoler who came into dock with him. He will be detained in Newgate until his history can be ascertained.

There is not much alteration in the Calf trade. Our foreign supply consists of 260 Beasts, 520 Sheep, and 178 Calves. The number of Milch Cows is 140.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, Dec. 5.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was small, and tolerably cleared at an early hour for shipment to the West Coast at the prices of last Monday. Foreign continues to be held firmly at former rates, but business is confined to the merest retail transactions Barley (with the exception of the finest qualities of malting) is 1s. per qr. cheaper. Beans and Peas bring the prices of this day se'nnight. Oats are a slow sale at a decline of fully 1s. per qr. Flour is unaltered in value.

FRIDAY, Dec. 9.

The severe frost and snow of the 3d changed to milder weather on the 4th, since when much rain has fallen. Prices of Wheat in the English markets have been generally well supported this week with the exception of Liverpool, and in many it has been difficult to purchase at former rates. In Scotland the arrivals of foreign continue to be large, and sales at former quotations are impossible. Spring Corn of all kinds has in the majority of cases been sold on rather lower terms, and Flour has also receded 6d. to 1s. per sack in Liverpool and Glasgow. The cost and freight business from the Baltic may be considered closed for the winter, and for spring there is at present little disposition to purchase. The arrivals of grain-laden vessels from Southern Europe at ports of call this week are small. The sales are to a liberal extent, including Taganrog Ghirka Wheat at 47s. to 48s., Odessa Ghirka at 45s. 9d. and at 42s. nett, Marionopoli at 48s. 9d., all per 492 lbs.; Odessa Maize at 32s. to 32s. 3d., Ismail at 32s. 3d., Galatz, 32s. 6d., all per 492 lbs., Ibrail at 29s. 6d. to 30s. 4½d. per 480 lbs.; Odessa Barley at 24s. 6d. to 25 1½d. per 400 lbs.; Odessa Oats at 17s. 9d. to 18s. per qr. imp., c. f. and i.; and Taganrog Linseed at 48s. to 48s. 3d. per qr. delivered. The arrivals of foreign Barley this week are again considerable, of all other grain small. The English Wheat fresh up to this morning's market met a quick sale at our late quotations. The attendance was limited, and also the extent of business in foreign Wheat, but on the sales effected full prices were obtained. Barley is a very slow sale at Monday's prices. Beans and Peas are unaltered in value The Oat trade is firm, and good corn brings an advance of 6d. per qr.

News of the Week.

THE Governments of Rome and Naples have signified their adhesions to the Congress of Paris, and all the Powers invited to take part in it have now accepted the invitation. The official journals state that the late belligerent Powers will be represented by their Ministers for Foreign Affairs, and that each of the remaining Powers will be represented by a special Plenipotentiary in addition to the ordinary Ambassador resident in Paris. In accordance with this arrangement Lord COWLEY will act as first Plenipotentiary for Great Britain, and it is understood that Lord WODEHOUSE will represent HER MAJESTY'S Government as second Plenipotentiary.

The EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH received on Wednesday in great state PRINCE METTERNICH, the new Austrian Ambassador at the Court of the Tuileries. The PRINCE, in presenting his credentials said that the EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA had commanded him most particularly to assure HIS MAJESTY of the high value he attached to his personal friendship; adding that nothing would be more agreeable to HIS MAJESTY than to see the completion and consolidation of the relations of good understanding and intimacy with which the general interests of Europe were so closely connected. The EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH, in his reply, said that he entertained the firm hope that the relations which had been so happily re-established between the EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA and himself could not but become more friendly by an attentive examination of the interests of the two countries, and that since he had seen the Emperor he attached a great value to his friendship.

A despatch from Morocco has reached Madrid stating that a severe engagement took place on Friday last before the Spanish camp of Elottro. The Moors twice attacked the Spanish redoubts with great impetuosity, but were repulsed on both occasions with a loss of 300 killed and 1000 wounded, while the Spaniards are said to have lost 40 killed, and 30 officers and 280 men wounded. The Moors afterwards attacked General PRIM on the road to Tetuan, but were repulsed with great loss. The third corps d'armée, consisting of 4000 infantry and 6000 cavalry, has since landed at Ceuta, and the Spaniards were preparing to assume the offensive and offer battle to the Moors. The cholera which had broken out in the Spanish camp had begun to subside, but the disease is said to be raging fearfully at Tetuan.

Accounts from Sicily state that an attempt has been made to assassinate Signor MANESCALCHI, the superintendent of police, in the streets of Palermo. The assassin made his escape, and though numerous arrests of suspected persons have been made, all attempts to discover the culprit have been ineffectual.

The French Ambassador at Constantinople has officially demanded from the Porte a firman for the construction of the Suez Canal, according to the project of M. DE LESSEPS. The Ambassadors of Austria, Prussia, Russia, and Sardinia simultaneously supported this demand, in accordance with instructions received from their respective Governments; and after a long and stormy discussion the Turkish Ministers resolved to request the Powers which had made the demand to come to an understanding with England on the matter. The latest news states that the Porte was deliberating whether it would be convenient to bring the question before all the great Powers.

From the United States we learn that the PRESIDENT'S forthcoming Message, in touching upon the subject of foreign policy, will give the first place to the San Juan question, which is described as being at this moment in an "irritating position." Lord JOHN RUSSELL is said to have complicated the question materially by a despatch stating that England held undisputed right to the island, and "would insist on its recognition." The PRESIDENT, it is added, cannot withdraw under this "implied threat," and will therefore set forth the rights of the United States to the island in the most distinct manner, and advise Congress to maintain them. Captain BROWN, the leader of the recent insurrection at Harper's Ferry, was hung at Charlestown on the 2d inst.

Home News.

THE COURT.—The Queen, Prince Consort, and Royal family continue at Osborne. On Friday Mr. Wentworth Dilke, Vice-President of the Horticultural Society, Professor Lindley, and Mr. Nesfield, had an interview with the Prince Consort. The Queen and Prince Consort, with Prince Leopold and Princess Louisa, drove out in an open carriage. The Queen walked out in the grounds. Admiral Bowles, Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, and Major-General the Hon. Sir J. Scarlett, Commanding the South-West District, arrived on a visit to her Majesty. On Saturday morning the Prince Consort embarked in the Fairy and visited the Military Hospital at Netley. Prince and Princess Leiningen left Osborne. On Sunday morning the Queen, Princess Alice, Princess Helena, and Princess Louisa attended Divine service at Whippingham Church; the Rev. G. Prothero officiated. On Monday morning the Queen, Prince Consort, Princess Alice, Princess Helena, and Princess Louisa crossed over to Portsmouth in the Fairy. On their return to Osborne in the afternoon, her Majesty and the Royal family took a short cruise up the Southampton Water, and steamed round the Great Eastern. The Prince Consort visited Prince and Princess Leiningen. The Queen walked out in the grounds. On Tuesday the Queen, Prince Consort, and Royal family walked and drove in the grounds. On Wednesday Major-General Foster, commanding the Royal Engineers of the South-Western District, arrived on a visit to her Majesty.

ORDER OF THE GARTER.—The death of Earl De Grey would under ordinary circumstances have placed a Blue Riband at the disposal of her Majesty; but in consequence of an extra Garter having been conferred by the Queen on Lord Derby, his lordship will now occupy the vacant stall in St. George's Chapel, and the present vacancy will not be filled up.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held yesterday afternoon at the official residence of Lord Palmerston, in Downing Street.

THE NEW JUDGE.—The Gazette of last evening announced that the judgeship of the Common Pleas, vacant by the death of Mr. Justice Crowder, has been conferred on the Solicitor-General, Sir Henry Keating.

THE SOLICITOR GENERALSHIP vacant by the promotion of Sir H. Keating has been conferred on Mr. William Atherton, Q.C., M.P. for Durham. The learned gentleman is the son of the late Rev. William Atherton, Wesleyan Minister, and some time President of the Conference, his mother being a daughter of the late Rev. Walter Morison, a clergyman of the Kirk of Scotland. He was born in Glasgow in 1806, and married in 1843 Agnes Mary, second daughter of Mr. Hall, Chief Magistrate of Bow Street. In politics he is an advanced Liberal, being in favour of the ballot, an extensive law reform, the removal of all religious disabilities, and the extension of the suffrage.

THE JAPAN EMBASSY.—The Queen has appointed Rutherford Alcock, Esq., now Consul-General in Japan, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary and Consul-General in Japan.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—The dispute between Mr. Childers and Mr. Overend as to the last Parliamentary election for Pontefract has at last been decided by Sir J. T. Coleridge. The award, which is as follows, was made known at a meeting of Mr. Childers's supporters at Pontefract on Friday evening:—

"Sir J. T. Coleridge, the referee appointed by Sir George Grey and Sir John Pakington to settle the question between Mr. Overend and Mr. Childers, hereby makes his award, by which he declares that Mr. Overend, as a man of honour, ought, and the referee directs that he shall, forthwith make vacant the seat, and that he do not become a candidate, or in any way interfere, oppose, or attempt to prevent, the election of Mr. Childers on the vacancy to be occasioned."

In consequence of this decision Mr. Overend will immediately accept the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds; and it is expected that Mr. Childers will be returned without opposition.—The elevation of Sir H. Keating to the bench has caused a vacancy at Reading. Mr. R. A. Benson, who was expected to offer himself in the Conservative interest, has declined to come forward, and Sir F. H. Goldsmid, who has again offered himself on Liberal principles, is the only candidate in the field.

THE NATIONAL DEFENCE COMMISSION.—It is stated that the Commissioners on Fortifications have sent in a report recommending works of defence for the Dockyards of the kingdom, and that the sum of ten millions sterling, which they set down as the necessary cost of the works, will most likely be asked for next year by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

THE INDIAN ARMY.—It is now said to be settled that Sir Hugh Rose will succeed Lord Clyde as Commander-in-Chief in India; that Sir William Mansfield will become Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, in the room of Sir Henry Somerset, who has completed his term of service; that Major-General Malcolm, C.B., and Major-General Spencer, C.B., will succeed Major-Generals Beresford and Craigie in the Madras commands, and that Major-General Cunynghame, C.B., will succeed to the Bombay command now held by Sir Hugh Rose. The first batch of the discharged soldiers of the Indian army consisting of 500 men landed at Blackwall on Friday, and were immediately re-enlisted by sergeants of the Royal Artillery, the 20th, and other regiments who were waiting their arrival. A formidable riot took place among them at Gravesend on their passage up the river, and also at Blackwall after they landed. Many of them were without money, and were glad to enlist again.

CARDINAL WISEMAN left England a few days since for Rome, and it is stated in the Freeman's Journal that his Eminence is not likely to return to this country as a permanent place of residence. The state of his health, making a sojourn in a mild climate absolutely necessary, and other circumstances will in all probability induce him to select Rome as the scene of his future labours. The Cardinal has delegated all his powers to the Very Rev. Dr. Hearn, of the Church of the Assumption, Warwick Street, who is Vicar-General of the diocese.

VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—In consequence of numerous applications to the War Office for advice as to the proper uniform for volunteer corps, &c., in course of formation, a committee has been appointed, and is about to be assembled at the War Office, Pall Mall, to consider the question of rifle volunteer uniforms, and to report to the Secretary of State for War upon the colour and pattern which shall be recommended as the most appropriate for general adoption by those rifle volunteer corps which have not yet selected their uniform. When decided upon a sealed pattern of the clothing so selected will be deposited with the Volunteer Branch, War Office, Pall Mall, for general guidance in this matter.—A Court of Lieutenancy was held at Guildhall on Wednesday, at which a letter was read from the Secretary at War expressing the Queen's approval of the names submitted for officers of the London Rifle Brigade, and the several commissions were ordered to be signed. The name of Captain Hicks was unanimously ordered to be forwarded to her Majesty for approval as Lieutenant-Colonel, and it was resolved that at the next Court the nomination of a full colonel shall be made. An application was made from the Council of the Brigade for the assistance of the Court in obtaining the use of the Artillery ground for drill, and the application was forwarded to the Court of the Artillery Company, with the unanimous request of the commissioners that they would comply with it. Upwards of 850 members are now enrolled as effective members of the Brigade; and a civil service corps, including the officers of the Registrar-General's Department at Somerset House, is about to be formed in connection with it.—The London Irish is making rapid progress. Lord Gough and the Earl of Cork have joined the council, and the Earl of Belmore, the Marquis of Sligo, Lord Leconfield, Lord Garvagh, Lord Otho Fitzgerald, Mr. Serjeant Murphy, and other gentlemen have become honorary members.—The London Scottish now numbers an effective strength of between 400 and 500 men. Lord Elcho, M.P., the active promoter of the movement, has been gazetted as major, Mr. George Mackenzie, of Pall Mall, as captain, and Mr. Bain, of Parliament Street, as hon. secretary.—A public meeting of the inhabitants of Pimlico was held on Thursday evening, Earl Grosvenor, M.P., in the chair, at which it was resolved to promote the formation of additional companies in connection with the Queen's Volunteer Rifle Corps, which now numbers 250 effective members. After the meeting had been addressed by the Rev. T. J. Barker, Mr. A. W. Jaffray, the Hon. G. Denman, M.P., and Mr. H. J. Smith, a working man named Simes rose and said that there were plenty of young men of his own class ready to join this movement who had as great an interest in the country and in their little homes as the chairman himself had in his estates, but they were unable to join any corps which was not conducted in an economical manner. He wanted to see these rifle corps made up of the bone and sinew of the country, and not of men like some in the Crimea, who, as soon as they saw smoke, wanted to go home "on urgent private affairs."—A meeting of the members of the Admiralty Corps was held on Tuesday, at which resolutions were passed to complete the arrangements for its organisation and for the commencement of drill in Westminster Hall on Thursday evening under the direction of two sergeants of the Scots Fusilier Guards. It was announced that 55 effective members and 25 honorary members had already joined the corps.—A meeting of gentlemen attached to the several departments of the Inland Revenue at Somerset House was held on Saturday, when it was resolved to form a volunteer corps in connection with the Civil Service Brigade, to be governed, however, by its own rules, and equipped, drilled, officered, and fully organised by its own members.—Meetings have been held in the parishes of St. Margaret's and St. John's, Westminster, at which it was resolved to raise companies in those parishes, to form part of the Westminster corps. The following parishes have already joined the movement:—St. Clement's Danes, St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, St. Mary-le-Strand, St. Paul's, Covent Garden, St. Ann's, Soho, St. Margaret's, and St. John's. The parishes of St. George's and St. James's have not yet joined the union, but there is no doubt they will both be eventually embodied in the Westminster corps.—A crowded meeting of the inhabitants of St. Pancras has been held in the Vestry Hall, at which the Rev. Canon Dale, vicar of the parish, Mr. Edwin James, M.P., Mr. Wyld, M.P., and other gentlemen moved and seconded the different resolutions for organising forthwith a volunteer brigade for that parish.—A general meeting of the effective and honorary members of the Marylebone Corps was held on Tuesday, Lord Radstock in the chair, at which it was resolved by a large majority to alter the title of the corps to that of the West Middlesex for the purpose of including the districts of Acton, Ealing, Hammersmith, Bayswater, Shepherd's Bush, Notting Hill, and other places lying between Marylebone and the practice ground at Wormwood Scrubs.—A large meeting of the inhabitants of Southwark and Lambeth has been held at Kennington, Mr. Roupell, M.P., in the chair, at which it was resolved on the motion of Mr. J. E. Johnson, Mr. Williams, and Mr. Hodges, to form additional companies in the two boroughs for the 7th Surrey Corps.—An influential meeting of the Bermondsey Corps was held on Tuesday when two companies of 60 each nominated their officers, and sent their names to the Lord Lieutenant for approval. The third company is nearly formed, and it is fully expected that this corps will in a short time number at least 500 effectives.—At a crowded meeting at Wandsworth it has been resolved to take steps to promote the formation of a company for Battersea and Wandsworth, in conjunction with the Clapham company of the 1st Surrey.—Upwards of 500 workmen of Woolwich Arsenal have entered their names as members of the corps established under the auspices of Colonel Tulloh and other officers of the establishment.—An influential meeting was held at Knightsbridge on Tuesday, Colonel Vereker in the chair, at which it was resolved to form companies for Belgravia, Knightsbridge, and Brompton, to be incorporated with the main body of the South Middlesex.—A crowded meeting has been held at Wimbledon, Colonel Oliphant in the chair, to concert measures for the formation of a volunteer rifle corps for that place. The Earl of Lovelace, Lord-Lieutenant of the county, the Duke of Somerset, Duke of Wellington, Earl Spencer, lord of the manor, Earl de Grey, the Hon. Charles Gore, General the Hon. H. Murray, C.B., Colonel Lysons, and the Rev. A. W. Haygarth, incumbent of the parish, support the movement.—A public meeting was held on Thursday at Plumstead, at which it was resolved to form an artillery corps for that parish, in which is situated the extensive Government practice range, near the Royal Arsenal. A large number of the most influential inhabitants have expressed their intention to join the corps.—From the provinces we learn that at a meeting at Rochdale on Friday, convened by requisition to the mayor to consider the propriety of establishing a rifle corps in that town, an amendment declaring the movement to be the result of groundless panic, and deferring the question of forming a corps for the present, was carried by a large majority. On the other hand meetings in favour of the movement have been held during the week at Abingdon, Aytoun, Axbridge, Alston, Aberfeldy, St. Andrew's, Anstruther, Bath, Birmingham, Brierley Hill, Bruton, Buckingham, Bury St. Edmund's, Bitterne, Bocking, Brampton, Banbury, Bradford, Burlington, Canterbury, Chirnside, Cockermouth, Cupar, Cheltenham College, Camelford, Dundee, Dunfermline, Dover, Eye, Eyemouth, Edinburgh, Frome, Fareham, Folkestone, Faversham, Framlingham, Fakenham, Grantham, Hatherleigh, Howden, Hull, St. Helen's, Halesworth, Ilfracombe, Idle, Ipswich, Knaresborough, Kenmore, Kendal, Linlithgow, Leven, Liverpool, Lynn, Monmouth, Maiden Bradley, Maidstone, Margate, Marlow, Merthyr, Newtyle, Northfleet, Norwich, Newport (Isle of Wight), Oxford University, Penrith, Penwortham, Peterborough, Preston, Rotherham, Rugeley, Ross, Ryde, Sittingbourne, Southampton, Sheerness, Saxmundham, Sheffield, Stafford, South Shields, Stamford, Stoke-on-Trent, Torquay, Tipton, Topsham, Truro, Tunstall, Tynemouth, Whitby, Wickham Market, Worthing, Walmer, Westbromwich, Wilton, Warminster, Wirksworth, Wolverhampton, Woodbury, Wellington, Wycombe, Wigton, Wiveliscombe, and Woodbridge.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Ministerial journals announce that the adhesions of Rome and Naples to the Congress have arrived; and that all the Powers invited to attend it have now sent in their adhesions. It appears that without absolutedly refusing to be represented at the Congress the Pope had at first an objection to appearing before what his Minister called a tribunal, or to discuss the question of reform until he is reinstated in all his rights. Each Power is to be represented by two Plenipotentiaries. Lord Cowley is to represent her Majesty's Government as first Plenipotentiary, and Lord Woodhouse will probably be appointed second Plenipotentiary. Count Lavradio and Count Paiva Pereira, the Portuguese Ambassadors at London and Paris, will represent Portugal; and M. Mon, the Spanish Ambassador, will represent Spain as second Plenipotentiary; Count Pourtales and Baron Schleinitz will represent Prussia; Prince Gortschakoff will be first, and Count Kisseleff second, Plenipotentiary of Russia; and it is generally believed that Count Cavour will be one of the representatives of Sardinia. On Wednesday afternoon Prince Metternich presented his credentials to the Emperor as Austrian Ambassador. Two court carriages and six conveyed the Ambassador and his suite to the Tuileries. At the Place du Carrousel a battalion of Chasseurs of the Guard and a battalion of Infantry of the Line, with music and standard, were drawn up. The Chamberlain and the Master of the Ceremonies conducted the Ambassador into the Salle du Trône. Prince Metternich, in his speech to the Emperor, expressed his satisfaction at the happy re-establishment of good relations between Austria and France, and hoped that the ties uniting the two countries would become every day stronger. The Emperor replied as follows:—

"I have the firm hope that the relations which have been so happily re-established between the Emperor of Austria and myself cannot but become more friendly by an attentive examination of the interests of the two countries. Since I have seen the Emperor I attach a great value to his personal friendship. A sincere agreement between us will be facilitated, I doubt it not, by the choice he has made of a representative whose conciliatory spirit is well known, and who has so many claims to my confidence and to my esteem."

Prince Metternich was afterwards presented to the Empress, and paid his first state visit to the Ambassadors of England, Russia, and Spain. Their Majesties received on Wednesday the Prince of Orange. Prince Jerome has been again seriously ill with inflammation of the lungs, but is now said to be out of danger. The Prussian Ambassador, Count Pourtales, left Paris for Berlin on Tuesday in consequence of a telegram received from his Government. He is expected to return in time to be present at the diplomatic reception on New Year's Day.—A remarkable trial has just taken place at Tours. Madame Lemoine and her daugher Angelina were placed at the bar on one of the most appalling charges of infanticide which has ever been set forth in any indictment, French or English. The mother, who has not yet attained her 40th year, belongs to a family of old noblesse de robe, called Mignot. Her ancestors for generations were judicial presidents at Touraine, and her grandfather sat in the Convention. She married, for love, a person of low family, an attorney of Chinon named Lemoine, from whom she separated after having had two children, a boy and a girl, to support whom she had her own private fortune of 10,000 francs, or about 400*l.* per annum. The girl, who was named Angelina, now 16 years of age, received her education from a private governess at home. Her beauty is described as extraordinary; but it appears that it was equalled by her indiscretion and unblushing levity. When only 15 years old she publicly declared that she was quite ripe for the married state, and her course of reading was most extraordinary for one in her condition of life. She next made advances to her mother's coachman—a man called Fetis, 29 years of age, and described as a remarkable compound of extraordinary ugliness and rusticity, equally awkward, ungainly, and ignorant. The result was that the girl became enceinte, and that with a view to conceal her daughter's shame the mother destroyed the offspring by burning the body of the infant. This was the accusation with which mother and daughter were alone charged, the coachman not being included in the indictment. He, it appeared, believed that his young mistress really intended to marry him; and was simple enough to ask her hand in marriage of the mother. Madame Lemoine instantly ordered him out of the house, and on the following day discharged him from her service. The coachman wrathfully complained, in the presence of the young lady, that he was not allowed to marry Madlle Angelina, while she remarked that her mamma "would get rid of it"—meaning of course the child. Rumours of these occurrences soon spread through the small town of Chinon, but Madame Lemoine, the mother, gave to every scandalous report a distinct denial. She persisted in maintaining that her daughter was not pregnant, and by means of "an expansive crinoline," deceived many; but the boasting of the coachman satisfied others more incredulous that the rumours were not mere scandal. At length on the 30th of July Angelina gave birth to a living infant, and this, it was alleged, Madame Lemoine had burned on a fire of wood, which had been prepared for the purpose. The Court and jury at Tours, after hearing a number of witnesses, and among others the daughter herself who declared that the child moved after it was born, acquitted the daughter on the ground that she was not in a state to be aware of what was going on, but found her mother Guilty, with extenuating circumstances. The sentence of the Court on Madame Lemoine was pronounced on Sunday evening, when the judges condemned her to 20 years' hard labour. Madame Lemoine has lodged an appeal against her sentence before the Court of Cassation.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.—The Madrid journals of Saturday publish a despatch from Camp Elottro, stating that on Friday morning the Moors impetuously attacked the Spanish redoubts, but were energetically repulsed by the garrisons, and retired to the valley commanded by these redoubts. The enemy then came up again, but were attacked and repulsed by 10,000 men of the Second Corps, serving as the Spanish vanguard. The Moors lost 300 killed and 1000 wounded. The approximate loss of the Spanish was 30 officers, 260 men wounded, and 40 killed. General Prim has since been attacked on the road to Tetuan. The Moors were repulsed with great loss. The Spaniards had 40 killed and wounded. The third corps d'armée has disembarked at Ceuta, and the Spaniards were preparing to take the offensive, and offer battle to the enemy. Cholera had broken out in the encampment, but was diminishing; it is said to be raging fearfully at Tetuan.

FRANKFORT.—In the sitting of the Federal Diet on Saturday, the committee of Electoral Hesse was increased by the appointment of representatives of Austria, Prussia, Bavaria, and Saxony.

PRUSSIA.—At Berlin on Saturday Count Schwerin was re-elected a member of the Chamber of Deputies by 270 votes out of 271. After the election the electors signed a declaration expressing approval of the programme of Eisenach, and calling on the Chamber to solicit the Government to take the initiative in the national question.

SWITZERLAND.—The Grand Duke Ferdinand IV. of Tuscany has arrived at Basle in the strictest incognito. The Grand Duke, it is expected, will reside in France during the sitting of the Congress.

DENMARK.—Prince Christian of Denmark has refused the post of Governor of Holstein, which had been offered to him. The Government has, in consequence, given up the project. Fifty-eight of the principal members of the Diet have presented an address of confidence to the former President of the Ministry, M. von Hall. This address includes a vote of defiance against the present Prime Minister, M. Rottwitt.

SWEDEN.—The Swedish journals are discussing a Bill submitted to the Stockholm Diet by the Rev. Mr. Janson. The object of the Bill in question is to charge all the clergymen throughout the country with the control of the publications sold by hawkers, and to affix severe punishment on every layman who may venture to discuss religious matters without being previously authorised by a competent minister. All the members of the Assembly unanimously adhered to M. Janson's proposition, and one speaker even recommended that still more extensive powers should be given to the clergy the more effectually to attain the end desired. Another singular project has been presented to the Chamber of Nobles of the Swedish Diet. Baron Creutz has proposed that, from the age of 15, young girls should be allowed to accept and refuse of their own accord any suitor for their hand, and the project has been referred to a committee.

AUSTRIA.—The Imperial Gazette of the 13th publishes a decree ordering the payment of the interest on the National Loan falling due on and after the 1st January next to be effected in silver, as formerly. Lieut.-General Baron von Eynatten, who was formerly Commissary-General, has returned to Vienna, and is prepared to have an examination made into the truth of the general reports respecting the supplies sent to the army in Italy.

HUNGARY.—The community of the Augsburg Confession of Protestants at Pesth has resolved to address to the Emperor a petition to the same effect as that of the Protestants of Kœsmark, praying him to remove the obstacles thrown in the way of district and other meetings of the Protestants, and to stop the prosecutions of certain Protestants which have been instituted.

IONIAN ISLANDS.—The Lord High Commissioner opened the Ionian Parliament on the 10th inst., and in his speech announced numerous measures of administrative reform.

ITALY.—Mazzini has published at Lugano a pamphlet of 60 pages addressed to the youth of Italy, in which he explains what he considers the false direction the movement in Italy has taken, and appeals to those who have enlisted as volunteers to rally round Garibaldi and fight the holy war. He reproaches them with confiding too much in "the man whose hands are still red with the blood of our best youth who have fallen 10 years to replace that Vicar of the Genius of Evil, the Pope, whose name is a negation of country and freedom. You have kissed," he continues, "the hem of his usurped garments, saturated with the blood of brave men and the tears of mothers, and you adored him like idolators disinherited of every ray of truth and justice." "His genius is the consciousness of evil, his word a lie, his strength treason and contempt of everything which men love and believe in. His soul is balancing like a pendulum in the hands of Satan, between cunning and voluptuousness. His works are those of the fox and hyena." In consequence of a pastoral letter issued by the Cardinal Archbishop of Naples, the upper and lower clergy in all the churches of that city have anathematised all who wish to attack the temporal power of the Pope, designating them as wretches and revolutionists.

SICILY.—News from Palermo to the 27th ult. states that the Commander Manescalchi, Director-General of the Sicilian police, had been stabbed while walking with his wife and children in the Place of the Cathedral. The wound inflicted was very severe, but probably not mortal. The assassin, who was well dressed, escaped. Fears were entertained that the attempted assassination would be followed by an insurrection, but tranquillity prevailed. All the efforts of the police of Palermo to discover the assassin have hitherto proved fruitless. Several persons have been arrested and examined, but without result.

TURKEY.—Letters from Constantinople to the 7th inst. announce that on the preceding Thursday M. de Thouvenel had remitted a note to the Porte, containing an official demand for a firman favourable to the Suez Canal project of M. de Lesseps. The Ambassadors of Austria, Prussia, Russia, and Sardinia simultaneously supported that demand, according to their instructions. A Council of Ministers was then held. Fuad Pacha confessed that he had formally engaged himself to refuse an authorisation to the canal project. The Grand Vizier declared he would not recognise such engagements. After a stormy discussion, the Ministers agreed to request the Powers which had made the above demand to come to an understanding with England on the matter. Sir Henry Bulwer had been received by the Sultan, and had numerous conferences with the Ministers. The Circassians continued to emigrate in great numbers.

EGYPT.—A letter from Alexandria states that for some days past the Viceroy of Egypt has been much engaged at Cairo with festivities of welcome to his little son, Toussoun Pacha, who has just returned from his usual summer excursion to Europe. Toussoun Pacha is now about seven years of age. He has acquired from his English nurse, and through his frequent visits to England, a perfect knowledge of our language, which he speaks more fluently than his mother tongue. He has just now been placed under the charge of an English tutor.

COAST OF AFRICA.—Accounts from Sierra Leone to the 21st November state that the Cameroons were in a very unsettled state, in consequence of an anticipated rise of the slave population. Great sacrifice of life was apprehended. Dysentery was very prevalent among the Kroomen. At Bonny the Regent, Illollah Popple, had murdered a woman accused of witchcraft, and a civil war was feared in consequence. A large number of soldiers and emigrants had arrived at Fernando Po from Spain. Another attempt had been made to fire Lagos. Cojoe, King of Accra, had been taken prisoner, and confined in the fort. Her Majesty's ship Spitfire had captured a slaver at Tacknel, with 469 slaves on board.

INDIA.—By the arrival of the Calcutta mail we have further accounts from Calcutta to the 10th of November; and from Hong Kong to the 29th of October.

Calcutta.—The final decree on the subject of compensation has been published. All who have lost irrecoverable property are to receive half its value up to 1000*l.*, and a third of its value after that. All who have lost moveable property are to receive one third its value, and that third is not to exceed 500*l.* The Delhi bank, therefore, and one or two more sufferers will obtain practically no compensation at all, and all the insurance offices are excluded. Some of the Europeans of Lucknow, who lost more than any class, and did soldiers' work besides, have been splendidly rewarded. Mr. Scheling, for example, the two Captains Orr, the two Hearseys, and Captain Bunbury have received pensions worth 1000*l.* a year each. Almost the whole of the escheated estates in Oude have now been given away, some of them in enormous slices. It is said that one man has got more than the Duke of Wellington received for Waterloo. These gifts stand in curious contrast with a measure which has been adopted abolishing all brigade commands in spite of the opposition of the Commander-in-Chief. The brigade is now to be commanded by the senior officer of the station without allowances. This measure, which causes a saving of only 1800*l.* a month, has created considerable annoyance. The commands of Gwalior, Lucknow, Lahore, Ferozepore, Jullundur, Sealkote and Barrackpore have already been abolished by general order. Sir Hope Grant has accepted the command of the China expedition. No details, however, have yet transpired and it is said they will not be settled till the return of Lord Canning to Calcutta in December. It is known that a strong force of Sikhs are to go, but none of the regiments are yet named. The Assam Tea Company has just escaped a danger caused by a strike of all their labourers thousands in number, and all Cacharees, for an increase of pay. Not receiving it, they threatened the managing director, Mr. de Mornay, and the superintendent of the factory, Mr. M'Intosh, with death, and marched on the residence of the latter to execute their threat. Fortunately for the company, the Assistant Commissioner, Captain Holroyd, was personally cognisant of the affair, and aware that the labourers really meant murder. He marched down to Sepoys from Debroogleem, disarmed the rioters, arrested 26 ringleaders, sentenced 21 to imprisonment for short periods, and offered the remainder their discharge. They refused to accept it, and, joining their hands, declared themselves in the wrong, and went back to work.

CHINA.—Accounts from Hong Kong state that political affairs were quiet. His Excellency Mr. Bruce remained at Shanghai, and Admiral Hope was at Hong Kong. Advices from the north state that the Chinese were taking energetic measures with the view of defence, and that Sankolinsin, the Tartar Chief, was at the head of affairs. Contributions were sought for by Government from the trading communities, which had responded but feebly to this call on their patriotism.

UNITED STATES.—The Bohemian has arrived with the mails from Portland of the 3d inst. Captain John Brown was executed at Charlestown on the 2d. Previously to going to the scaffold he had an interview with several of his fellow conspirators, and accused some of them of treachery. The evening before the execution he had an interview with his wife. He died bravely. Numerous sympathy meetings were held at New York on the evening of the 2d. The correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from Washington, gives an epitome of the President's forthcoming Message, from which the following are extracts:—

"Whatever designs France and Spain may have on Mexico, with a view to fix its future form of government, there is nothing to warrant the suspicion that Great Britain is united with them for that purpose. This subject of the affairs of Mexico will doubtless be presented prominently to the consideration of Congress during the ensuing session. Although the trade of the country will exhibit a vast recovery from the depression of the last two years, there is room to doubt whether it would not be prudent to return to the tariff of 1846 until the whole question can be arranged on a more stable basis. Under the present unwise system every fluctuation in prices affects the revenue. In speculative years, when the Government should not have the temptation which a large revenue gives it to entertain all kinds of schemes, the high prices of merchandise flood the treasury with income from duties and stimulate the general intoxication. On the other hand, in years of commercial depression, the low prices of goods deplete the revenue and increase the general uneasiness. The recommendations in regard to revenue and finance will be added to the message at the last moment. Recent events in Virginia will bring forth some pointed remarks in the message, on the danger which all sections of the country incur from the growing tendency to arrange parties on geographical grounds, and also from the increased disposition in the public mind to hold lightly the obligations of loyalty to the constitution. Another point of domestic policy which it will touch upon is the protection to slavery in the territories. While the President holds to the constitutional doctrine on this point, he deprecates legislation in anticipation of its being required, and thinks we should wait until the emergency comes up. If Congress will follow his advice the whole subject will sink quietly down; for in five years more we shall have no territories on which to agitate the question. In our foreign policy the message will give the first place to the San Juan question, which is at this moment in an irritating position. During the last Administration an understanding was established between us and England that neither Government should exclusively occupy San Juan until the pending question of its dominion was settled. General Harney, either from some ambiguity in his instructions, or from not understanding them clearly, took possession of the island. This step called out from Lord John Russell a despatch to Lord Lyons, which was communicated by direction to General Cass, stating that England held undisputed right to the island, and would insist upon its recognition by this country. This ill-advised despatch has complicated the question materially. We cannot withdraw under its implied threat, and the President will set forth our rights to the island in the clearest and most distinct manner, and advise Congress that they be maintained. In the meantime it is hoped that the prudence of General Scott will prevent any collision at the island. Mexican affairs are to be lightly touched upon, in view of pending negotiations; but the President will recommend that the present absurd restrictions of our neutrality laws be so far modified as to permit our citizens who may desire to do so to enlist in the defence of the legitimate Government of that republic, without incurring the penalty of fine and a term in the State Prison. In view of the increasing value of our trans-isthmus trade and travel, the message will call the attention of Congress again to the insecurity of those routes, and renew the recommendations of last year's special messages on this subject."

Public Addresses.

THE MARQUIS OF WESTMINSTER at a meeting at Stockport on Tuesday made the following statement as to the effect produced by the Rifle Volunteer movement on foreign countries:—

"It had given him the highest satisfaction to see the energetic manner in which the volunteer movement had been, and is being, carried on. Foreign nations were surprised at the energy and liberality that had been displayed in the matter, and the moral effect of the agitation was, he had no doubt, very great. For our credit sake, he trusted it would continue to be conducted in such a respectable way as to prove a support to our friends and a terror to our enemies. With reference to certain remarks which had been made in some quarters in disparagement of the Emperor of the French and the French nation, he considered them highly censurable, and calculated to cause the Sovereign of France and his people to take measures very seriously against this country. He knew, nevertheless, that the Emperor Napoleon had an army of 500,000 men, and that forts were in course of erection which would frown over our shores. England should therefore be prepared, and should occupy such a position as to be able to resist any attack that might be made against us."

THE DUKE OF RUTLAND at a recent meeting at Leicester made the following remarks on the Volunteer movement:—

"There is at the present moment a great movement going on in this country. There is very considerable alarm caused by the feeling that our defences are not in a perfect state that they ought to be, and that a foreign power and that that power would be France. Now, I would have to say that I for one have not shared in the apprehensions that have been so generally entertained by my countrymen. I am now speaking, mind, my own individual opinion, which is worth nothing more than the individual opinion of any man in this room. But I repeat again that I, for one, think that we have been alarmed rather needlessly. I say this because I think that if the Emperor of the French had ever seriously contemplated the invasion of this country, a man of his sagacity, of his foresight, and of his intellect would not have allowed the opportunity to slip that was presented during the time of the Indian mutiny. If he had contemplated such a thing as the invasion of this country, that was the time, that was the opportunity that he would naturally have seized upon. Now, I don't wish to be misunderstood. By no means do I decry the military ardour of the country—by no means do I decry the volunteer rifle movement: on the contrary, I give it my earnest and most sincere support. But the ground on which I rest my support is this—formerly our defence was the army and our fleet. Circumstances, time, steam, and science have swept away our defences. Formerly it was impossible for an army to land here without having to encounter in a naval engagement, a superior fleet. That is no longer necessary. It is now possible in a few hours to land an enormous army in this country. But when I say, therefore, for God's sake let us put this country in an efficient state of defence—let us call out the militia, encourage the rifle corps, and do all we can to make ourselves safe—I may say also, let us not in the same breath, which is not necessary, abuse the ruler whom the French people have chosen, or run down the Church which they choose to support. I am rejoiced to hear that you accord with me in these sentiments, because I am quite sure that these are the sentiments that become a great and powerful country like England. I may be told that the press of France is encouraging and fomenting the invasion of this country, but my answer to that is, look to our own press. What provocation is not our own press giving? And if there is a feeling in France—and I fear to some extent it is true—against this country, I ask whether it has not been mainly fomented, and whether it is not mainly owing to the vituperative language that has been used by the press of England."

CAPTAIN VERNON, M.P., at a recent dinner at Abingdon, made a speech on the Rifle movement, from which the following are extracts:—

"The Russian war, that of India, and now the war in China, have followed each other in such quick succession that the minds of men of peace have scarcely realised the termination of the one before the commencement of the other. I shall not touch upon the political question of the China war, but regret that we have not undertaken it single handed. If I had a voice in the question I would not allow a Frenchman to pull a trigger in the quarrel. We are men enough to vindicate our arms with our own resources without the aid of any foreigner, and we have thousands of well-disciplined natives in India—not Sepoys—who, based on our indomitable resolution, would have been amply sufficient for the purpose. It diminishes our prestige to admit the participation of France in our wars. Continental Powers assert that we cannot do without each and This is a gross mistake. In the time of the first Napoleon England, almost without assistance—for Portugal was little and Spain none—we, I say, paralysed all his efforts, though he was backed by almost all the nations of Europe, and commanded armies of fabulous numerical strength. The army he led to leave its bones in Russia was [illegible] speaking eight different languages. The anti-chamber of his tent was crowded with kings and princes, and foreign nations, elevated to his nod, were swayed by his imperial will. Is the present Napoleon a greater man than his uncle, the hero of a hundred fights? History says 'No' to that. Are the French soldiers of this day superior to the 30,000 French men who, opposed to 80,000 Austrians and Sardinians, in 15 days overran Italy, fought six battles, and killed 25,000 men? Magenta and Solferino say 'No' to that. Are we inferior to the Parliamentarians who destroyed the veteran conquerors of Europe at Waterloo? The Crimea and India say 'No' to that. I have just returned from the Continent, where with a view to passing coming events I made it my special business to examine the armies that will next have to stand opposed to France. The French army I know by heart. I say that our army and navy need fear no comparison with those of any nation under the sun as to officers, to men, or to the materials of war. We heard much of the Austrian Staff. Wonders were expected from them. They failed utterly. General Gyulai seemed ignorant of the first principles of war, and his successor Hess was no better. The strategy of the French was little superior. The battles in Italy were fought by the men; the hand to hand fights of officers side was desperate and admirable. 'Send me help,' cried the French General Neil, 'they are turning me!' Half a dozen rushed to the rescue, and [illegible] emerged from the murderous struggle. Either then, the Austrians are much improved or the French have fallen off since the days of the first Napoleon. But, for argument's sake, let us admit that they are equal to the heroes of Marengo and Austerlitz, we should not reckon them a rush—we were better men then and we are better men now. The general military spirit of the country is increased. There is not a man in the length and breadth of the land who is not prepared, in the defence of his home, to cast in his lot with those whose profession it is 'to seek the bubble reputation, even in the cannon's mouth.' The rifle movement is a great fact. It has an important physical effect in England, because it in some sort increases our effective defences. It has a great moral effect on the Continent, because it shows England bristling with bayonets, and the hardiest people in the world—the Anglo-Saxon race—standing shoulder to shoulder to protect the land from invasion. I believe that, exclusive of volunteers, we could by means of our railways place 100,000 men, regulars and militia, artillery, horse, foot, and dragoons, on any part of our land in 24 hours. I believe that three thousand in this quarrel—'for thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just'—would equal double the number of foreigners. I believe that our fleet and our sailors would never suffer a French soldier's foot to touch the soil of England. I believe that if we permitted the French army to land—such is the military spirit now pervading England—it would be no war, it would be a crusade. The country would rise as one man, and not a Frenchman would live to see his native land again. I have no fear of France; still we do well to be on our guard. It does not befit a great people to be taken unawares. That country is most certain of peace which is best prepared for war. Well, we are prepared. I have it from the highest military and scientific authority in the land that our coast defences are hourly becoming more formidable. Our navy is the finest in the world—our artillery matchless. I do not believe Louis Napoleon has any direct intention of his own mere motive against England, but the more I study his political career, the more do I see that, like an adventurer, he is the sport of fortune, driven hither and thither by the circumstances of the moment. Already he has lost half his power in his country by the defection of the priesthood; he now depends entirely on the army. War is necessary to them. Turbulent, excitable, and vainglorious, they may compel Napoleon to take steps against his better judgment. They say they have a Waterloo to revenge. We have no defeats to revenge; from Cressy to Waterloo we can contemplate our encounters with the French with great complacency. It needs not the gift of prophecy to reason on past events, and I venture to predict that if the present generation attempts by invasion of England to revenge Waterloo, they will bequeath to their posterity the task of revenging a defeat more complete, more disastrous, and more decisive."

SIR FITZROY KELLY, M.P., Attorney-General in the late administration of Lord Derby, presided at a recent dinner at Ipswich and made the following remarks on the present position of agriculture:—

"Perhaps he might be allowed to observe that if there was one class of persons throughout the British empire who were entitled to expect and demand from their fellow subjects all that could be done to aid and assist them in the efforts they were making to advance their own well-being and prosperity, that class was the tenant farmers and agriculturists of England. It was impossible to deny that while the other departments of human life and human exertion—while in the army and navy, and still more in the different civil offices of the Government—while among the merchants, shipowners, and manufacturers, and even ordinary traders, large fortunes were realised from the smallest beginnings, and enterprise and industry were rewarded by the possession of immense wealth—nothing of the kind occurred among the tenant farmers of England. This might perhaps not be the effect of adverse legislation alone, but might perhaps be ascribed in some measure to the very limited field to which the operations of British farmers were confined. Even in the most prosperous times the most he could hope for was to support his family with credit; as to raising himself in the scale of society and advancing like other members of the community to a large fortune, it was entirely out of the question. If this was the case, we had to consider in what way it was possible, humanly speaking, to assist the efforts of tenant farmers in some material degree, and how best to contribute to their well-being and success. He could not pretend to a twentieth part of the practical knowledge possessed by those whom he had the honour of addressing; but it might perhaps be supposed that he could point out something in the way of legislation by which some good might possibly be done to the farmers of England. But he must warn them not to be too sanguine in their expectations in this respect. Unfortunately the case was not now as it was in those times, which some of those present were old enough to remember, when the agricultural interest was so represented that it was absolutely impossible to do anything like signal or substantial injustice to the class of men of whom it was composed. Then the farmers had the protection of the corn laws; then they had not over light taxation, but something like equally proportioned taxation, which if it fell heavily, as at times it did, upon the owners and occupiers of land, was equally distributed among other classes of the community. By the great measure of reform which was passed in 1832 the balance of the elective body, and consequently of the representation of the different classes of the community in the House of Commons, was not merely altered but overthrown; and from that time to the present the power of the Legislature had been exercised by a class of persons avowedly adverse to the agricultural community. Formerly the counties of England and half the towns of England were represented, if not by members of the agricultural interest, at least by those connected with the agriculture of the country; but since the great measure of 1832 the towns had multiplied, and the power of the commercial interest had entirely overwhelmed the whole of the agricultural class. If a proof of this were wanted, it might be seen in the course of the legislation of the last 25 years. Since 1832 the course of legislation had been directed rather to the remission than to the imposition of a tax upon any one or other class of the population; but wherever a tax had been taken off or imposed with the view of bearing upon one class rather than on another the effect had been adverse to the interests of agriculture. The great tax which has been put on during the last few years—which the youngest person could remember—although happily it could not well operate personally upon any one of them, was the succession tax. It was necessary to raise some 2,000,000*l.* or 3,000,000*l.* a year, and the Ministry of the day accordingly imposed the succession tax. The struggle impending at the present time referred to that which had been brought forward over and over again in the House of Commons, which, but for the dread of a collision between the two Houses of Parliament, would have been carried, and which would probably soon be carried in the Lower House, viz., the imposition of a probate duty in respect to land equal to the probate duty in respect to personal property. But it was not only in the imposition of taxes, or in the relief of portions of the community from taxes, that one might witness what he had adverted to in recent legislation. Every effort which had been made, not merely to take off the malt tax but even to reduce it, had from the commencement of the agitation on the subject in 1835 to the present hour utterly and totally failed; and so far from any success having attended the efforts of agriculturists in this respect, the effect of the last budget of the present Chancellor of the Exchequer was, he would not say to increase the malt tax, but to diminish certain benefits which, notwithstanding the tax, were allowed to maltsters. It was quite impossible not to see that in the present state of the Legislature, and in the present state of the representation of the country, the agricultural interest was not adequately represented, and remained comparatively powerless. The time was approaching when the whole system of the taxation of the country was about to undergo the consideration of Parliament. The malt tax, which produced he believed some 5,000,000*l.* a year, was one of those taxes which were classed within the designation of the Excise and Customs, and these raised of themselves a revenue sufficient for the entire expenditure of the country in ordinary times. It was only because we were a little troubled—he would not say alarmed—as to what might possibly be the intentions of our neighbours, and whether we might not be called to defend our own shores for the first time for seven centuries—it was for this reason only that the income tax had been increased, and would be continued in future if it was still levied. Whenever the alarm was passed, and the taxation of the country resumed its ordinary course, the expenditure of the country would be from 50,000,000*l.* to 55,000,000*l.*, 30,000,000*l.* of which or nearly so was for the interest of the national debt. Nearly the whole of this expenditure must be provided for out of those taxes to which he had alluded, and which, considering the great increase in the population, wealth, and resources of the country, would produce much more every year than they did at the present moment, just as they produced more now, though we were at the same nominal amount of taxation, than they produced 10, 15, or 20 years since. The whole question would be considered on this ground, and there would be very large remissions of the present system of taxation. Other questions would arise in which every agriculturist, every occupier, though only perhaps of 20 acres of land, was deeply interested, and whatever politics they might support, to whatsoever Ministry they might be attached, and for whatever candidate they might vote, he appealed to all who valued the prosperity of agriculture to exert their influence in every way to procure a remission of that burden of taxation which now oppressed the agricultural community. He did not think that they could at once prevail upon the Legislature, when Parliament was about to take off 3,000,000*l.* or 4,000,000*l.* of taxes, to select the malt tax as the one and only tax not to be retained; but he believed that, comparatively powerless as they were, if all who belonged to the agricultural interest of the country and had votes and the shadow of a shade of influence with members of either House, would only unite in drawing attention to all that related to the tax, they would succeed in making it one of the first imposts to be—if not altogether taken off—at least materially reduced. An indirect species of relief might also be afforded, for he hoped that before long, by cheapening, expediting, and facilitating the transfer of land, an increase would be effected in the real solid permanent value of property, not merely as regards landed proprietors who had to buy and sell in large quantities, mortgage, and lend their money on mortgage, but also as regards the owners of a few acres, and even occupiers. Again, it was said that something might be done in favour of tenant farmers in respect to the granting of leases. This was a very delicate and difficult subject. But if he might venture to make a suggestion he would recommend such covenants as would enable the tenant to cultivate the land so as to make it as profitable as it could properly and lawfully be made for him, without forcing upon the landlord improvements of which he might not approve, and which, after all, he might not be able to effect. And he would also recommend any one who during the next four or five years might enter upon the relations of tenant to a landlord to endeavour, even at some increase of rent, and even although he might be bound by covenants of which he might not altogether approve, to obtain as long a lease as possible at what might be considered the fair rent of the day. The immense influx of gold into this country was such that before very long it must have the effect of lowering the value of money, and consequently of enhancing the value of every commodity which money would purchase; and the result would be that the man who paid 400*l.* a year for his land now, and undertook to pay no more for the next 14 or 15 years, would find that he was paying that which his landlord when he received it would discover to be of much less value seven, eight, ten, and certainly 15 years hence, than it was at the present moment. It was only because the immense influx of gold during the last 12 or 15 years, which exceeded the amount received into this country during the first 100 years after the discovery of the Americas, had not been accompanied by a proportionate increase in the supply of silver, that the effect had not been felt at present; but he believed that a man who only paid 400*l.* a year on a lease for 14 years would find before one-half that term was at an end that he was paying a rent quite inadequate, as compared with the additional value his lands acquired by reason of the fall in the actual value of gold. Therefore, if they could obtain leases for 14 years at present prices they would be very fortunate."

MR. SEYMOUR FIRZGERALD, M.P., at a dinner at Horsham on Wednesday spoke as follows on the alliance of England and France:—

"It is I think a salutary rule at all public meetings such as this that what are called political questions should be avoided, that is to say, questions which can by possibility raise discussion or create difference of opinion at a meeting which ought to be marked by a general accord of opinion. But I do not think I shall at all infringe upon that rule if I make an observation or two on a matter of public importance, and yet a matter upon which there can be no difference of opinion among all classes of people. We are possibly, I am afraid, entering upon troublous times. After long years of general and happy peace there seems to be such an uneasy feeling abroad that men's minds are full of the anticipation of war. Now I am not an alarmist. I am not one of those who think it possible that there should be an invasion of this country. On the contrary, I believe that the present ruler of France for a long time has shown an earnest desire to cultivate an intimate alliance with this country. Long may that alliance subsist and endure, and I cannot conceive it possible that it should be in any danger. Heaven knows that on this side of the water there is no man who does not feel that anything like hostilities with France would be the greatest national calamity which could befall us. I believe that equally among the people of France the same feeling is commonly entertained. Such, at all events, is my confident opinion, and I believe that I have very good reason for entertaining it. Surely, then, upon the part of the Sovereign of France personally there can be no desire to enter into anything like a quarrel with this country. Let him for one moment consider what his position is as ruler of France in alliance with this country. So long as France and England are combined what coalition is there possible on the face of the earth which could give a moment's anxiety either to the one Power or the other? It is not only that, but so long as we are combined our commerce must increase, and we fetter the whole world in those chains which I believe to be more firm, more enduring, and stronger than any others which you can fancy in political life. Nothing in point of fact can be better or more durable than the fettering together of nations by bonds of common interest and association. If this, then, be the position both of the people of France and the ruler of France, what reason can there be to anticipate anything like a rupture of the amicable relations which have so long subsisted between this country and our French neighbours? Still less, what is there to give rise to that panic of invasion which has been so common throughout the country of late? At the same time I think it not only the interest but the duty of every man present, and of every man who loves his country, to contribute to the utmost in his power to that movement which, I am happy to say, has been so general throughout the country, and the object of which is to improve and increase, by voluntary means, the defences of the country. This, at least, I may say, that no man here can forget that that which we now feel to be a want is that which was pointed out by a man who was the greatest warrior of his age, and one of the most distinguished politicians and statesmen of this country—namely, the late Duke of Wellington, as an imperative national necessity. Therefore I would ask you, not as the result of a sudden panic—for that would be beneath our dignity and beneath our position, as England is strong enough to defend herself, and she need fear no man—but I would ask you when your attention at any time is called specifically to that which is known to be a great national want—namely, the want of a complete system of national defence, whether you would not be wanting to yourselves and the people at large if you did not do all in your power to put the defences of the country upon a satisfactory and sound basis."

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

THE NEW STAFF COLLEGE.—The first stone of the projected college for officers of the army who, having served a probation in regimental duties, seek by a higher course of training to qualify themselves for Staff appointments, was formally laid at Sandhurst on Wednesday by the Commander-in-Chief, the Duke of Cambridge. The College is pleasantly situated on a gentle slope half a mile to the eastward of the Cadets' College, and within the spacious grounds attached to that establishment. The new edifice, the foundations and basement of which are already laid up to within a foot of the ground floor, is to be in the modern Italian style, with a tower at each end, and is expected to be completed in 18 months. When finished it will afford accommodation for 40 students.

THE REV. JAMES BONWELL AND THE STEPNEY SCANDAL.—On Thursday morning a commission was opened in the hall of Doctors' Commons to inquire into the conduct of the Rev. James Bonwell, incumbent of St. Philip's, Stepney, in relation to the paternity, birth, and death of an illegitimate child, Philip Yorath, of which he was stated to be the putative father. The commissioners were Dr. Travers Twiss, chancellor of the diocese; Archdeacon Hale; Rev. T. Dale, vicar of St. Pancras; Rev. J. E. Kempe, rector of St. James's, Westminster; and Rev. W. G. Humphrey, rector of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. Mr. Coleridge and Mr. Buller appeared for the Bishop of London; and Mr. Best for Mr. Bonwell. Witnesses were examined at great length to prove the facts already familiar to the public, together with some further details of a still more aggravated character. The Court then adjourned to yesterday, when Mr. Best addressed the Commissioners for the defence. At the close of his speech the Commissioners consulted together for some time, when Dr. Twiss announced that the Commissioners had come to the unanimous conclusion that there are primâ facie grounds for instituting further proceedings. The Commission was then declared to be closed.

REVISION OF THE LITURGY.—A circular signed by the Dean of Westminster, the Rev Dr. Jelf of King's College, the Rev Dr. Irons of Brompton, the Rev J. E. Kempe of St. James's Piccadilly, and the Rev. J. P. Eyre of Marylebone, has been distributed among the clergy, with a view of calling forth an explicit declaration of their opinion on the question raised by Lord Ebury, in regard to the revision of the Liturgy. The circular quotes an extract from Lord Ebury's speech in the House of Lords on the 6th May, 1858, and revised and published in the present year, expressing his conviction that their lordships would agree with him in thinking that "any attempt to force alterations on the clergy of the Established Church which are distasteful, he would not say to the majority, but even to any considerable minority of them, would be as foolish as it would be fruitless." The circular therefore invites the co-operation of the clergy in satisfying his lordship that the great body of them object to any alterations in the Liturgy at the present time, by signing the following declaration:—

"We, the undersigned, clergy of the United Church of England and Ireland, desire to express our conviction that any attempt at the present time to alter the Book of Common Prayer would be attended with great danger to the peace and unity of the Church."

The Builders' Strike.—Lord St. Leonard's has addressed a letter to the Times proposing a plan with the view of inducing both masters and men to bring the strike to a satisfactory conclusion. He suggests that the declaration should be no longer acted on, and that in lieu thereof a paper to the following effect shall be printed, framed, and glazed, and hung up in every shop, &c., where all may see it. It will require no signature nor any counterfoil or number, and will, of course, leave the workman's liberty of quitting his employment untouched. It is self-acting and mutual, binds both master and man, and is not confined in its operation to the present time:—

"The law affecting masters and workmen was framed with a jealous regard to the interests of the working man. The Act of Parliament (6 George IV., cap. 129) which repealed all the former laws relative to the combination of workmen, states that combinations interfering with the free employment of capital and labour are injurious to trade and commerce, dangerous to the tranquillity of the country, and especially to the interests of all who are concerned in them. The object of the Act is then declared to be to make provision as well for the security and personal freedom of individual workmen in the disposal of their skill and labour as for the security of property and persons of masters and employers. The Act then makes the following offences punishable by imprisonment not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour—viz:—Where any person shall by violence to the person or property, or by threats, or by intimidation, or by molesting, or in any way obstructing another,—1. Force or endeavour to force any journeyman, manufacturer, or workman, or other person to depart from his hiring, employment, or work, or to return his work before it is finished; 2. Or prevent or endeavour to prevent any journeyman, manufacturer, workman, or other person not being hired or employed, from hiring himself to, or from accepting work or employment from, any person or persons; 3. Or for the purpose of forcing or inducing any other person to belong to any club or association, or to contribute to any common fund, or to pay any fine or penalty, or on account of his not belonging to any club or association, or not having contributed or having refused to contribute to any common fund, or to pay any fine or penalty; or on account of his not having complied, or his refusing to comply with any rules, orders, resolutions, or regulations made to obtain an advance or to reduce the rate of wages, or to lessen or alter the hours of working, or to decrease or alter the quantity of work, or to regulate the mode of carrying on any manufacture, trade, or business, or the management thereof. 4. Or shall force or endeavour to force any manufacturer or person carrying on any trade or business to make any alterations in his mode of regulating, managing, or carrying on such trade, manufacture, or business, or to limit his number of apprentices or the number or description of his journeymen, workmen, or servants. But the Act provides:—1. That any persons may meet together for the sole purpose of consulting upon and determining the rate of wages or prices upon which the persons present at such meeting, or any of them, shall require or demand for his or their work, or the hours or time for which he or they shall work in any manufacture, trade, or business; or may enter into any agreement, verbal or written, among themselves for the purposes of fixing the rate of wages or prices which the parties entering into such agreement, or any of them, shall require or demand for his or their work, or the hours or time for which he or they will work in any manufacture, trade, or business. This relates to the men. 2. The like powers are conferred upon the master in regard to consulting upon and fixing the rate of wages or price, and the hours or time of working—each class, masters and men, are subject to the same law. By a later Act, 22d Victoria, cap. 34, passed to protect the working man, it is provided that no one, whether in actual employment or not, shall by reason merely of his entering into any agreement with any workman, or other person or persons, for the purpose of fixing or endeavouring to fix the rate of wages or remuneration at which they, or any of them, shall work, or by reason merely of his endeavouring peaceably and in reasonable manner, and without threats or intimidation, direct or indirect, to persuade others to cease or abstain from work, in order to obtain the rate of wages or the altered hours of labour so fixed or agreed upon, shall be deemed or taken to be guilty of 'molestation or obstruction' within the meaning of the former Act, and shall not therefore be subject to prosecution or indictment for conspiracy. But it is provided that nothing contained in this later Act shall authorise any workman to break or depart from any contract, or authorise any attempt to induce any workman to break or depart from any contract. Such is the law which binds both classes. The masters accept its obligations without reserve, and pledge themselves to obey it both in letter and spirit. They have set forth the provisions of the Acts of Parliament in order that every workman may be informed of the law which binds him. The law itself, the masters find, lays down the true rules both for them and their men; they, therefore, have withdrawn the declaration originally required from the men, and substitute this paper. It alone will bind the workmen who have already made or accepted the original declaration—all will be placed on the same footing. There will be no distinction between those now at work and those who may resume work. The masters, in the spirit of peace and goodwill, require nothing of the men but the same obedience to the law as they themselves are ready to pay. The law itself, and nothing more, but nothing less, shall become the Rule of Trade. The simple object of the masters is, that, according to the law, they and their workmen shall be free to make what agreements they please, without the interference or coercion of any other persons. With that object the acceptance of employment where this paper is hung up will be considered to amount to an admission by the workman that he is not at that time, and to a declaration that during his employment he will not become, bound to any rules or customs which do or would deprive him or his fellow workmen of their free liberty to accept and continue or to relinquish employment upon such terms as they think fit. Freedom of action will place every man according to his merit, but the motto of both men and masters should be 'Let labour be unshackled.'"

The Great Eastern.—A meeting of shareholders (privately convened) of the Great Ship Company was held on Tuesday, Mr. Guedalla in the chair, in anticipation of the meeting called by the directors on Thursday. The latter, however, having been put off to the 11th of January, it was resolved unanimously to adjourn to the 6th of that month. There was a long and somewhat stormy discussion, in the course of which considerable dissatisfaction was expressed with the past management, and resolutions to that effect were at one period proposed, but, in consequence of the adjournment, they were not submitted. The Southampton banquet to the directors has been postponed till after the Christmas holidays.

Crystal Palace.—The report of the Crystal Palace directors, issued on Tuesday, states that the gross income of the year has amounted to 134,668*l.*, and the expenditure to 88,753*l.*, leaving a balance on the year to the credit of revenue of 45,315*l.*, which, with the amount brought forward from the last account, gives 57,940*l.* available for division amongst the shareholders. Of this, 26,663*l.* is to be appropriated to the payment of preference dividend and debenture bonds; and the directors recommend the payment of 2*s.* a share on the ordinary shares of the company, which will amount to 20,059*l.*, leaving a reserve of 11,218*l.* to be carried forward to the next accounts. The whole of the debenture stock has been allotted, the balance of the purchase money for the land (64,238*l.*) has been paid, and the property conveyed to the company as their freehold. The number of visitors during the year was 1,384,183, being an increase of 20,000 on the average of the four preceding years.

Property and Income-tax Association.—A conference of this association was held on Tuesday evening at the London Coffee House, to consider the best means during the ensuing session for securing "either an adjustment of the income-tax, or the total abolition of the charge upon trades and professions." Mr. Collier, M.P., took the chair and expressed his strong opinion that the income-tax, as it did not distinguish between incomes derived from permanent and those from uncertain property, was unjust. He hoped, on the reimposition of the tax, that some member of the House of Commons would move a resolution to make such a distinction, but if no member came forward to do so he would move the resolution himself. Mr. Elt moved and Mr. Potter seconded a resolution, declaring that the present mode of charging one uniform rate on all classes of income (except under Schedule B), is manifestly unjust, and pledging the meeting to endeavour to obtain such a reduction in the charges on trades and professions that the amount levied thereon shall not exceed one-half that levied on property. Mr. Hyam moved an amendment to the effect that the tax on precarious incomes derived from trades and professions should not be reimposed except under circumstances of great emergency. After considerable discussion, during which it was stated that the Chancellor of the Exchequer had in his speech made in October last, on board the Great Eastern, invited the expression of public opinion on these and similar topics, both the resolution and amendment were withdrawn, and the following resolution was agreed to, with only one dissentient voice:—

"That this meeting is of the opinion that the present mode of charging one uniform rate on all classes of income (except under Schedule B) is manifestly unjust, and hereby pledges itself, in anticipation of a proposal to reimpose the tax, to use the most strenuous exertions to secure its re-adjustment upon the footing of a fair and just distinction between permanent and precarious incomes."

The chairman then said, he was a practical man, and as a practical man he wanted the resolution to succeed, and thought they ought to set at work at once without waiting for the Chancellor of the Exchequer, or they would be too late. He was very glad that both the resolution and the amendment had been withdrawn, as the resolution now agreed would meet with the concurrence of the country and the House of Commons. It was then resolved unanimously that meetings should be held forthwith in all parts of the country, for the purpose of co-operating with the association, and a committee was appointed to carry out the objects of the meeting and receive subscriptions.

The New Meat Market.—At the Court of Common Council on Thursday, two reports were presented from the Improvement Committee and the Markets Improvement Committee respectively, upon references previously made to them, to consider whether any plan could be devised to establish a direct communication between the intended Metropolitan Railroad and the contemplated dead meat market at Smithfield. The reports were accompanied by a model and estimates, showing that the site could be cleared, the market built, railway communication provided, and large warehouses erected for the sum of 637,500*l.* After a long discussion, in which it was stated that the Great Northern Railway Company had agreed to connect their line with the New Cattle Market and the Metropolitan Railway, it was resolved by a large majority to agree to the reports and refer them back to the Committees to prosecute further inquiries, and open negotiations with the Railway Companies and other parties, with a view to the production of improved and more definite plans.

London Cabs.—The Assistant Judge of the Middlesex Sessions, at the recent sitting of the court called the attention of the magistrates to the practice which had prevailed of removing prisoners labouring under small-pox to the hospitals in public street cabs, and said that there is reason to believe that this fearful disease is propagated to a great extent by cabs being employed, and it behoves guardians and other parish officials to ascertain without delay what the practice is in their respective parishes.

Mr. Spurgeon.—The Surrey Music Hall being now opened on Sunday evenings for the performance of music, although chiefly sacred, Mr. Spurgeon has declined to preach there again. He will commence preaching to-morrow morning at Exeter Hall, and continue to do so every Sunday until further notice.

Destruction of the Trees and Shrubs in the Parks.—On Friday deputations from the parishes of Marylebone and Paddington waited upon Lord Palmerston for the purpose of calling his lordship's attention to the wholesale destruction of trees and plants in Hyde Park, and to urge his lordship to exercise his authority to put a stop to the same. Mr. Soden said the public considered a great wrong had been perpetrated towards them. Under the Chief Commissionership of Sir Benjamin Hall, great improvements had been made in Hyde Park, by laying down new walks and planting shrubs mixed with flowers, and the public were highly gratified with the result. They were now, however, astonished and annoyed to find that the whole of these shrubs and flowers had been removed from the walks between the Marble Arch and Stanhope Gate, and in the Green Park between the entrances at Hyde Park Corner and Devonshire House. Thus the public had been deprived of a useful and elegant recreation, and they appealed to his lordship to order the restoration of what had been, as they considered, wantonly destroyed. Professor Marks said the entire metropolitan public took a deep, and, he might say painful, interest in this matter, because a feeling prevailed that the rights of the working classes had been sacrificed to the selfishness of a class, between whom and the labouring population good will should prevail. In 1857 the House of Commons granted 1000*l.*, and the further sum of 350*l.* for making new roads and planting walks in Hyde Park, and the then First Commissioner carried out the work with right good will. That such improvement had the approval of the Queen was evident, as when Sir B. Hall mentioned to her Majesty that he desired to plant trees, but could not get a supply, the Queen unhesitatingly assigned to him for that purpose a large portion of land near Kew Palace to be used as a nursery. The shrubs were duly planted, but had, it appeared, become an eyesore to some inhabitants of Park Lane, who imagined that they would obstruct their view. Sir B. Hall was applied to to remove the trees, but refused. The same attempt was made with Lord John Manners with a like result; but he feared, in consequence of the illness of the present Chief Commissioner, the administration of the office had been induced to comply with this unreasonable request. Mr. Mann's proposal to sow the present vacant place with flowers in the spring was evidently an afterthought, and contrary to taste. He urged his lordship, as a popular Minister, not to suffer the working classes to go to the wall. Lord Palmerston said he had just received a report from the Office of Works, in which it was denied that what had been done had been in consequence of any representation from persons in Park Lane; but that the borders of the walk referred to were intended as a nursery; that what had been done was to take away some shrubs which did not flourish very well, and next year it was intended to put flowers. Plants that flowered in spring and summer would not stand the winter, and there was a difficulty. He certainly however thought that stripping the ground entirely of shrubs and flowers was not desirable. Mr. Dickson said since Sir B. Hall had left office the shrubs had been shamefully neglected. He said this as a visitor to the park daily. Another wrong was the removal of the seats placed in the park for the convenience of the public when Sir B. Hall was chief commissioner, which were only replaced after strong public remonstrance. Lord Palmerston said that he had heard of the subject for the first time from the deputation. He would however make it his business to inquire into it and see what was best to be done.

The Metropolitan Gas Question.—A deputation, composed of the directors of the various metropolitan gas companies, waited upon Mr. Milner Gibson, President of the Board of Trade, and subsequently upon Sir George Cornewall Lewis, the Home Secretary, on Friday, for the purpose of laying their views before them relative to the recent agitation respecting the supply of gas to the metropolis. The deputation was introduced by Alderman Salomons, M.P., Mr. F. Russell, and Mr. C. S. Butler, M.P. After a long discussion of the question, Sir G. C. Lewis said the Government were very unwilling to interfere in local legislation, and would not use their influence on one side or the other; and even in private bill legislation they were very reluctant to interfere; but there was something peculiar in the position of the metropolis. He thought what the deputation had stated showed that if there were to be any litigation, the only course would be to appoint a select committee of inquiry, or send them before a committee of the House of Commons; but there was not a case made out for the Government to interfere in one way or the other. If there were any chance of an arrangement he would ask the other side if they would make a proposal and place it in his hands. He would then consider it, and if he thought it a fair one he would hand it to the deputation and take their opinion on it; but if the gas companies were determined to stand upon their rights and have a war of select committees, then things must take their course. Mr. Burke assured the right hon. gentleman they did not adopt the course they were pursuing in any factious spirit. Sir G. C. Lewis did not believe they did, but when their pecuniary interests were attacked they were right in defending them. It was not desirable for the Government to interfere, except for a good purpose; and if they approved of his suggestion, he would do all he could to bring about a settlement of the question. Mr. Richards, chairman of the Imperial Gas Company, expressed their entire concurrence in the proposal. Sir G. C. Lewis said, then he understood he was to communicate with the delegates of the metropolitan vestries, and when he heard from them he would let the deputation know.

ST. GEORGE'S-IN-THE-EAST.—On Sunday there were four services as usual at this church, at one of which the Rev. Bryan King, the rector, officiated. That conducted by Mr. Hugh Allen passed off quietly, but the other three, in which the regular parochial clergy were engaged, were interrupted by hissing and coughing, the interruption proceeding entirely from boys and girls, who evidently looked upon the matter as a good joke. Some few grown-up persons made a point of "saying" the responses in a loud tone, in order to destroy the effect of the choristers' chanting, but their efforts were by no means successful. At the close of the sermon the preacher did not turn his face to the altar, a proceeding which has always hitherto occasioned an outbreak of feeling on the part of the people, and it may therefore be fairly assumed that the clergy are willing to make concessions.

THE ROYAL CHARTER.—The letters from Moelfra received on Monday report a further recovery of gold from the wreck of the Royal Charter—namely, 540lb. of gold coin, 40 ingots of gold, 286½ sovereigns, 47 rupees, 38 lbs. of golddust, five bars of gold, and one cup ingot and a piece of iron plate, with part of a bar of gold and some sovereigns driven into it. A further amount of about 50,000*l.* in gold bars, broken pieces of ingots, sovereigns and rupees, has since been recovered from the wreck. The sand and clay around that portion of the wreck where the bullion has been found is described as very rich in golddust. The total recovered now amounts to about 275,000*l.*

NEW VESTRY HALL AT CHELSEA.—The ceremony of laying the foundation stone of a new vestry hall in the parish of St. Luke's, Chelsea, took place on Monday in the King's Road, in the presence of the vestrymen and churchwardens, the local magistrates, the parochial clergy, Messrs. Hanbury and Byng, the county members; Mr. Tite, M.P., representative of the vestry at the Metropolitan Board of Works; and upwards of 1000 spectators. Viscount Chelsea, who had presented the parish with the freehold site of the hall, officiated on the occasion. The estimated cost of the hall will be 5600*l.*, and its accommodation very ample. The principal hall will measure 65 feet 6 inches by 40 feet, and be 30 feet in height, with elliptic ceiling, and a gallery in one end, and is expected to provide sitting accommodation for 1500. There will be also a smaller hall, or board room residences for the vestry clerk and messenger, a library, two reading rooms, vestry clerk's office, &c.

RELIEF OF THE PARALYTIC.—An institution for the relief of persons afflicted with paralytic and epileptic complaints has recently been formed under influential patronage. It is not intended to build a hospital but to take a house in an airy situation where they can give relief and subsistence, and it is also proposed to form a fund to enable the committee to allow a weekly sum to those sufferers who from motives deserving of respect preferred remaining at their own homes. It is stated that 100,000 persons are at present suffering from this disease, and that there are 10,000 cases annually which have a fatal termination. The total sums already received and promised amount to upwards of 1000*l.*

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the number of deaths in London in the week that ended Saturday, Dec. 10, was 1289, exhibiting a small decrease on the numbers of the two previous weeks. In the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1849-58 the average number was 1221; which, if raised in proportion to the increase of population, will become 1343. The return of last week was therefore 54 below the average. During the week the births of 920 boys and 918 girls, in all 1838 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1849-58 the average number was 1585.

BRADFORD.—On Wednesday night, the 7th inst., the house of Mr. James Farish, a retired worsted spinner and woolstapler in this town, was forcibly entered by thieves, and robbed of about 1500*l.* in gold coin and 60*l.* in provincial bank-notes. The door of the kitchen was found wide open, and an entrance had been effected by breaking a square of glass in the kitchen window, which looks into the back yard. A chisel which had belonged to the thieves was lying on the floor of the passage, and on the chisel were marks of blood, as well as on the kitchen floor, from which it is inferred that one of the thieves had cut himself in opening the window. It appears that Mr. Farish recently sold some stock or shares belonging to him, and the money of which he has been robbed was the proceeds of the sale. On Saturday week he advertised in a Bradford paper that he was ready to lend 1500*l.* at interest on good security, and it was only on the Monday before the robbery that he went to a bank and converted the money from paper into gold. He slept from home on the Wednesday night, and the thieves, who are supposed to have been watching the house since Monday, immediately took advantage of his absence to commit the robbery. At present there does not appear to be any clue to the detection of the robbers.

EAST RETFORD.—The Nottingham papers mention a report that the Government have it in contemplation to establish an arsenal on an extensive scale at or near Retford. The place is one of the most central in the kingdom, and situate at the confluence of two lines of railways, the one stretching from the Irish Channel to the German Ocean, the other from the north to the south of the kingdom.

HYTHE.—Major-General Hay, Inspector-General of Musketry, and head of the establishment at Hythe, has addressed his usual annual report to his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge:—

"The number," he says, "of officers trained during the year is 195 (which number includes three cavalry, seven artillery, and 17 officers of her Majesty's Indian forces), being an increase of 48 over the previous year; of these 195 officers, who were exercised in every respect as the non-commissioned officers and privates, 98 practised under the old system, and 97 (including the cavalry and artillery) under the new. Of the former 75 (or 77½ per cent.) became first-class shots, and 21 (or 21¾ per cent.) second-class shots, leaving only one in the third class. Under the latter 52 (or 59¾ per cent.) became first-class shots and 33 (or 38 per cent.) second-class shots, leaving only two in the third class. From the return, in which the performances of the non commissioned officers and privates under the old and new system are detailed, it will be observed that under the former 230 (or 60½ per cent.) passed into the first class, and 148 (or 39¾ per cent.) into the second class, leaving only 2 in the third class; and that under the latter 168 (or 52¾ per cent.) passed into the first class, and 142 (or 44½ per cent.) into the second class, leaving 11 (or 3½ per cent.) in the third class. In the foregoing calculations the cavalry and artillery are not included, the men of these branches of the service being armed, the former with breech-loading, and the latter with rifled, carbines. The results of the performances of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates in judging distances, are most satisfactory. Of the 195 officers, 131 (or 67 per cent.) passed into the first class; and of the 771 sergeants and rank and file, 529 (or 68½ per cent) passed into the first class, leaving of officers only two, and of non-commissioned officers and privates only seven, in the third class. The falling off in the per centage of first class in judging distance of the last two parties is not to be attributed to any increased difficulty in passing from one class to another, but to the fact that an instrument has been used to determine the correct distance instead of the chain formerly in use for this purpose, which circumstance prevented the possibility of any collusion on the part of the men by which their judgment could be assisted in arriving at the correct distance; thus the results in this exercise are rendered more truthful, and the men more efficient." Gen. Hay here supplies a table showing the performance of the pupils in those practices which are taken to establish the figure of merit. From this it appears that there is a slight improvement in favour of the practice on the old system in 1858-9; but comparing the performances on the new system with those on the old, the former are superior in the file and skirmishing practices, though otherwise slightly inferior, occasioned, no doubt, by the practices to 300 yards inclusive having been performed standing instead of kneeling, after 200 yards. Shooting standing, however, to at least 300 yards is, General Hay says, essential to efficiency, and will improve as the soldier becomes more perfect in the first practice of the present "position drill." Of the 195 officers who underwent the course of training to qualify for the position of instructor of musketry during the year, 163 obtained certificates, and 28 obtained second-class certificates; four failed, and consequently received no certificate.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—The second report of the liquidators of the Northumberland and Durham District Bank, which was one of the concerns that helped to cause the panic of 1857, has been published this week. The total of liabilities stated in the first report was 2,255,000*l.*, and the deficiency in the available assets, exclusive of the entire loss of the paid-up capital, was estimated at 1,191,118*l.*, but the present report shows an improvement of 111,666*l.* It appears that 587,227*l.* has since been extracted from the shareholders, that 40,000*l.* more is expected from the same source, and that 575,200*l.* is calculated upon as the result of an arrangement effected by certain of the shareholders to carry on the Derwent Ironworks, making an aggregate of 1,202,227*l.* The assets to meet outstanding liabilities, exclusive of interest, are now considered to show an excess of 136,160*l.*, but it is said they will require peculiar care, and that their collection cannot be completed before 1866.

PLYMOUTH.—It has been determined by Government to erect an extensive fort on the centre of the Plymouth breakwater, sufficient, with the land batteries on either shore, to effectually protect the entrance to the Sound. The work is to be commenced with all possible speed.

OXFORD.—A meeting, principally composed of undergraduate members of the University, was held recently in the Radcliffe Library, for the purpose of taking into consideration the best means of providing against those fatal boat accidents on the Cherwell and the Isis which have unfortunately been somewhat frequent during the last few years. Dr. Acland, Regius Professor of Medicine, presided, and stated that there was no foundation for the report that, within the memory of a well-known gentleman in the University, 46 of its members had been drowned in the rivers. The coroner had informed him that since the year 1828 there had only been 15 deaths of members of the University chargeable to drowning, while he had made the calculation that during that time the rivers had been traversed by from 800,000 to 900,000 persons. All this considered, he thought boating was not so dangerous as was supposed. The proportion of deaths was much smaller than had been imagined, and the remedy for the evils which did exist was in their own hands—they might learn to swim if they could not already do so. No doubt most of them would agree that these deaths ought not to have taken place at all, and that men who could not swim should not go into the light boats in which many of the accidents had taken place. A good deal of discussion followed, and several resolutions of a restrictive or compulsory character were proposed, such as that no member of the University be allowed to enter a light boat before having availed himself of a swimming belt to be provided; and that boatowners should not be permitted to let out such boats to persons who cannot swim under penalty of discommoning for one or more days. All these motions however were rejected, there being evidently a great reluctance in the meeting to restrict in any way the enjoyment of the river, as well as a strong desire to render boating more safe. Ultimately the following resolutions were agreed to, and ordered to be placed before the Hebdomadal Council:—

"1. That, although the number of fatal accidents from boating at Oxford are fewer proportionally than is generally supposed, it is highly expedient that steps be taken by the boating men themselves to make them as rare as is possible. 2. It is desirable that no person should go in canoes, wherries, or skiffs who cannot swim with ease; that the freshmen who cannot swim well and who desire to use canoes, wherries, or skiffs should, while bathing in company and under proper direction, practise swimming from an overset boat. 3. That whereas the means for learning to swim in Oxford are inconvenient and insufficient, the Hebdomadal Council be requested to take into consideration the construction, and, if necessary, to undertake the management of a proper swimming bath, fit for daily use during the two winter terms, and conveniently placed. 4. That the Council be requested also to consider whether they can obtain, and, if necessary, undertake the management of, a good open swimming pool in the river, with a proper swimming master in attendance at certain hours of the day during the summer term. 5. That the meeting offers the above resolutions to the attention of the Council, not only from the desire to diminish accidents, but from a wish to keep alive the English love of aquatic exercises, and to promote, as far as they can, the healthy as well as useful art of swimming for its own sake. 6. That it is desirable that in the case of all light boats strings be placed across the ruddocks before they go on the river. 7. That it is desirable that at the swimming bath a swimming master be engaged, and that he instruct pupils in the best means of saving drowning persons, and of recovering persons apparently drowned."

PORTSMOUTH.—The screw line-of-battle ship Duncan, 101, was launched on Tuesday in this dockyard in the presence of a large concourse of spectators. The Duncan, which bears the name and figure-head of the celebrated admiral the hero of Camperdown, is 3727 tons, and is to be propelled by engines of 800 horse-power. She will carry 101 guns on two decks, one of which will be a pivot gun of 95 cwt., 10 feet in length. She will receive her machinery in the steam basin at this port, and be completed as fast as possible for sea service.

SHIELDS.—Two hours after the conviction of Moody, the American mate, at the assizes last week, another case of stabbing occurred amongst Americans at this port. Steinmetz and Kelly, two American seamen, were drinking in a public-house about 10 at night, when they quarrelled and turned out to fight in the streets. While fighting among a crowd of persons Steinmetz drew out a spring knife and stabbed Kelly twice in the chest and once in the back. One of the wounds in the chest is nearly 3 inches deep, and has penetrated the lungs. Steinmetz is in the custody of the police.

THE NATIONAL EDUCATION QUESTION.—It is rumoured in Dublin that Mr. Cardwell has transmitted to Dr. Cullen and his colleagues the decision of Government upon their demands of a grant for separate educational purposes. The Chief Secretary, it is alleged, states that the Government will not depart from the national system of education, but will entertain any suggestions for its more efficient application to the circumstances of the country.

SYMPATHY FOR THE POPE.—The opinion of Lord Castlerosse in regard to the tendency of the clerical agitation on this subject has been singularly verified. The Roman Catholic hierarchy, finding that the Emperor Napoleon has disappointed their expectations, are now flocking upon the platforms of the "sympathy meetings" and "menacing" the ruler of France. At the Drogheda demonstration on Sunday Dr. Dixon, the Roman Catholic primate, delivered a speech, from which the following are extracts:—

"The world was beginning to become accustomed to this robbery of the Papal territory till at length a voice was raised, and what was that voice? It was the voice of the Catholic bishops of France. What did the Emperor Napoleon do? Did he welcome this expression of Catholic feeling? No: but he issued an edict that no newspaper in France should publish a pastoral from a Catholic bishop on the subject. We don't know the reason. Perhaps some will say his sleep was disturbed at the Tuileries or at Compiègne, and that he who could sleep soundly after the carnage of Magenta and Solferino could not sleep because of the sound of these pastorals. The newspapers of France went on to say, although they could not publish the pastorals, that such a bishop came out yesterday and such a bishop the day before with a pastoral. They are not allowed now to say that. If all the Catholic bishops of the world were to publish pastorals in France simultaneously there is not newspaper in France dare declare the fact. There is the freedom of the press in France, in that great country, the hero of which fights for freedom in other countries. I do not pronounce upon this; but it is not a new thing for Catholic bishops to be troublesome to the princes of the earth. It was the case before the days of Henry II. and St. Thomas of Canterbury, and I trust will always be the case when princes do wrong. They say that Napoleon III. is a man of deep views, and like an able dramatist who will not discover until the last act the great result his plot is intended to bring about, keeping for the last act of the Congress the statement of his good designs, and that the result will be to place the Pontiff on an eminence far higher than he ever occupied before. But up to this time no intimation of that kind is given. I cannot speak for the Pope, or for any member of the Roman Government but beyond that circle there is only one opinion in Rome that Napoleon is responsible for the state of Italy to day, that every injury done to the Pope is ascribable to him. It remains for him now to redress all this. We shall leave it now to the hopes of his friends, and the fears of those who distrust him. If he shall in the Congress make reparation for what has been done we shall applaud him; but if, on the contrary, he shall rise from the Congress after putting the seal of that body to a robbery the most sacrilegious and atrocious history will have to record—the abstraction of the Romagna from the Papal throne—it does not require the spirit of prophecy, but only a glance at the past, to say that from that day it will be seen that the star of Napoleon is no longer in the ascendant. It will be seen that the meridian

—that he is a falling man. It will not be im- but on the first occasion when he shall attempt the great Emperor his position will be manifested. —it will be either Solferinos or Magentas—it will be a prelude to it. He will not require to see the writing on the wall to know that he is weighed in and found wanting—that his empire, if not divided, from him and be given to the Bourbons and who have forgotten their differences now while for the reversion of his kingdom. That is a hypothe- If that should arise, happy will he be in the end if he could find some quiet island where, away from the cares of the world, he may prepare for that eternity even emperors must enter."

Dr. Moriarty, Roman Catholic Bishop of Kerry, has issued a pastoral in which he makes the following remarks on the same subject :—

"There is one on whom rests the entire responsibility of the present condition of Italy, and that one is the Emperor of the French. What may be his intentions for the future—whether he will use his dangerous powers to sustain the Holy Father, or curtail his dominions—no one can tell; but for what is past and doing he is answerable to Christian Europe. His present conduct may be as much a secret for himself as it is for others; but the principal indication we have had of his views would lead us to believe that he wishes to confine the Papal dominions between the Appenines and the Mediterranean, and thus ultimately to make the Pope a pensioner of the im- kingdom. How England can cheer him on in the execution of this project is not explicable by any sound political theory that we know of. A blind hatred of the Papacy can alone induce her thus to strengthen the arm of one who may become her enemy, and to estrange from her those who should be her defenders. When there was a question of persecuting Christ Pilate and Herod made friends."

At Clonmel on Sunday the Very Rev. Dr. Burke, the Papal returning officer for the borough, made the following remarks :—

"What has the British Government to do with the question of Italian liberty? Don't the French want liberty? They are governed by a despot—I don't want to censure him, because a despot rule is in his case necessary, but I am turning an argu- ment on the question. I admire Napoleon, because but for him, but for the supreme authority which he acquired, the affairs of religion and of society all over the world would be turned topsy turvy. But his subjects, nevertheless, want liberty in the sense those English statesmen mean, and why, then, don't they send over to aid the French? This is the reason, they are afraid of the French eagle—they fear that he might flutter over their shores, and that he would suddenly pounce down and stick his beak in the back of John Bull. In Russia the very lives of the people are in the power of the despot Nicholas. Why don't these English statesmen send their fleets up the Baltic to insist that this great monster of the north shall give full liberty to his subjects as they have in glorious England? As in the other case, they are afraid of the grunting of the Russian bear—they fear that he may descend from his northern fastnesses and fix his tusks and his claws in the back of John Bull and tear himself and his power to shreds and patches. They are afraid to touch Napoleon or Nicholas of the North; but the poor Pope, they are not afraid of him, because he is weak in a temporal sense. Thus they are acting the part of a cowardly boaster and bully, who is afraid of a strong man, but who illtreats a weak one. [A Voice.—'That they may not succeed.'] You are a good preacher, and I will say Amen to you. I think you would wield your power for the Pope against the Saxon enemy. [A Voice.—'No doubt of it.']—Will these men succeed with the power of England at their back? ('No, no.') I say no a thousand times. It is impossible they can succeed, for two reasons—first, because the Pope is shielded by the Omnipotent hand of Him who said, 'Thou art Peter; upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it;' and, next, the prayers of the glorious saints who, when living here below, were an ornament to the Church, will defeat every foe."

At Queenstown on Sunday Father Fielding spoke as follows on the English Government:—

"We are told in Ireland that we are not loyal; he told them that the Irish were loyal—were foolishly loyal, loyal for no reason, no object, no protection. Were the Irish loyal in the Crimea, or in China, or in India? They shed their blood like brave soldiers there; and it was too much to say they were then disloyal. There was a report now that it was to be feared was only too true—that England may soon want soldiers to protect herself, and that she cannot get them. (A Voice, 'Thank God.') There was a report abroad at present—whether it was true or false he could not say—that the English were secretly—they dare not do it openly—arming the Orangemen of the north to put down the Catholics of the south, lest they might rise in the midst of England's troubles, and give her annoyance. (A Voice—'Well, we're strong enough.') That showed the spirit of the Government. If that rumour be true, let the Orangemen come; they would meet their army, and defend themselves. And he said in the face of any Government they would not allow it to place the charge of Ireland in the hands of Orangemen, to come to the south for blood and slaughter. (A Voice—'Let them try it.') The Government knew very well that the people of this country hesitated very little, or would not care much, if Napoleon III. would step into this country at any moment. The Government knew very well that the Government of France would be as acceptable to the Irish people as the present Government. (A Voice—'That's a fact.') We are loyal, and only too loyal; but we would be more loyal if protected. As to the peace of the country, how can the people be expected to protect it? When the poor man is turned out of his house and holding and sees his wife and children wretched, what can you expect from any man in his miserable state? Putting myself in such a position, and saw this, what would I do? I declare I do not know what I would do. When the wild spirit of revenge prompts a man, can it will satiate it? It cries out, 'Give me justice, or I will take it myself.'"

THE ASSIZES.—NORTHERN CIRCUIT: YORK.—Joseph Briggs, 27; William Shaw, 23; George Chappell, 21; Samuel Earnshaw, 23; Victor Cookson, 20; and John Marsden, 33, were charged with having committed a rape on Sarah Ann Burrow at Raistrick, near Halifax, on the 6th ult. This case was one of a very revolting character, the details of which, so far as they were fit for publication, have already been noticed in our Provincial News. The charge was fully proved, and the jury found all the prisoners Guilty—Briggs and Shaw of the rape, and the other prisoners of aiding and abetting. Mr. Justice Wightman said that they had been convicted of a most cruel and brutal out- rage upon a decent, respectable young woman—an outrage which must have a destructive influence upon her future happiness. It was an offence of the deepest atrocity, and for such a brutal outrage the sentence must be one of the utmost severity. Not many years had elapsed since the prisoners would have paid the penalty of their lives for this offence, but the Legislature had since considered that a secondary punish- ment might prevent the commission of such crimes. The sentence of the Court therefore was that the prisoners be kept in penal servitude, Briggs for 25 years, and the other prisoners for 20 years each. The Manslaughter at Sheffield.—Abraham Bunney, an edge-tool grinder, of Sheffield, was found Guilty of the manslaughter of his wife, on Tuesday, the 27th of September, by striking her on the head with a sand hammer in a drunken dispute in which she had struck the prisoner. The jury recommended him to mercy, and he was sentenced to penal servitude for seven years. John Reed was tried for the man- slaughter of James Nolan at Sheffield, on the 16th Oct. This was an Irish fight, and the evidence was so contradictory that the jury acquitted the prisoner.—The Burglary at Worsborough.—Joseph Worrall was convicted of stealing a bank-note for 20*l.*, a pair of trousers, a pair of boots, a gold pin, two pairs of scissors, and a button-hook, the property of Major Charles Fraser, from the dwelling-house of Lord Wharncliffe, at Tankersley, on the 2d of August, and was sentenced to 12 months imprisonment with hard labour. Forgery.—Edward Gorman was found Guilty of uttering a forged 5*l.* Bank of England note, well knowing it to be forged, at Leeds on the 15th of September last, and sentenced to penal servitude for five years. LIVERPOOL.—Christopher Kelly was found Guilty of uttering a forged Bank of England note for 5*l.*, with intent to defraud the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, and was sentenced to six years' penal servitude. Murder of a Husband.—Susan Trotter was indicted for the murder of her husband. This was a melan- choly case of quarrels between husband and wife. Threats and violence had been used towards her by her husband, who, as well as she, was intoxicated at the time. She stabbed him with a table knife in the neck, and, in so doing, divided the artery to the arm, and caused his death. Her contrition after- wards was most touching. The jury found her Guilty of man- slaughter. The learned Judge feelingly addressed the prisoner, commenting upon this sad result of intemperance, which had made her by her own act a widow, and deprived her of the support of a man, for whom, it appeared, though too late, she had strong affection. He sentenced her to three months' imprisonment.

HOME CIRCUIT: MAIDSTONE.—George Howells, 18, and Charles Thomas Willis, 28, two soldiers, were convicted of arson under very peculiar circumstances, both of them having committed the crime in order to escape from serving in the army. Mr. Justice Williams in passing sentence said there was no doubt that the prisoners had committed the offences of which they had been convicted, in order that they might no longer con- tinue in the military service, and that they appeared to prefer the condition of convicts to that of soldiers. The offence they had committed was a very serious one, and, as a warning to others, he felt it his duty to sentence them to six years' penal servitude.

OXFORD CIRCUIT: STAFFORD.—The Wolverhampton Murder.—William Kilby, 46, wrench-maker, was tried for the wilful murder of George Kilby, his son, on the 30th Sept. last, at Wolverhampton, under the circumstances described at the time in our Provincial News. The evidence failed to show that the prisoner was near the shop when his son died; and the medical men stated that death might have resulted from natural causes. The jury at once Acquitted the prisoner. The Wednesbury Murder.—Benjamin Owen, 40, gasfitter, was tried for the wilful murder of Jane Owen, his wife, on the 18th October last, at Wednesbury. This was a very painful case. The prisoner, who bore a high character in the town, and had hitherto been a kind husband, had become exasperated by the drunken habits of his wife, and inflicted upon her such serious injuries that they caused her death. Mr. Justice Wiles summed up the case as one of manslaughter, and the jury, after a brief consultation, found the prisoner Guilty of that offence. The judge, addressing the prisoner, said he could hardly bring him- self to sentence to any punishment a man in favour of whom such testimony had been borne by the witnesses called for the defence, yet, in consequence of the frequency of offences of this character in recent times, the feelings of the country had been harrowed, and the character of the country had become hateful. He must therefore pass upon the prisoner a sentence that might tend to deter men from acting so ruffianly. The sentence of the court was that he must be kept in penal servi- tude for six years.

WESTERN CIRCUIT: WINCHESTER.—Forgeries by a Solicitor.—Edmund Wardroper, a solicitor, aged 45, pleaded Guilty to two indictments charging him with forging and uttering a pro- missory note for 257*l.*, and another for 350*l.*, with intent to defraud. The prisoner had been in extensive practice at Mid- hurst, in Sussex, and it is understood that his misconduct has been consequent on losses in betting transactions. Mr. Baron Channell addressing the prisoner said that a few years ago his life would have been forfeited for this offence, and considering his position in society, it was necessary to pass upon him a sentence of penal servitude for 10 years. The prisoner gave a suppressed groan, and was removed from the bar.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—The Finsbury Murder.—James Moore, 32, described as an umbrella maker, was indicted for the wilful murder of his wife, Mary Anne Moore, by cutting off her head with a razor. The prisoner was charged with the same offence on the coroner's inquisition. When he was called upon to plead, he said in a loud tone of voice, "No, no; not guilty." After the counsel for the prosecution had briefly stated the case, the prisoner said he thought he had a right to complain of being called a wretched man, as he had been several times by the learned counsel. He was not wretched, but very happy and comfortable. Baron Watson told the prisoner that it was certainly a very wretched position for any one to be placed in the condition he now stood in. His learned counsel, therefore, was not doing anything improper when he made use of the expression. Witnesses were then examined who proved the facts of the case which are already familiar to our readers, and several medical men, including the surgeon of Newgate who has recently had him under his charge, expressed their belief that when the prisoner committed the act he was not of sound mind. At the close of the evidence the prisoner insisted upon addressing the jury, and made a long, rambling, and incohe- rent statement, the principal object of which appeared to be to show that he was of perfectly sound mind. He said that when he was originally sentenced to nine months' imprison- ment he was healthy and strong, and able to bear the punish- ment, and nobody had a right to send him to a lunatic asylum. As to the crime of which he was accused, no one saw him do it; and with regard to the evidence as to the blood on his clothes, they were second-hand clothes, and the blood might have been on them when they were purchased. Mr. Baron Watson having summed up, the jury retired for a few minutes to deliberate upon their verdict, and on their return into Court gave a verdict of Not Guilty, on the ground of insanity. The learned judge ordered the prisoner to be detained during her Majesty's pleasure. He was evidently very much displeased at the result, and seemed anxious again to address the jury, when he was removed from the bar.

Obituary.

THE DOWAGER COUNTESS OF COURTOWN died on Sunday last, at her residence at Edinburgh, in her 35th year. She was the youngest daughter of the late Right Hon. Edward Pennefather, Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench in Ireland, and married in 1850 the fourth and late Earl of Courtown.

GENERAL SIR FREDERICK WILLIAM TRENCH, K.C.H., died on the 6th inst. at 81, Marine Parade, Brighton, at the advanced age of 84. He entered the army in 1803, and served in Sicily through- out 1806 and 1807; in the Walcheren campaign of 1809, in the Peninsula in 1811, and in Holland in 1814. He was formerly aide-de-camp to George IV. and William IV., also assistant quartermaster-general, secretary and storekeeper to the Ord- nance. He represented St. Michael's in Parliament from 1807 until 1812, Dundalk from 1812 till 1818, Cambridge from 1812 till 1832, and Scarborough from 1832 till 1847. He attained the rank of general in 1854.

THE HON. GEORGE JAMES WARREN died on the 16th inst. at Sydenham, in his 75th year. He served with the Grenadiers in the Peninsula, and was severely wounded at the siege of Burgos. He represented Lynn in Parliament from 1837 to 1851, was private secretary to Lord Palmerston when Secretary for Foreign Affairs from 1830 till 1841, when he was appointed Consul-General in Chili; he was promoted to the rank of Charge d'Affaires in 1847, and held that office until 1852, when he retired upon a pension. He was third son of the second Earl of Ormathwaite, by his first wife, and has left issue.

MR. WASHINGTON IRVING, one of the great pioneers of Ameri- can literature, whose name and works are as familiar to all English readers as if he had been a native of Great Britain, and whose genial life has long won for him golden opinions on both sides of the Atlantic, died on the 28th Nov. at his residence, "Sunny side," at the venerable age of 76. He was born on the 3rd April, 1783, in the city of New York. His early studies were directed to the profession of the law, but a love of literature was even then, pre-dominant, and seemed to be engrafted in his nature as its master passion; and before he was 21 he began his career as a writer. In 1809 he published the well-known "History of New York," by Diedrich Knickerbocker. Mr. Irving did not choose the profession of law, but in 1803 went into mercantile business with his brother, but the house was not successful, and in 1817 it failed. At the time of the failure Mr. Irving was in Europe, where his reputation was such as to gain for him the friendship of Sir Walter Scott. Here he resolved to make the pursuit of literature the object of his life, and as a result the "Sketch Book" appeared in 1820. It was recognised as the product of taste and genius, and the highest praise was justice to its merits. Other well-known works followed, as, in 1822, "Bracebridge Hall;" in 1824, the "Tales of a Traveller;" in 1826, the "Life of Columbus;" in 1829 the "Conquest of Granada;" and, in 1832, the "Alhambra." Meanwhile Mr. Irving, in 1828, 1829, and 1831, had become Secretary to the American Embassy in London, and had spent much time in Spain and in various parts of Europe. In 1832 he returned to the United States, after an absence of 17 years; and his return was a triumph—so heartily was he welcomed home by his fellow-countrymen. Mr. Irving continued his literary labours, and the result of a visit made to the Indian tribes was in 1835, the "Tour on the Prairies." Then followed "Abbotsford and Newstead Abbey," "Legends of the Conquest of Spain," in 1836, "Astoria," and in 1837, "The Adventures of Captain Bonneville." In 1839 he engaged to supply the "Knickerbocker Magazine" with a monthly article. In 1842 Mr. Irving was appointed American Minister to Spain, and at the end of his official term in 1846 he returned to the United States. In 1848 he superintended a revised edition of his works; in 1849 published "Oliver Goldsmith, a Biography;" in 1850, "Mahomet and his Successors," and "Wolfert's Roost;" and in 1855, his "Life of Washington." No American writer has ever held so high a place in popular regard in England as Washington Irving, and it has been truly said that he was never considered a foreigner in English society. During his residence in London in 1830, the Royal Society of Literature conferred on him one of the 50-guinea gold medals provided by George IV. for eminence in historical composition; and in the following year the University of Oxford conferred on him the degree of D.C.L.

MR. THOMAS DE QUINCEY, author of the celebrated "Con- fessions of an English Opium-eater," and other philosophic works, died at Edinburgh on the 8th inst. in his 75th year. For many months past he has resided in that city, preferring the town to his house at Lasswade, mainly for the convenience of superintending the passage through the press of the collected edition of his works, of which the 14th and last volume is nearly ready for publication. For some weeks past his health had been seriously affected, but as he was frequently so, no and alarm was not excited as to his condition until very lately, and the end, though it could not be said to be either sudden or premature, was so far unexpected. Two of his daughters, his youngest and eldest, were with him at the close. The second, the wife of Colonel Baird Smith, is in India with her husband; one of his sons is also in India—a captain in the army; the other, a physician, is in the Brazils. The eldest daughter is the wife of Mr. Robert Craig, now a farmer in Ireland, whence she was called to her father's death-bed. The youngest is un- married. Mr. De Quincey was esteemed by a large circle of friends as an accomplished scholar and courteous gentleman, and his conversation had the charm of uniting with that beauty and language, subtlety of thought, variety of illustration, and quaintness of humour that distinguish his writings.

MR. JOHN FINCHAM, the well-known naval architect, died a few days since at his residence at Highland Lodge, near Ports- mouth, in his 75th year. He was for many years master ship- wright of Portsmouth Dockyard, and superintendent of the School of Naval Architecture. He was also well known as the builder of the celebrated Arrogant, the first screw frigate pos- sessed by this country, and still looked upon as one of the best of her class. Much of his time and study was devoted to the introduction of the screw propeller into the British navy. His "History of Naval Architecture," "Outlines of Shipbuilding," "Treatise on Laying-off Ships," and on "Masting Ships," are unequalled in the English language for the amount of research and professional knowledge they contain. As an acknowledg- ment of their merits the Emperor Nicholas of Russia presented Mr. Fincham with a snuff-box set with diamonds, and Mehemet Ali presented him with the order of the "Bey."

THE REV. T. W. LANCASTER, M.A., Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford, was found dead in his bed on Monday morning. He had been in failing health for some time past, but had latterly become so much better that he dined in the common room at Magdalen on the previous evening, and appeared in better health and spirits than usual. The evidence at the inquest showed that death had been caused by a sudden attack of disease of the heart, and the jury returned a verdict accordingly. Mr. Lancaster, besides being Fellow of Queen's and Public Examiner, had been the Bampton Lecturer and published several theological works of a standard character. At the time of his death he was engaged in seeing a volume of his sermons through the press.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, Dec. 12.

We have a larger supply of Beasts than has been known for several years; however, there are many of inferior quality, consequently choicest kinds are dear. We are not heavily supplied with Sheep, yet trade is dull. Late prices are fully maintained, and in some instances exceeded. Good Calves are scarce and dear. From Germany and Holland there are 540 Beasts, 980 Sheep, and 125 Calves; from Scotland, 1000 Beasts; from Ireland, 500; from Norfolk and Suffolk, 500; and 3000 from the northern and midland counties; West Country, 500.

THURSDAY, Dec. 15.

We have a considerable supply of Beasts, and trade for them is dull; notwithstanding the favourable weather prices are decidedly lower. The number of Sheep is not larger than expected. yet it exceeds the demand. The liberal supply of last Monday of all kinds of stock in some measure accounts for the dull trade to-day. Calves are also lower. From Germany and Holland there are 290 Beasts, 1140 Sheep, and 159 Calves; from Scotland 100 Beasts; from Norfolk and Suffolk, 400; from Ireland, 200; from the northern and midland counties, 500; and 142 Milch Cows from the home counties.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, Dec. 12.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was small, poor in quality, and in bad condition; a few picked samples were taken at the full prices of this day se'nnight, but the bulk remained unsold at a late hour. The demand for foreign was quite in retail, and its value remains unaltered. Finest malting Barley brings last week's rates, secondary qualities are very difficult of sale, and 1s. to 2s per qr. cheaper. Beans and Peas are unchanged in value. The Oat trade is quiet at an advance of 6d. per qr. upon the forced sales of this day week. In the price of Flour there is no alteration.

FRIDAY, Dec. 16.

During the last eight days the weather has been frosty, since Monday severe, with some fog and an occasional slight fall of snow. The Wheat trade throughout the kingdom has been inactive, caused partly by the bad condition of the English, and the firmness of holders of foreign Wheat. The markets for spring corn of all kinds were dull, with a lowering tendency of prices. The Flour trade has been steady, without any alteration of value. The arrivals of grain-laden vessels from Southern Europe off the coast this week are limited to 2 cargoes of Wheat, 1 of Maize, and 1 of Barley. The sales also are very insignificant, including Taganrog Ghirka Wheat at 46s. 9d. to 47s., Sandomirca at 46s. 9d. per 480 lbs.; Ibrail Maize at 30s. to 30s. 3d. per 480 lbs. On passage were sold Galatz Maize at 33s. nett, per 492 lbs.; Danube Barley at 25s. 6d. nett per 400 lbs. The arrivals of English Barley this week are large, moderate of English Wheat, small of Oats, and unusually small of all foreign grain. This morning's market was very thinly attended, nevertheless the English Wheat fresh up or left over from last day was sold at the extreme prices of Monday last. Foreign was in limited request, and being held for a greater advance than millers were willing to comply with little business resulted. Barley is a slow sale at late rates. Beans and Peas are unaltered in value. The Oat trade is steady at an advance of 6d. per qr.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday, Dec. 13.—We have had a fair attendance of buyers at our Corn Exchange this morning, but they showed little disposition to operate, and only a trifling business consequently resulted. Both Wheat and Flour are, however, held steadily at previous rates, the American advices to hand during market imparting additional firmness to holders. Indian Corn was little inquired for, and previous quotations are with difficulty obtainable. Oats and Oatmeal dull and rather cheaper. Beans, Peas, and Barley all rule in buyers' favour.

FRIDAY, Dec. 16.—The grain market was quiet but firm. Common Wheat in fair demand. Flour dull. Feeding stuffs of all kinds dearer. Indian Corn and Oatmeal 6d. advance. Oats, Beans, and Barley firm.

POETRY AND PICTURES FROM THOMAS MOORE: Selections of the most popular and admired of Moore's Poems, copiously illustrated with Engravings on Wood from original Designs by eminent Artists.

"We have here the gems of Moore's poetical writings, light and serious, trifling and tender, didactic and descriptive, judiciously scattered through the volume. Perhaps there are none of the poets who supply so many and such varied subjects for the painter. Moore was not merely a poet of sentiment: even in his smallest lyrics there is a character which the eye as well as the fancy may body forth. In scenery he is often minute as well as rich, and many of his lyrical pictures are taken from nature. It is not, therefore, surprising to find this book very beautifully illustrated . . . We heartily recommend 'Poetry and Pictures from Thomas Moore' as a valuable contribution to British Art, especially to be welcomed at this period of the year."—Art Journal.

News of the Week.

An important pamphlet has just been published in Paris on the subject of the Papal States, under the title of "The Pope and the Congress." It is from the pen of M. DE LAGUERONIERE, the author of the famous pamphlet entitled "NAPOLEON III. and Italy," which heralded the recent war with Austria, and is universally regarded as the manifesto of the EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH on the Papal question. After examining at great length the position of the POPE in his spiritual capacity as the infallible head of the Roman Catholic Church, it proceeds to discuss the relations of his spiritual dominion to his temporal power. As the result of this examination, it declares that the POPE is not fit to govern a large State, and that his temporal sovereignty ought in future to be restricted to the city of Rome; that the Romagna ought to be separated from the Papacy—first, because the POPE ought not to have many subjects; secondly, because it is already separated; thirdly, because France can neither restore the Papal power by force nor allow any other Power to do so; and fourthly, because France, as a liberal nation, cannot compel a people to submit to a Government which their will rejects. At the same time it is declared that the POPE must not be a subject of any one Power, and therefore must be left in possession of Rome, rich in so many associations, and be there supported by the contributions of the whole Catholic world. The city of Rome, as the seat of the Papal Court, must have no army, representation, press, or magistracy, the occupations of the citizens being "contemplation, the arts, the preservation of their ruins, and prayer." As to the power of the Congress to effect these arrangements, the pamphlet observes that Europe, which could sacrifice Italy in 1815, can emancipate her in 1860; and it disposes of the special objection that the majority of the great Powers are by the fact of their being schismatic rendered incompetent to deprive the POPE of any of his provinces, by declaring that as these same Powers gave the provinces to the POPE in 1815, they have certainly the right to consider in 1860 whether they can leave them in his possession.

A despatch from Madrid informs us that on Tuesday last 8000 Moors attacked the Spanish position, but were compelled to retreat in great disorder, and with a loss of only 51 wounded on the part of the Spaniards.

Accounts from St. Petersburg announce the important news that the war in the Caucasus is at an end, the Circassian chief, MAHOMED AMINE, having made his submission to Prince BARIATINSKI, with all the people of Abadzekhe, amounting to 100,000 men. In consequence of this surrender Prince BARIATINSKI has been promoted to the rank of a Field-Marshal of the Empire, and the Borodino Regiment is henceforth to bear his name.

From the United States we learn that the President's message was not delivered on the 13th inst., the election of Speaker having been delayed by the angry discussions in both Houses on the slavery question. General SCOTT has proposed to Governor DOUGLAS a joint occupation of the island of San Juan by a small military force of each nation, as a precautionary measure for the protection of their respective countrymen, without prejudice to the claim of either nation to the sovereignty of the island. Governor DOUGLAS, in reply, has expressed his conviction that no obstacle exists to a completely amicable and satisfactory adjustment, either on the plan suggested by General SCOTT or on some other that may be mutually agreed upon, pending the diplomatic discussion of the title to the island.

LAW APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Collier, M.P., Q.C., has been appointed Counsel to the Admiralty and Judge-Advocate of the Fleet, in succession to Mr. Atherton, Solicitor-General. The appointment, not being an office under the Crown, does not vacate Mr. Collier's seat in Parliament as member for Plymouth.

VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—A meeting of the enrolled members of the London Brigade was held on Thursday at Guildhall, at which it was unanimously resolved to present an address to the Duke of Cambridge inviting his Royal Highness to accept the colonelcy of the Brigade. On Saturday afternoon about 700 members of the brigade, preceded by their band, marched to Guildhall, and took the oath of allegiance before the Lord Mayor. The ceremony attracted more than ordinary attention, and a large concourse of spectators assembled in the hall to witness the proceedings.—The executive committee of the London Irish received on Saturday a communication from the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, the Earl of Carlisle, expressing his Excellency's willingness to form one of the council, and co-operate in carrying out the effectual organisation of the corps. Communications have also been received from Liverpool and Manchester stating that the committee engaged in forming an Irish corps in those towns have resolved upon co-operating with the London body. The corps met on Thursday in Westminster Hall for drill, and though it was only formed within the last month, there was a strong mustering of effectives of all ranks, and of all political and religious opinions.—The directors of the Oriental Bank have given the London Scottish permission to drill in their spacious hall. A company is forming in the Islington district in connection with this corps.—The officers of the British Museum, with the sanction of the trustees, have resolved on forming a rifle corps in connection with that institution.—The secretary to the Audit Office corps has received, through the Lord-Lieutenant, a communication from the Secretary of State for War stating that her Majesty has accepted the services of the Civil Service brigade, which will rank as the 21st Middlesex. The brigade will be formed of companies of the effective members of the various Civil Service corps in London, each company being equipped, drilled, officered, and fully organised by its own corps or club; and the general affairs of the combined force will be managed by a council of representatives from each of the corps furnishing companies.—The members of the Inland Revenue Corps at Somerset House are now regularly drilled in the newspaper stamping-room of the establishment, which, being large and well lighted with gas, is exceedingly commodious for the purpose and available in unfavourable weather. The enrolled members amount now to nearly 100, and fresh accessions are made daily.—A meeting of gentlemen belonging to the various public offices in the vicinity of Whitehall was held on Friday, Mr. Tom Taylor in the chair, when resolutions were unanimously adopted for the formation of a Whitehall Corps, in connection with the Civil Service Brigade. A committee composed of members of the several departments was elected, and Mr. Merrifield, of the Privy Council Office, was [illegible] honorary secretary.—An attempt, originating [illegible] themselves, is now making to organise a corps [illegible] among the students of King's College, and about [illegible] volunteers have been already enrolled.—The Inns Court corps continues to receive additions to [illegible] numerical strength daily. Starting, little more than a fortnight ago, with about 200 members, the number has increased to 520, and the practice proceeds with unflagging energy and spirit. The corps is divided into six companies, each of which is drilled twice a week either in the hall or grounds of Lincoln's Inn, or those of the Inner and Middle Temple. Shortly after Christmas the whole corps is to be assembled for the purpose of electing officers.—The five companies appointed by the Lord-Lieutenant for the Northern District of London have amalgamated under the title of the North London Rifle Volunteers. An influential council is formed, and will shortly be announced. The 4th and 5th companies are now in an advanced state of drill, and the 4th has received the proportion of rifles allowed by Government.—On Saturday afternoon there was a large muster of effective members of the South Middlesex corps at Beaufort House, Walham Green, for the purpose of drill and parade. At the close of the drill Lord Ranelagh administered the oath of allegiance to several new members. The total effective strength of the corps now amounts to upwards of 600, exclusive of nearly 300 honorary members.—On Saturday evening a crowded public meeting of inhabitants of Belgravia and Knightsbridge was held in the school-room attached to St. Paul's Church, Wilton Place, Earl Grosvenor, M.P., in the chair, at which it was resolved to form a company for the district of St. Paul's, in connection with the Queen's Corps. In the course of his address Lord Grosvenor said he did not know how many volunteers had enrolled themselves throughout the country; but he was quite sure before long—putting it at a very moderate figure—we should have 150,000 trained and skilled riflemen and that, he felt sure, would be one of the best guarantees we could have for the peace not only of this country, but of Europe. He also adverted to the meeting held last week for the formation of a rifle corps for the districts of Belgravia and Knightsbridge, to be incorporated with the South Middlesex under Lord Ranelagh, and said that considering how extensive South Middlesex was, he thought it was hardly fair in Lord Ranelagh to encroach on a much smaller one, previously occupied by the Queen's Volunteers. Colonel Knox, M.P., Colonel Vereker, and Mr. Curzon assured the meeting that there was no rivalry on the part of Lord Ranelagh, and Colonel Knox added that instead of allowing the movement to dwindle into small isolated bodies it was desirable to associate together in large masses, trained and disciplined.—The St. Clement Danes corps, which now numbers upwards of 60 members, meets for the purpose of drill every Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday evening, in the hall of St. Clement's Inn.—The fund of the St. James's Westminster corps now amounts to upwards of 500*l*., and nearly 100 effective members have been enrolled, including Earl Spencer, the Hon. Frederick Byng, and Mr. Henry Grenfell.—The corps of St. Martin's in the Fields and St. George's Hanover Square meet regularly for drill in Westminster Hall, and the numbers of both corps are daily increasing.—The St. Pancras and North Middlesex corps now numbers upwards of 100 effective members.—A crowded meeting was held at the Music Hall, Store street, on Thursday evening, in furtherance of the establishment of a volunteer corps for the united parishes of St. Giles and St. George, Bloomsbury, at which it was resolved that the corps to be raised in these parishes should form part of one of the Middlesex corps.—A numerously attended meeting was held at the Beaumont Institution on Thursday evening, Mr. Butler, M.P., in the chair, at which it was resolved to form a company in the Mile End district to be incorporated with the Tower Hamlets Corps.—The musters of the Victoria Rifles continue to increase weekly, while the candidates for admission are so numerous that its effective strength will soon reach 1000. The corps, in addition to their parade ground of 14 acres at Kilburn, have obtained from Government the use of the riding-school at the St. John's Wood Barracks, and have also secured another ground for rifle practice, with a range of nearly 2000 yards.—A meeting was held at Ealing on Tuesday, the Right Hon. S. H. Walpole, M.P., in the chair, at which it was unanimously resolved to form a rifle volunteer corps in the immediate neighbourhood of that parish.—On Saturday afternoon a numerous and influential meeting of the residents of Blackheath and Lee was held, General Alexander in the chair, when the oath of allegiance was administered to the members of the Blackheath and Lee Company of Kent Rifles.—A numerously attended meeting was held on Tuesday at Albion Hall, Dalston, Mr. Ayrton, M.P., in the chair, at which it was resolved to form a rifle corps for Dalston and its vicinity.—A public meeting has been held at Stockwell, Mr. Roupell, M.P., in the chair, at which it was resolved to form a Stockwell and South Lambeth company, in connection with the 1st Surrey.—From the provinces we learn that meetings in aid of the movement have been held during the week at Ashton-under-Lyne, Botley, Bishopstoke, Boston, Bridgend, Banbury, Barnard Castle, Blandford, Cardiff, Colchester, Carnarvon, Chester-le-Street, Diss, Driffield, Exeter, Epperstone, Greenhithe, Greenwich, Guildford, Glasgow, Harwich,

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The French Cabinet yesterday by telegraph informed the Powers concerned that the opening of the Congress will not take place before the 19th January.—The Pope has addressed an autograph letter to the Emperor, declaring that he is willing to be represented at the Congress, "having full confidence in the loyalty and firmness of the eldest son of the Church, to whom God has intrusted the mission to protect the patrimony of St. Peter against illegal covetousness." Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne will be the Second Plenipotentiary of France; the Marquis d'Antonini will be the Second Plenipotentiary of Naples; Count Rechberg will be the First Plenipotentiary of Austria; and Cardinal Antonelli will represent the Pope. The French Ambassador at St. Petersburg has communicated to the Russian Government the wish of the Emperor Napoleon that the functions of first Plenipotentiary of Russia may be intrusted to the Minister for Foreign Affairs. Prince Gortschakoff has accepted the invitation, but has expressed a desire that the opening of the Congress shall not take place until after the Russian new year (January 13), as he is detained at the Court on that day by the duties of his office. Count Avigdor, representative of the Republic of San Marino at the Court of Paris, has presented a memorandum to Count Walewski, addressed to the future Congress, against the encroachments of Piedmont. The Emperor of the French has conferred the Grand Cordon of the Legion of Honour on the Prince of Orange. It is officially announced that on the 1st of January the Emperor will receive the corps diplomatique and the legislative bodies. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday Prince Metternich received at his hotel the principal members of the diplomatic corps, the grand dignitaries of State and of the Crown, the officers of the household of the Emperor, of the Empress, and the Imperial Princes. Princess Metternich will hold her receptions next week, immediately after having been presented to the Empress. Prince Jerome's health continues to improve, and no bulletins will be published for some days.—M. de Laguerronière, the author of the pamphlet "Napoleon III. et l'Italie," which heralded the late war with Austria, has just published an important pamphlet on the political condition of the Roman States under the title of "Le Pape et le Congrès." The following extracts relative to the sovereignty of the Holy See over the Romagna will give an idea of the general tenour of the work:—

"We ourselves are of the opinion that the separation of the Romagna would not tend to diminish the temporal power of the Pope. His territory, it is true, would be diminished, but his political authority, disencumbered of a resistance which paralyses it, would not be weakened, but morally strengthened. For, let us repeat it, the authority of the Head of the Church does not lie in the extent of a territory which he cannot retain except by the support of foreign arms, and in the number of subjects which he is obliged to oppress to make them submit; it lies in the confidence and respect which he inspires, and which relieve him from having recourse to extreme measures of rigour and constraint, bad for all Governments, but especially so for a Prince who reigns gospel in hand. What matters it, then, to the prestige, to the dignity, to the greatness of the Sovereign Pontiff, the square miles comprised in his States? Does he want space to be beloved and venerated? Are not his benedictions and his teachings the most powerful manifestation of his right? Does he not love and bless the whole universe? Whether he rules over few or many, that is not the question; what is essential is that he should have a sufficient number of subjects to be independent, and that he should not have too many to be carried away by those currents of passions, of interests, of novelties which are produced everywhere where there are considerable agglomerations. The importance of the Pope does not consist in the 21 provinces which he actually possesses. Bologna, Ancona, and Ravenna, separated from Rome by a chain of mountains, the character of their inhabitants and historical souvenirs add nothing to the splendour of Rome. The Pope throned at Rome, his seat at the Vatican, is what awes the world. The Sovereign of the Roman States is scarcely thought of. By restoring the Romagna to the Holy Father it would not be restoring to him respectful, submissive, and devoted subjects, ready to obey his behests; it would be giving him enemies of his power, resolved to resist him, and whom force alone could keep under. What would the Church gain thereby? It would be obliged to see unfaithful sons in rebellious subjects, and to excommunicate those it ought to strike. To assert its sovereignty it would, perhaps, have to renounce its noblest title, that of Mother. This is not what it desires. This is not what the Bishops and the Catholics desire. A resumption of possession acquired at such sacrifices would be a disaster, and not a triumph. For some 100,000 inhabitants restored to the temporal sway of the Pope, it would give a blow to his spiritual authority, from which the protection of God and the wisdom of Europe will know how to protect it. * * * The territory of the Papal States, therefore, is no more indivisible than its extent is invariable. Like all possessions, this one is subjected to the influence of events; it is extended or diminished, according as its interests and the general necessities of policy impose changes upon it. In this respect nothing is exempted. Only the spiritual authority of the Pope is immutable, like the truths it represents and the doctrines it teaches. As to the temporal authority allied to the other, it, by a superior principle, necessarily remains subjected to all the conditions of human things. To endow with a divinity that which is only human would be to lower the power that is Divine, and give the character of eternity to institutions as mutable and fluctuating as the accidents, the changes, and the progress of society. All the reasons that are brought forward to impeach the competence of the Congress and fetter its freedom of action, are therefore valueless. Europe, which in 1815 could succour Italy, can in 1860 emancipate and save her. The right of acting is the same; the only question is its better application. As to the special objection that the majority of the great Powers being schismatic they are by that fact alone rendered incompetent to deprive the Pope of one of his provinces, we reply—since these same Powers in 1815 gave them to the Pope, they have certainly the right to consider whether they can or cannot leave them in his possession in 1860. What is to be done in the actual position of affairs to reconcile interests that appear irreconcilable? Two extreme parties are opposed to each other—one wishes to deprive the Pope of everything, the other to give him all. They are two hypotheses equally inadmissible, and both, though radically contrary to each other, would have the same result for the Papacy. We believe there is another course that may be taken. First, we wish that the Congress should recognise as an essential principle of European order the necessity of the temporal power of the Pope. That is for us the chief point. The principle here appears to us to have more value than the territorial possession, more or less extensive, that will be its natural consequence. As for this territory itself, the city of Rome includes all that is most important in it; the rest is only secondary. The city of Rome and the patrimony of St. Peter must be guaranteed to the Sovereign Pontiff by the great Powers, with a considerable revenue, that the Catholic States will pay, as a tribute of respect and protection to the Head of the Church. An Italian militia, chosen from the élite of the Federal army, should assure the tranquillity and inviolability of the Holy See. Municipal liberties, as extensive as possible, should release the Papal Government from all the details of administration, and thus give a share of public local life to those who are disinherited of political activity. Finally, every complication, every idea of war and of revolt, must be for ever banished from the territory governed by the Pope, that it may be said, where reigns the Vicar of Christ, there also reign wellbeing, concord, and peace. It is the task of the Congress to effect this transformation, become necessary to consolidate the temporal authority of Rome. As we have before said, this consolidation is absolutely connected with the interests of Europe. As a temporal and divine institution, the Papacy has nothing to fear from men; it is eternal. As a political institution it is exposed to all the trials and calamities that impend over all human things. Well! it is important to the security and honour of all that it should not be attacked in the constitution it has received from time and history. Catholic or schismatic, the great Powers have the same interest, for the independence of the head of the Church is not only a question of conscience and religion, it is also a guarantee of the moral equilibrium of the world. This great cause, therefore, cannot be indifferent to any one; and we know no cause more worthy of the arbitration of those who are called on to judge it."

The Tours papers state, in reference to the recent trial in that city, that M. Lachaud, the counsel for the prisoners, has received since the trial 10 offers of marriage for Angelina Lemoine.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.—On Tuesday last 8000 Moors attacked the Spanish, but were energetically repulsed, and compelled, by grapeshot and grenades, to retreat in great disorder. The Spanish had 51 wounded. Ten men-of-war, formerly stationed at Havannah, have arrived to reinforce the squadron at Algesiras. A great quantity of provisions has been despatched to the army in Africa. Accounts from Cadiz state that the plan of the Spaniards is to attack Tetuan on two sides simultaneously—by land from Ceuta, and by sea from the river of Tetuan. The bad state of the sea and the defensive measures adopted by the Moors will render the attempt very difficult. It has been ascertained that Tetuan is defended by earthworks and redans, as Sebastopol was, constructed with a degree of skill not to have been expected from the Moors. In consequence of the late victories the Queen has raised General O'Donnell to the rank of Marshal. The Gibraltar Chronicle of the 10th inst. publishes a despatch from the Moorish Minister for Foreign Affairs, which has been transmitted for publication to various English and foreign journals, in order to show that Spain had no just grounds for the present war. The Madrid papers have been discussing a demand made by the English Government for the payment of a long-standing debt of 440,000*l.* due by Spain for "material of war" supplied by England during the civil war against Don Carlos. It appears that the Spanish Government, "willing to give another proof of its good faith in the matter of legitimate claims," named a commission to examine the present one, and having found it quite right, intends to pay the debt.

PORTUGAL. — Accounts have been received from Lisbon of the discovery of a crime as mysterious and revolting as the Waterloo Bridge tragedy. In one of the environs of Lisbon, near the Palace of Ajuda, a box was discovered in a field, which, being opened by the police, was found to contain a young female corpse, doubled up so that the knees were pressed against the chin. Death appeared to have been caused by a wound in the throat, and the texture of the nightclothes in which she was dressed, and the general appearance of the body, showed she had belonged to the better class of society. This affair created the greatest excitement, as the police had failed to obtain a clue to the assassin.

FRANKFORT.—In the sitting of the Federal Diet on Saturday the proposals of the Würzburg Conference were brought forward. They are as follows:—1. The publication of the proceedings of the Federal Diet. 2. A common civil and criminal legislation. 3. A common law of domicile. 4. A revision of the Federal military constitution, by increasing the Federal forces organically and not numerically; and, 5. The fortification of the coasts of the North and Baltic Seas. The Christmas vacation of the Federal Diet has been declared, and will continue till the 5th of January.

AUSTRIA.—In the last Cabinet Council presided over by the Emperor it was resolved that in the next budget a reduction of 38,000,000fl. shall be made in the expenses of the War Department. It is stated that Austria is about to proceed to a complete disarmament. The report of an intended abdication of the Emperor is totally unfounded. The statement that the Archduke Maximilian would be absent from Austria two years is likewise incorrect. The journey of his Imperial Highness to the Brazils will only occupy six months.

SWITZERLAND.—In reply to a memorandum addressed by Switzerland to the Powers composing the Congress, the majority have expressed themselves favourable to the admission of Plenipotentiaries of Switzerland at the time when the Congress deliberates on the neutrality of the province of Savoy.

HUNGARY.—Accounts from Pesth state the political agitation in Hungary is augmenting daily. The Government of Vienna has given up all idea of reconciliation, and is employing military law and political persecution against all who dare to speak of "nationality." In accordance with this policy the Emperor has issued a decree, by which the German is substituted for the Hungarian language in the University of Pesth.

PRUSSIA.—The state of the King of Prussia, which has been getting more and more alarming since the 12th, now inspires so much uneasiness that even the official papers do not attempt to disguise the fact. The two gentlemen attached to the Court who were commissioned to find a suitable residence for their Majesties in England have been recalled. They had fixed upon a country house near Torquay.

BADEN.—There is a great agitation in Baden against the Concordat, although two-thirds of the inhabitants of the Grand Duchy are Roman Catholics. It daily becomes more evident that the wholesale importation of Jesuits into Germany has given great offence to its enlightened inhabitants, and it is now thought that the Concordat will not obtain the constitutional approbation of the Chambers.

HANSE TOWNS.—The merchants of Bremen and Stettin having recently resolved to take measures for inducing the great Powers to guarantee the protection of private property at sea in time of war, the shipowners and merchants of Hamburg have gone a step further by asking that the protection should extend to the vessels and cargoes belonging to the subjects of the belligerent Powers. The navigation between Stettin and Swinemunde was suspended on the 14th by the ice.

DENMARK.—The magnificent château of Frederiksburg, the residence of King Frederick VII., was entirely destroyed by fire on Saturday night. An official despatch says that the King was in the palace when the fire broke out. No lives were lost. The proposal of a Scandinavian expedition to China and Japan has been agreed to. Sweden is to send a screw line-of-battle ship, and Denmark and Norway are each to send steam-frigates, but they will not take their departure before October, 1860.

ITALY.—M. Buoncompagni arrived at Florence from Turin on Wednesday. The Tuscan Government issued a manifesto to the Tuscans of the 16th, announcing that four days after "the Governor-General of the League of the Independent States of Italy, appointed by the august Prince of Savoy," would arrive at Florence, in order to give them additional strength. The document concludes with recommending the Tuscans to persevere, until their union with Sardinia be acknowledged. "Let us salute," it says, "him who possesses the confidence of the King, of Prince Eugene, and ourselves. With this concord and confidence, let us progress with courage towards the goal which is reserved for constant and united people." The designation of Count Cavour as first Plenipotentiary of Sardinia at the Congress is definitive, and will be notified to the different Powers after the communications of the other Plenipotentiaries have been published. The frigate Eurydice is about to sail for China, to protect the interests of the Italian subjects residing there. The Tuscan Government has issued a decree enacting that the mortal remains of the Marquis de Lajatico, who died recently in London, shall be transferred to Florence in state, and that a monument to his memory shall be erected in the church of Santa Croce, already celebrated for the number of its monuments of great men. Letters from Rome state that Cardinal Antonelli will embark on the 28th inst. on board a Pontifical corvette for France. Monsignore Bernardi will be intrusted ad interim with the Ministerial functions of the Cardinal. In order to cover the deficit in the Papal Exchequer the Minister of Finance has sold 2,000,000*l.* of Roman Consolidated Funds without having recourse to a loan. Cardinal Wiseman has arrived in Rome, where he has been cordially received by the members of the Sacred College, and has had an interview with the Pope. The Cardinal Vicar of Rome has issued an edict, forbidding ladies to go to church in crinoline, and directing the confessors to forbid them to present themselves at the altar for the sacrament unless they are dressed in a simple manner. Complaints are made of the small number of foreigners at present in Rome. The police-books have only 4000 passports inscribed, while last year at the same period the number was 10,000. Gen. Fanti has, by an order of the day, dated Modena, 12th, fixed the head-quarters of the army of Central Italy at Bologna. The territory is to be divided into two military divisions, viz., one comprising Parma and Modena, and the other the Romagna. General Mezzacappo is to command the first, and General Roselli the second. Letters from Naples state that during the night between the 12th and 13th inst. numerous arrests, including several eminent persons, were made. The persons arrested are accused of having clandestinely printed journals, and of having supported a subscription in behalf of General Garibaldi, several documents concerning which have been seized. The police were searching for the distributors of the photographic portraits of Agesilas Milano. The Sardinian Consul had been arrested by mistake, but was immediately set at liberty.

RED SEA.—The Imperador, with 926 knots of the Indian cable on board, arrived at Aden, December 8, all well; passage 67½ days.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—The Captain Cook, from Kurrachee, with the East India Company's disbanded troops, grounded on November 12th, as she was beating into Table Bay. After landing the troops and throwing cargo overboard, with the assistance of the Imperador, she floated again next morning. When the Imperador left the troops were re-embarking, and the ship was reported as making no water.

THE CAUCASUS.—A despatch from St. Petersburg announces the termination of the war in the Caucasus. Mohamed Amine, the principal chief of the mountaineers of the right wing of the Circassians, has submitted, the consequence of which is the submission of the whole people of that country. The Czar has raised General Bariatinski to the rank of Marshal

TURKEY.—Ahmed Wefik Effendi has been appointed Ambassador to the Court of Paris.

THE PRINCIPALITIES.—Despatches from Jassy dated Dec. 18 state that the National Assembly, after having received a message from Prince Couza, has been dissolved.

INDIA.—The Bombay mail of the 26th ult. reached London yesterday morning. The following are the details:—

Calcutta.—A very important change is about to take place in the constitution of the executive council, which is to be remodelled after the fashion of her Majesty's cabinet, the members of council becoming secretaries of state. It is said that the new Indian cabinet will stand as follows:—President and Secretary for Political Affairs, Lord Canning; Home Secretary, Sir Bartle Frere; Secretary at War, Sir James Outram; Minister of Finance, Right Hon. James Wilson.

Futteghur.—The Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief left Cawnpore on the morning of the 5th and arrived at Futteghur on the 12th. They encamped at the Luckpeere Bagh and immediately held a station levee. The Durbar was held next day, and was attended by a large number of native chiefs. Lord Canning's camp is expected to be at Delhi about Christmas.

CHINA.—Accounts from Hong Kong state that political affairs were quiet. His Excellency Mr. Bruce remained at Shanghai, and Admiral Hope was at Hong Kong. Advices from the north state that the Chinese were taking energetic measures with the view of defence, and that Sankolinsin, the Tartar Chief, was at the head of affairs. Contributions were sought for by Government from the trading communities, which had responded but feebly to this call on their patriotism.

UNITED STATES.—Congress was opened on the 5th, but the Senate had not elected their Speaker, and the President's Message had not been delivered on the 13th. Both Houses jumped at once into the middle of the slavery question. In the Senate the Virginia senators moved for an inquiry into the Brown invasion at Harper's Ferry, and the seizure of the national arsenal there. The Republicans met this by an amendment asking also an inquiry into the attack by the "border ruffians" three years since upon the arsenal at Liberty, in Missouri, to furnish them with arms against the Free State party in Kansas. The Southern Democratic Senators took the ground that it was the duty of the Federal Government to protect the States, and if Congress were not disposed to afford that protection the south would take care of itself. The Republicans replied, disclaiming all sympathy with Brown's invasion, and courting the proposed investigation, if the two investigations can be conducted together. In the other House, after a single ballot for Speaker, in which the votes of all parties were much scattered, the Southern representatives took the same course as in the Senate, and the debate in both Houses was bitter and personal. Captain John Brown, as already announced, was executed at Charlestown on the 2d. The accounts say that he went to the gallows with the courage of a martyr and died like a Christian. A large number of military were in attendance, but no attempt at rescue was made. No event for years has created so profound a sensation throughout the country. Religious services and solemn meetings were held in many of the cities in the States during the time of the execution. At Boston there was a mass meeting at the Temple, which was so densely packed that hundreds were unable to gain admittance; and in the Massachusetts Legislative several attempts were made to adjourn the House during the execution out of respect for his principles, but they were negatived on division.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.—The following is the proposition submitted by General Scott to Governor Douglas for the joint occupation of the island of San Juan:—"Without prejudice to the claim of either nation to the sovereignty of the entire island of San Juan, now in dispute, it is proposed that each shall occupy a separate portion of the same by a detachment of infantry, riflemen or marines, not exceeding 100 men, with their appropriate arms, only for the equal protection of their respective countrymen on the said island in their persons and property, and to repel any descent on the part of hostile Indians." General Scott added in his note that any addition or modification suggested by Governor Douglas would meet with respectful consideration. Lieut.-Colonel Lay returned with the following reply:—"Memorandum. — His Excellency Governor Douglas authorises me to say, having yet no time to consider the proposition offered by Lieut.-General Scott, or to consult with his official advisers here, he is at a glance satisfied that no obstacle exists to a completely amicable and satisfactory adjustment continuing throughout the period of diplomatic discussion respecting the title of the Island of San Juan, either upon the plan suggested by General Scott, or some other that may be mutually agreed to after advisement." A copy of this memorandum was retained by Governor Douglas, after being read and approved by him, and signed by Lieut.-Colonel Lay.

MEXICO.—Captain Grenfell, of her Majesty's ship Amethyst, has seized two Mexican cotton-laden ships, and has threatened to take more if Mr. Allsop, the British Consul at Tepic, is not immediately released by Generals Coronado and Rojas. Senor Don Placido Vega, the Governor of Sinaloa, professes to have no means of inducing those Generals to comply with Captain Grenfell's demand.

Public Addresses.

LORD PALMERSTON presided on Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Romsey Labourers' Encouragement Association and delivered six speeches, of which the following is an abstract. His lordship first addressed the labourers as follows:—

"My friends,—Perhaps you will allow me to address a few words to you to express the great pleasure which I have derived from having to hand over to so many deserving men and women in this neighbourhood these prizes—prizes which are not intended, I need hardly say, as rewards, but as tokens and memorials of your good conduct in your several vocations. I need hardly say that they are not rewards, because no man is so foolish as to think that these tokens of good conduct which are given are intended to be substantial rewards for the conduct on account of which they are bestowed. That is not the principle upon which decorations and memorials and tokens are given to mankind for their meritorious conduct. The soldier who hazards his life upon the field of battle, and who has attracted the attention of his superiors and of his comrades by distinguished and heroic bravery, is rewarded by a cross, very insignificant in intrinsic value, but which he wears on his breast as a token and a record of that good conduct which has obtained for him that which is a real reward—namely, the esteem and respect of all around him. In the same way in other classes of life, men who perform distinguished services to the State are rewarded by a little riband which they wear in their button-hole or over their shoulder, but nobody imagines that half a yard or two yards of red or blue riband are in themselves intrinsic rewards. They are tokens and records of that good conduct in the life of those on whom they are bestowed which testify to mankind that they have deserved well of their country. Therefore, my friends, I am delighted that so many of you have received these tokens of your good conduct in your respective vocations, and I am glad to say that these rewards have been given for almost every kind of service which an agricultural labourer is capable of performing. We have had prizes for ploughmen, for thatchers, for drill-men, for team-men, for the cultivation of gardens, for keeping cottages neat, and for good service in the families where labourers have been employed. And, my friends, without saying anything to flatter you, you may have the satisfaction of reflecting that you belong to a class most deserving of the esteem and respect of your fellow-countrymen, because the labour in which you are employed is at the root and foundation of the wealth and prosperity of a country. * * * These opportunities of meeting familiarly with those whom one does not meet every day in the year are most gratifying to me, and must be to every right-minded man. The fabric of society is constructed by an infinite gradation of ranks and conditions, and those who are perhaps separated from each other, and have not often an occasion of meeting, when the opportunities do occur should meet in order that they may reciprocally understand each other. I am sure that all classes of Englishmen if they do understand each other will value and love each other. I am not led away by any national vanity in that opinion, but I have that conviction with regard to the character of my country that I am sure the oftener the different classes of society meet together the more the whole fabric of society will be cemented, the stronger the nation will be, and the more each class will look to the other without jealousy, without suspicion, without enmity—with a conviction that there are no antagonistic interests, but that the interests of all are bound up in one general aggregate, which forms the interests of the country at large." * * * In proposing the "Army and Navy" his lordship said:—"We have already drunk 'The Ministers of Peace,' but peace cannot be reckoned upon for ever, and it is possible that it may be succeeded in all countries by war. Therefore I now propose to you the health and success of those establishments which defend us in war and enable us to regain the blessings of peace. I propose to you 'The Army and Navy,' and I am proud to say that I believe there never was a moment—a moment of peace at least—in which both of those services were in a condition of greater efficiency than they are at the present time. I am sure that the country is deeply convinced that the best method of preserving peace is to show that you are capable of defending yourselves in the event of being attacked. I trust that there is no likelihood in the present state of affairs that our army and navy will have to perform with the same distinction those duties which their predecessors have already performed. The spirit which the country has recently shown by the immense extent of volunteer organisation has produced a great effect not only in this country, but all over the world. It has tended to inspire that respect which all nations feel for a country which, without any aggressive intentions, shows that it is determined to hold its own, and to defend itself against all comers. Again I say that I trust there is nothing in the present state of things that betokens the likelihood of any occasion for that martial spirit to be displayed otherwise than by showing that we are ready to defend our shores; but it must be a great satisfaction to all of us to know that the army and navy are in a state of complete efficiency according to the numbers to which in a time of peace they can be carried, and that there are means in the country by which—if unfortunately unforeseen events should render it necessary that we should increase our armaments—those armaments might be rapidly increased to whatever the exigencies of the moment might require." * * * On the subject of employers his lordship said, "We are met here as a body of employers, and I hold that these associations affect the interest of the employer quite as much as they do the interests of those who are employed; for it is manifest that no agriculturist can pursue his avocation with advantage if he does not inspire in the minds of those he employs zeal in their calling, energy, industry, and especially good conduct. Agriculture has undergone a great change in the last few years. It used to be a practice—it is now raised to the condition of a science, and no man can be a successful agriculturist who does not raise his mind beyond the mere traditions of those who went before him, and who does not study the principles on which success in agriculture must mainly depend. A farmer ought to know now something, and perhaps not a little, of chemistry. He ought to know what are the ingredients of the soil which different crops take out for their nourishment. He ought to know how, by various manures and by various processes, to restore to the soil those ingredients essential to the growth of plants which former crops have taken out. He ought also to a certain extent to know the fundamental principles of political economy, and to be aware that he does not prosper by grinding down those who labour on his farm—that it is no real saving to give inadequate wages to those who work for him; that he gains nothing by avoiding to employ labour in the winter months; and that, in fact, there is no more advantageous and profitable investment in the cultivation of the land than labour. It is quite true that the ingenuity of mechanics has of late years introduced a great number of machines, which to some extent are substitutes for the work of the hands; but a farmer ought to know that the use of these machines is not to supersede the employment of labour, but to enable him to divert labour from those processes to which machinery is applicable, and to employ it profitably in other occupations. A great improvement has been made in the intelligence of the labouring classes. Some of us are old enough to remember the time when threshing machines were held in hatred by the labourer, when all sorts of improvements in machinery were thought to be means for taking bread out of the mouths of the labourers. But they are now wise enough to know that those processes and machines, instead of superseding labour, are simply an addition to labour. We all know the story of the farmer who, on his deathbed, told his two sons that he had a great treasure buried in a certain field, and that if they only dug over it they would find it. The sons did dig for it. Money they found not, but money's worth they did find, and the increased produce of the field by the application of manual labour repaid them amply for their exertions. That story is applicable to all farming occupations. I am sure that I am now addressing an enlightened audience, most of you practical farmers, who must have discovered that it is no economy to spare labour on your farms—that the more labour you are able to employ the more advantage you will derive from the crops; but the labour cannot be useful unless the labourer is well looked to, well housed, well fed, and well cared for. When the employers of labour bestow proper attention upon their labourers they engender a feeling of reciprocal regard; and it is in human nature that a man will work better for an employer he loves, and who treats him well, than for a man who is niggardly and churlish, who just pays him as much as will keep body and soul together, and neglects him in other respects. * * * I would now briefly advert to one topic which has been alluded to, the lodging of the labouring classes. Now, it is quite true that Mr. Dutton and myself have built some very good double cottages for the labourers on our own respective properties, but I have heard it said by many that it is all very well for us to do that, but that these buildings are altogether too expensive, that they do not pay, and that other people could not afford to erect them. Now, in the first place, I hold that observation to be founded on a fundamental error. When I build a cottage for a labourer on a farm I do not expect it to pay in money. When I build a good farm-house for a tenant I do not expect rent for that house separate from the farm. Well, the cottage for the labourer ought to be looked upon as a part of the appurtenances of a farm just as much as the buildings for cattle, or any of those other erections essential to the cultivation of the land. How can the land be well cultivated if the labourers are not well housed? if they are obliged to trudge three or four miles in order to get at their work, and the same distance home again? It is manifest that they must be not only exhausted physically, but that their time must be wasted in walking to and from their work, and that the farmer does not get from them his money's worth for the wages he pays. Therefore I consider that in providing a farm with accommodation for the number of labourers to be employed on it you are giving facilities to the tenant to cultivate his farm, and increasing the value of the farm which you let to a good tenant. If you get a shilling a week from the labourer it is more to impress upon his mind that he is earning the accommodation you give him rather than from any idea that it is to repay the expense of the erection. It is not like building houses in a town, which are built to be let at a profitable investment, but it is an addition to the value of the farm; and depend upon it a good tenant will give you more rent for a farm which he can cultivate to advantage. Then as to the expense of these cottages. Now, the cottages which Mr. Dutton and myself have built contain really no more accommodation than a decent family ought to have. They have simply one room to live in, a back kitchen, and what is of the utmost importance, three sleeping places. No cottage ought to be without three sleeping places—one for the man and his wife, another for the girls, and another for the boys. It is not necessary to pull down old cottages to build new ones. A great deal can be done at a moderate expense in improving old ones. All you require is to put a little porch in front of the door, which costs little; to give them a boarded floor instead of bricks; to make the walls air-tight and the roof water-tight; to give three sleeping-rooms, and to put up a sort of shealing at the back, with a little place below for a wood house. It is quite a mistake to suppose, then, that nothing real and essential can be done in improving the dwellings of the labouring classes short of pulling down the old ones and erecting new ones. The effect of improving those dwellings is almost marvellous. In the first place, you know that the comfort of a man's house depends upon the tidiness of his wife and the mode in which she tries to make him comfortable; but there is a temper of the human mind which is denominated recklessness. When a thing seems impossible it is given up in despair. When a cottage is in such a ramshackle state that it is impossible for the wife to keep it clean she becomes a slattern, everything goes to ruin, the man is disgusted, and flies to the beershop. If, on the contrary, the wife feels that she can by a little exertion make the cottage decent and respectable she does so, and then the man enjoys the comfort and happiness of his home, stays away from the beershop, and the sum of money he would spend in liquor goes to the benefit of his wife and children. I had an example of that in a double cottage of my own. It was in a dreadful state; the walls were not air-tight, it had a brick floor, a bad roof, and everything uncomfortable. The people who occupied it were slovens and slatterns, and quarrelsome ill-neighbours. At a small expense it was made tidy; boarded floors were put down; a little porch erected, with a wood-house and other conveniences, and from that moment these people altered entirely their character, altered entirely their conduct, became well-conditioned people and good neighbours, which they had never been before. Therefore I entreat everybody not to run away with the notion that nothing can be done to improve the dwellings of the poor, short of building cottages, which they may think too expensive for their means. Depend upon it that a very great deal can be done, at a moderate expense, towards making old cottages decent and habitable." In proposing the toast of "The Press," his lordship said:—"I rise to do homage to that which may properly be said to be one of the wonders of modern civilisation. I mean 'The Press.' If any man compares now a newspaper published in the last century with one of those wonderful sheets we read every day, the contrast is the most striking that the mind of man can imagine. The quantity of information, the talent of dissertation, the amount of news of every kind which we now find in almost every newspaper we meet with is really one of the most striking proofs of the progress which the human intellect has made in the days in which we live. It may really be put in competition with the steam engine and the electric telegraph, but there is one part of the functions of the press which, beyond all others, has improved of late years. I have heard that towards the end of the last century there was a man named Woodfall who used to publish debates; and how did he do it? It is said that he used to go to the gallery of the House of Commons, listen attentively with his face in his hands to what passed, go home, drink two pots of porter, go to bed, get up next morning, and from his dreams and his recollections make out what he called a report of a debate. Now-a-days, so marvellous is the ability and so wonderful the rapidity with which reporters take down what men say that if speakers are not very careful the reporters take down what they had much better not have said. I remember a very worthy M.P., an Irish M.P., Mr. Richard Keene, who once complained that the reporters in the gallery had not done full justice to a speech he had made the night before. The reply he received had, perhaps, more of sharpness than civility in it, for it was—'Mr. Keene, we made the best speech we could for you, but, if you are not satisfied with our endeavours, the next time we will report what you do say, and, whatever you may think of it, we suspect your friends will hardly relish the infliction.' Now, it is quite marvellous to see the accuracy with which debates in the House of Commons are reported. When the speeches are such as are calculated to attract attention they are reported word for word as they are uttered, and how it is possible for the human hand to follow with such rapidity and such exactness I am at a loss to conceive. I once, as many others have done, began to learn shorthand, but I confess that I found out two difficulties, which turned out to be quite insurmountable. The one was to write it, and the next and greatest to read it when it was written. I beg now to propose that institution to which the progress of civilisation and all the interests of the country are so deeply indebted, 'The Press.'"

SIR JOHN PAKINGTON, at a meeting at Droitwich on Monday for the establishment of a rifle corps, made the following remarks on the national defences:—

"He heartily desired to promote the movement now going on throughout the country for the establishment of volunteer corps. They would remember that this movement was sanctioned and encouraged by the late Government, and it was also sanctioned and encouraged by the present, and there was, therefore, no possibility of anything like party feeling marring it. The patriotic movement now being made throughout the country was most encouraging, and reminded him of the great volunteer movement of 1803. Happily, he could add that the circumstances which marked the movement in 1803 were different from the circumstances which distinguished that of 1859. In the year 1803 they were in the very midst of that great European war which only ended finally in 1815; and the first Napoleon—the great Napoleon—had then assembled an army on the opposite coast of France, with the avowed intention of invading this country; and the general expectation was that the time was at hand when we should have to fight a French army on English ground, and to defend our hearths and homes from foreign invaders. With regard to the probabilities of a French invasion, if there was anything like a panic in England on the subject, which he must confess he could hardly believe—if there was a feeling of alarm in the minds of the people of England generally—he would say that he for one did not share in it. In the first place, they must recollect that of all the modes of warfare, one of the most difficult, one of the most arduous, one of the most dangerous, was the attempt to invade the territory of a great Power. They would remember in the history of the great Napoleon, that it was perfectly true that he subdued the German Powers by his vast and highly disciplined army, and that he overran Italy, and at that period of his history he acquired a degree of power which he might truly say no other European monarch ever possessed. But when he extended his attempts to Spain and Russia he signally failed, and the attempt to invade a great territorial Power recoiled upon himself, and entailed ruin upon him. Now, to invade England troops would have to be conveyed across the Channel, and the naval force of Great Britain must be defeated before the country could be invaded by a foe. The mayor in his opening remarks had speculated on the possibility of our navy being defeated or evaded. He was aware that the introduction of steam into the navy had made a great change, and perhaps had increased the possibility of invasion, but he for one did not contemplate, unless an overwhelming force was brought to bear upon this country, the possibility of our sustaining a defeat in the Channel. He confessed, therefore, that he was not one who contemplated invasion as a probability. But although we were still on friendly terms with France, and although he for one did not feel distrust in the personal intentions of the Emperor towards this country, nevertheless he thought that the state of public affairs on the Continent was such as to make it desirable to foster this movement. There could be no doubt that we had fallen into a state of false security during the long peace we had enjoyd. During the 40 years of peace Englishmen seemed to have adopted the idea that the days of war had passed away, and that the days of peace were to last for ever. He wished he could contemplate such a state of things, but it was not to be so, and although that long peace had had no effect in diminishing the national spirit it had had the effect of reducing the national defences. Successive Administrations had been vieing with each other in order to show which should call upon Parliament to vote the lowest estimates for the national service, and the lowest amount of national taxation, and no doubt it was due to any Government to carry on the affairs of the country with as little pressure as possible; but one result of this feeling had been that the national defences had been reduced to a point which was not consistent with the national safety, the national dignity, or the maintenance of that power in Europe and that influence among the nations of the world which England was bound to support. There was no country in the world, no great empire in the world, in which it was so essential that the means of national defence, and the means of carrying on war, should be greater than in ours on account of the extent of our empire, it being spread over the four quarters of the world, and on account of the geographical smallness of the great centre of the empire—England. In addition to all these considerations, it was impossible to deny that the present state of Europe warned us that we could not with prudence allow the state of things which had prevailed to continue. It was true we were at peace with France, and we had no reason to distrust the good intentions of the French Government. On the other hand, startling events had taken place this year in France, and immense naval and warlike preparations were making in that country; and although our alliance with France might be close, and we had fought side by side with the French, both in the Crimea and in China, and although he earnestly hoped that that good feeling might long continue, still there had been occasions within the last two or three years in which our friendly relations with France had been in danger, and in the present extremely complicated state of European affairs it was impossible to say how soon again our alliance might be endangered, and therefore they were bound to be prepared for all contingencies. He wanted Europe to see that we were prepared for all contingencies—that our navy was strong, and our people loyal and united; and on that ground he was very anxious for the success of this movement. While such a feeling was stirred up throughout the country, and while every town in Worcester was joining in it, he had full hope that Droitwich would not be behind in manifestation of national spirit."

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

DECLARATION OF THE CATHOLIC LAITY IN FAVOUR OF THE POPE.—The Tablet publishes the following declaration, as having been agreed to by the Roman Catholic laity of England and Scotland in favour of maintaining the temporal power of the Pope:—

"We, the undersigned, Roman Catholics of England and Scotland, mindful of that inviolable fidelity to the Holy Father and the Apostolic See which we have inherited from our forefathers, together with a devoted loyalty to our gracious Sovereign and a sincere attachment to the constitution of our country—moved, also, by the wrongs already inflicted on the Holy Father, and the dangers which still threaten him—seeing that a portion of his subjects have risen in unjustifiable rebellion against his authority, and at the instigation and by the assistance of foreigners and invaders have deprived him of certain provinces which are still kept from him—seeing that certain European Governments, by the employment of money and troops, as well as by open encouragement and secret intrigue, have assisted this usurpation; while other Governments, through fear or hostility, have witnessed the spoliation of the Holy Father without protest or opposition—seeing that, in our own country, the person, the character, and the acts of the Holy Father have been assailed and calumniated, while his rights have been denied and his Government denounced—seeing that these denunciations and hostile manifestations have been so general on the part of the Protestant press, of many leading statesmen, and of other public characters in our country, that our silence might expose us to the imputation of complicity with such proceedings, or of indifference to the Holy Father, or of timidity in the exercise of our right to make known to the Government, the Legislature, and the public, our views and feeling on matters of public concernment—have resolved, in discharge of our duty to the Holy Father, to our country, and to ourselves, on publishing the following declaration:—Firstly, we declare, that while we have no doubt of the permanency, so long as time shall endure, of the Head of the Catholic Church, as the successor of St. Peter and the Vicar of Christ upon earth, it is not to be endured by Catholics that the Sovereign Pontiff should be the subject of any temporal potentate; and further, that the preservation of the temporal sovereignty of the Holy Father is of the highest importance to secure the independent exercise of his supreme spiritual power. Secondly, we declare that the forcible abstraction from the Holy Father of a portion of his dominions is, in principle, an assumption of the right to deprive him of the whole, and would afford a pretext and a precedent for the entire abolition of his temporal power. Thirdly, we declare that, by recognising the discontent and disaffection of a portion of the population of the Romagna, encouraged as it has been by foreign influence and aid, as a sufficient justification for depriving the Holy Father of those provinces, a principle is sanctioned subversive of all order, authority, and government, and destructive of peace, religion, and society. Fourthly, we declare that among the cases in which the tyranny, oppression, or misgovernment of any sovereign have ever at any time been deemed to justify his subjects in renouncing their allegiance, nothing can be found on which to base a justification of the present rebellion in the Romagna. Fifthly, we declare that, on the evidence of facts and on the testimony of all competent and impartial witnesses, we believe that among living sovereigns there is none who has deserved more than the Holy Father the character of a benignant, enlightened, and paternal ruler, and that his benevolent endeavours and intentions to promote improvements in the administration of his States have been, and are, impeded by the conduct of those very persons, both within and without his dominions, who attempt to justify the present rebellion by the allegation of misgovernment. Finally, therefore, and for the above reasons,—we protest against this wrong done to the Holy Father by depriving him of his territories, we protest against the wrong done to all Catholics by the attempt to compromise the independent exercise of the Pope's spiritual power, of which his temporal sovereignty is the safeguard; we protest against the rebellion of a portion of his subjects in the Romagna as unjustifiable, and against the aid given to them by foreign Governments, and by travelers from neighbouring States as well as by European statesmen and rulers, as injurious to religion and dangerous to the peace of the world and to the security of all Governments. Further, we protest against every infraction of the Holy Father's rights as an independent sovereign; we protest against any assumption on the part of any other State or ruler, or of any Congress of States, to dispose of the Holy Father's territories, or to impose upon him any conditions against his own will, being persuaded that both justice and expediency dictate that any changes in the laws or administration of his dominions should be left to his own unfettered judgment and unquestioned benevolence. Especially, we protest against the power or influence of our country being used—whether in a Congress of European States or separately—in favour of the Holy Father's rebel subjects, or to despoil him of his dominions, or to interfere with his independent sovereignty, by imposing any conditions upon him. And we hereby make known our determination to resist and resent, in the spirit of the constitution, any such course on the part of the responsible advisers of the Crown, to whatever party in the State they may belong.—18, Clifford Street, London, Dec. 14, 1859."

CRYSTAL PALACE.—At the half-yearly meeting of the Crystal Palace Company on Tuesday the report of the directors was adopted, and a dividend of 2s. per share declared. A long discussion took place on the question of "specialties," some contending that they operated injuriously on the interests of the company by closing the palace on shilling days during the preparations for these festivals, while others contended that they were necessary as inducing people to take season tickets. Some of the shareholders asserted that the sum received from the Handel Festival was more than counterbalanced by the falling off in the revenue from other sources, that the flower shows, opera concerts, news-room, lectures, and picture galleries, were kept up at a loss, and that the sum of 120*l.* charged for gardeners' breakfasts at the flower shows was excessive. The chairman admitted that the sum of 34,000*l.* received from the Handel Festival had infringed in some degree upon the other sources of revenue, and was not to be considered as absolute gain to the company. The news-room was, no doubt, a heavy item, and did not pay, but it afforded a great amount of information to the visitors, and he did not think it would be wise to discontinue it. The picture charges were also heavy; but they tended to improve and render the gallery attractive. The most popular of the specialties were flower shows, and they also did not pay. The expenses of the gardens had been reduced from 12,000*l.* in 1857, to a little more than 6000*l.* in the present year. The gardeners' breakfast was an item of expense which was absolutely necessary. It was a custom which had grown up in connection with flower shows, and in point of fact it was "no breakfast, no show." The cost of the breakfast was 2s. a head. In his opinion it would be a bold policy to abolish the specialties, and might be a successful one, but he was not prepared to recommend its adoption. The motion for the payment of a dividend of 2s. per share having been carried, the meeting was made special, and resolutions were carried empowering the directors to consolidate the shares, both ordinary and preference, into stock, and extending the time for closing the transfer book from seven to 14 days. A resolution proposed by Captain Young, and seconded by Mr. Astbury, to the effect "That the Crystal Palace be closed on Sunday, shareholders being admitted as at present into the grounds without charge," was negatived by a large majority.

THE ROYAL CHARTER.—A further amount of treasure was recovered from the wreck of the Royal Charter on Saturday, comprising nine bars or ingots and sovereigns, valued at about 5000*l.* On Sunday one bar or ingot, 2¼ lb. weight, 410½ sovereigns, several portions of an ingot, seven rupees, and one shilling were recovered. Another small parcel of gold was recovered on Monday, including two bags of gold, 15 sovereigns, and nine rupees. Four bars, and several sovereigns and rupees were recovered on Tuesday, and 35 sovereigns and 17 rupees were brought up on Wednesday. About 180,000*l.* of the total saved has been fully identified and disposed of for the continent. The remainder will stand over until the adjustment of the various claims for salvage.

THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY.—There is now no doubt that Monday next, the 26th inst., will be almost universally kept as a holiday, both in London and the provinces, in consequence of Christmas Day falling upon a Sunday. In accordance with a recommendation from the Lord Mayor, all the principal houses in the Manchester trade, the West-end silk mercers, and other leading tradesmen, have announced their intention to observe the holiday: and the principal merchants, factors, and manufacturers of Manchester, Birmingham, and other important towns have signified their intention to comply with the general desire that all business shall be suspended on Monday. The Banks will be open as usual, but the clearing-house will be closed at 2 o'clock, at which hour Lloyd's will also be closed by order of the committee.

ILLUMINATED INDICATORS IN THE CITY.—The City Sewers Commission having recently given permission for the erection of one of these "indicators" in Royal Exchange Buildings, the inhabitants of St. Michael's, Cornhill, have by notices and threats of Chancery proceedings successfully prevented the erection and compelled the parties concerned to restore the pavement to its old state. At a meeting of the Commissioners of Sewers on Tuesday the churchwardens and a deputation from the parishioners presented a memorial signed by 125 bankers, merchants, common councilmen, and others, stating that they considered such a structure detrimental to the property in the vicinity, offensive, unnecessary, and tending to cause obstructions, and therefore respectfully and earnestly remonstrated against any authority being given for its erection. The memorial was referred to a committee, and Deputy Harrison gave notice that at the next meeting of the commission he will move the revocation of the permission previously given for the erection of the indicator.

DESTRUCTION OF ST. MATTHEW'S CHURCH, BETHNAL GREEN.—On Sunday night at 11.15 P.M., a fire broke out in the roof of St. Matthew's, the ancient parish church of Bethnal Green, which by 4 A.M. on Monday morning had destroyed the fine peal of eight bells, organ, pulpit, pews, and all the church furniture, leaving nothing but the tower, denuded of its antique clock, and the four outside walls, entirely gutted, the whole of the interior being reduced to charcoal and ashes. The parish registers, going back nearly 200 years, were rescued from the flames and safely deposited in the rectory house; and the communion plate, including the ancient piece of silver, representing the "Blind Beggar of Bethnal Green and his Dog," which is upwards of 200 years old, and is only exhibited on particular occasions, was saved by being kept at the rector's house. The church was insured in the Imperial for 5000*l*.

FATAL FIRE IN WESTMINSTER.—Yesterday morning, about half-past 2 o'clock, a fire, attended with a serious loss of property and life, occurred in the extensive premises of Mr. Adam Clark Hook, in Little George Street, Westminster, about midway between Story's Gate and the Broad Sanctuary. The housekeeper and three other persons were burnt to death, and two women and a child who jumped from the windows into the street were so seriously injured that it was necessary to take them to the hospital.

THE WEATHER AND THE PARKS.—The severe frost of Friday ushered in the season for skating and sliding upon the waters of the Royal parks, but as the ice had not perfectly consolidated many accidents occurred, one of which was fatal to Mr. Decks, a clerk in the house of Messrs. Caldecott & Co., Cheapside. On Sunday and Monday the parks were crowded with skaters, and several accidents occurred involving in some instances fractured limbs, but not attended by any fatal consequences. The skating, which was continued in the evening by torchlight with great spirit, was arrested by the thaw of Tuesday. Several persons were taken to the hospitals during the severe frost with serious injuries caused by falling on the pavements of the streets, which have been so glassy as to be extremely dangerous.

PAINFUL ELOPEMENT.—The Times states that the wife of Mr. J. H. Gurney, M.P. for King's Lynn, has eloped with one of the family domestics. The lady has a fortune in her own right of 500,000*l*. Proceedings have been commenced with a view to a divorce.

FRAUDULENT LABELS.—A public meeting of merchants and manufacturers was held a few days since, at the Guildhall Coffee House. Mr. Dillon, of the house of Morrison, Dillon & Co. in the Chair, at which it was resolved to form an Association for Suppressing the Practice of False Marking or Labelling Goods for Sale; and an influential committee, consisting of members of the highest firms in the country, was appointed to carry the resolution into effect.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the number of deaths registered in London in the week that ended Saturday, Dec. 17, was 1289, being the same as that of the preceding week. In the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1849-58 the average number was 1218; which, if raised in proportion to the increase of population, will become 1339. The return of last week was therefore 50 below the average. During the week the births of 952 boys and 879 girls, in all 1831 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1849-58 the average number was 1508.

BANGOR.—On the occasion of her Majesty's visit to Penrhyn Castle, the members of the Penrhyn Choral Society sang before the Royal family. The Queen was so pleased with the efforts of the choristers that she has presented a silver cup to the society through the Hon. Mr. Pennant, of Penrhyn Castle. The cup weighs 90 ounces, and bears the following inscription:—"Presented by her Majesty the Queen to the Choral Society of the Penrhyn Slate Quarries, which sang before her Majesty on Sunday evening, 16th of October, 1859." Sir Charles Phipps, in a letter to Mr. Pennant, says:—"Her Majesty and the Prince Consort would be glad if this cup, while it was considered as a mark of the satisfaction with which they heard the very creditable performance of the numerous body who sang before them, might also be looked upon as testifying the approval with which her Majesty and his Royal Highness regard the cultivation by all under your employment, and in your neighbourhood, of so laudable and humanising a taste, and of their wish that all should unite in encouraging a mode of employing their leisure hours so likely to prove beneficial to their social and moral condition."

BRISTOL.—On Saturday morning a fire broke out on board the American ship Sea Belle, lying in the floating harbour, and was not subdued until the vessel was reduced to such a perfect wreck that it was found necessary to scuttle her. She was laden with coals, and the fire is attributed to spontaneous combustion.

FOLKESTONE.—An extensive land-slip took place a few days since in the Warren, near this town. The Warren is a tract of undercliff, extending some two miles on either side of the South-Eastern Railway, and the portion where the slip took place is to the seaward of the railway, and comprises an area of about 40 acres. From the testimony of an eyewitness, a platelayer on the railway who was passing over the ground at the time, the subsidence commenced about half-past 6 o'clock A.M., the part where he was standing going down about 3 feet, and, as far as he could see, the whole mass sinking at once. The ground continued to settle the whole of the day, and is now at an average of 15 feet below its original level. The banks along the beach have been forced nearly down to low-water mark, and the rocks are considerably elevated.

PORTSMOUTH.—A petition signed by the principal bankers, merchants, and traders of the City of London has been presented to the Government in favour of the sailors sentenced to imprisonment for the disturbance on board her Majesty's ship Princess Royal.

Ireland.

MEETING OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC MEMBERS.—The Irish Roman Catholic members who, at the suggestion of Dr. Cullen and other prelates, have organised an opposition to national education in Ireland, met on the 15th inst. in Dublin. The chair was taken by Mr. M. E. Corbally, M.P. for Meath. The other M.P.'s present were Messrs. R. M. Bellew, J. A. Blake, Dr. Brady, J. Pope Hennesy, John Lanigan, Edward M'Evoy, J. F. Maguire, Patrick O'Brien, The O'Donoghoe, and Colonel White. Mr. Bowyer, Mr. Dunne, Mr. M'Mahon, and Mr. Redmond gave authority to use their names as assenting to the proceedings. No reporters were allowed to be present, but the following resolutions were communicated to the journals at a subsequent period of the day as having been adopted by the meeting:—

"1. That, in our opinion, the pastoral address of the Catholic archbishops and bishops of Ireland, published last August, contains a fair exposition of the present wants of Ireland, as able and comprehensive as it is temperate and dignified, such as might have been expected from their lordships, thoroughly acquainted as they are with the condition of their country, and sincerely interested in its welfare; and that, without having recourse to any proceedings of a factious character, we will avail ourselves of our position and influence as members of Parliament to press upon the Government the just demands put forward in that important document. 2. That the principle of free, separate education—collegiate, intermediate, and primary—Catholic for the Catholic, Protestant for the Protestant—is in itself just, expedient, and, under all the circumstances of this country, the best suited to the constitution of Ireland, and is confirmed by the established precedent of Great Britain and the colonies. 3. That so long as Government allocates a portion of the public funds to the purpose of education, there can be no objection to such control and inspection as would assure the Government that the funds so applied had not been misappropriated—a provision in which, we have reason to know, their lordships, the Catholic archbishops and bishops, while demanding separate education, readily concur. 4. That, as regards the material prosperity and social happiness of Ireland, the measure of all measures the most required is one which would settle the land question upon a basis of justice to all parties—that is, in such a manner as would secure to the tenant full compensation for his labour and capital, without, on the other hand, interfering with the just rights of property. 5. That the Catholic soldiers and sailors have a right to the same facilities for the practice of their religion, with the same freedom from interference of every kind, for themselves and their children, as their Protestant comrades in either service enjoy; and that the duty of the Government to provide the facilities and secure that freedom is the same towards Catholic and Protestant. 6. That the administration of the poor law in Ireland, amongst a people for the most part Catholic, by a board exclusively English or Protestant, is a grievance demanding redress, by the reconstruction of the board; that the experience of every day proves the present Poor-law Commissioners do not discharge the duties with which they are entrusted in a manner to command the confidence of the community, and that their impracticability is displayed by the disputes in which they have involved themselves with boards of guardians in different parts of the country, as well as with Catholic chaplains, by reason of their ignorance or disrespect of Catholic discipline. 7. That any Government which attempts to interfere or to countenance an attack upon the temporal sovereignty of the Holy Father is unworthy the confidence of the Irish people and support of their representatives."

Colonel White voted on the education and tenant-right resolutions only. Mr. Bellew voted for the 1st, 3d, 4th, 5th, and 6th resolutions.

SYMPATHY FOR THE POPE.—A meeting in favour of the temporal power of the Pope was held on Sunday at Galway, the Roman Catholic Bishop M'Evilly in the chair, supported by the Hon. Thomas Ffrench, Mr. Pierse Joyce, J.P., Mr. Morris, the Recorder of Galway, and others. The following is an extract from the bishop's address on the subject of the Congress:—

"We are all aware that in a few days the representatives of the leading Powers of Europe are to assemble in Congress at Paris, with the view, I believe, of settling those complications in the Italian States which some of those leading Powers were chiefly instrumental in creating. A prominent place, no doubt, will be assigned to our own Government in the deliberations of this august assembly; and we are here congregated to join our Catholic brethren throughout this empire in declaring that if the British plenipotentiary be a party to enacting anything opposed to the temporal sovereignty of the Holy Father, he will, as the organ of a responsible Government, misrepresent the feelings and convictions of at least one-third of the subjects of these realms; he will prove to the world, and strengthen the conviction everywhere prevailing, that England is at the bottom of all the disturbances in the Roman States: that it is not a love for peace or order in the Italian Continent that animates her, but a blind hatred of the spiritual authority of Christ's vicar on earth. Coming nearer home, we owe to ourselves as Catholics, who prize the freedom of our religion above every other blessing, to declare that, if the accredited organ of any English Government attempt to forge fetters for our religion by enacting anything adverse to the Holy Father, such a Government will forfeit the confidence of the Catholic constituency; and we have no hesitation in declaring to our representatives—and I am sure it is a sentiment which will extend to every Catholic constituency in Ireland—that, however disposed we may be to make allowances in other respects, we cannot be parties to the [illegible] our religion, to forging fresh chains, to enthral [illegible] religious servitude, by supporting such a Government—I, of course, speak hypothetically. They will forfeit all support from us, and when the day of reckoning shall come round our rallying cry shall be, 'Remember the insulted majesty of Pius IX.; remember the Congress of Paris.'"

A meeting of sympathy with the Pope was held last week in Mallow. The Roman Catholic Bishop of Clogher, Dr. Keane, occupied the chair, and in opening the proceedings spoke as follows:—

"What a moment is chosen for the attempt to deprive the Sovereign Pontiff of his independence, of that independence which has been enjoyed by the Pope from a time when the oldest among the royal families of Europe are not yet mentioned in history? The attempt is made at the present moment when there sits in the chair of St. Peter one of the most amiable, the most charitable, and the most dignified men that ever sat upon any throne, secular or ecclesiastical. It is said that there is discontent. That may be frankly and fairly admitted, because of the imperfections of all human governments. But it may be asked in return was there no discontent among the Chartists of England? Was there no discontent among the operative masses, the upheavings of which every English Minister fears to contemplate? Was there no discontent in Canada—in the Ionian Islands—in India? Is there no discontent in Ireland? Is there an English Minister—I don't care on which side he sits, that will not denounce in strong terms the oppression practised towards this country for centuries past, although he will refuse the remedial measures we demand, and which ought long ago to have been conceded? And may it not have been fairly asked, were there not among those who, by the neglect or misrule of England, were provoked to hostility against her, many of the Protestant and Presbyterian creeds? Yet, although treason and rebellion are punished with exile or with death in India and in Ireland, treason and rebellion will be fostered and encouraged and supported in Italy by British contributions and by the applauding cheers of British statesmen. These proceedings are a scandal upon any Government. Care ought to be taken at a time when there is no recognised principle sufficiently strong to sway men's minds and hearts—care ought to be taken that that line be not too eagerly caught up."

A meeting of sympathy is to be held at Meath on the 29th inst. in which Bishop Cantwell, the Earl of Fingall, Lord Killeen, and Lord Germanstown will take part; and the Limerick papers announce that the requisition of Bishop Ryan has secured the signatures of the High Sheriff, the Mayor, the Earl of Dunraven, Lord Southwell, the Right Hon. W. Monsell, M.P., Sir Vere de Vere, Major Gavan, M.P., Mr. Aubrey de Vere, and a long list of county magistrates for a meeting in that city. There is also to be a great aggregate meeting in Dublin, and the weekly organ of Archbishop Cullen states that in connection with this meeting another movement is in progress of organisation, having for its object the despatch of an Irish Catholic representative to the Congress at Paris.

THE MURDER AT IRELAND'S EYE.—The Dublin papers state that Kirwan, who was sentenced to death some years ago for the murder of his wife on Ireland's Eye, and whose sentence was commuted to transportation for life, has obtained, through the exertions of his friends at home, a further commutation of his sentence; and on a report of his "very proper conduct" while in Bermuda, has been liberated and will be allowed to return home.

Law.

THE ASSIZES.—NORTHERN CIRCUIT: YORK.—The Leeds Murder.—Charles Normington, 18, was indicted for the wilful murder of Richard Broughton, between Roundhay and Leeds, on the 6th of August last. This case will be familiar to our readers from the frequent mention of it in our Provincial News at the time of the occurrence. It will be remembered that Mr. Broughton while walking in open day on a footpath leading from Roundhay to Leeds, was knocked down, stunned, and robbed of his watch and riband, and received such severe injuries that he died of their effects next day. The prisoner and another man who has not yet been identified were seen in the neighbourhood of the place where the murder was committed, and a short time afterwards he pawned the watch and riband of the murdered man at a pawnbroker's in Leeds. Subsequently he found his way to Whitworth, near Castleford, where marks of blood were found upon him. And shortly after that time he sold the pawn-ticket for deceased's watch to a collier, from whom it was traced back, and so led to the apprehension of the prisoner. The facts were proved by numerous witnesses, and the defence offered was that the prisoner, who is a mere boy, was made a tool of by an older man, who was the actual perpetrator of the murder, and that he was simply an accessory after the fact to a robbery with violence, and a receiver of stolen property, knowing it to have been stolen. Mr Justice Wightman, in summing up, directed the jury that if they were of opinion that two persons were present at the attack on the deceased, and two persons had been spoken to, then it was immaterial which was the hand that did it, and both were equally guilty. The jury after an absence of half-an-hour returned a verdict of Guilty. The Judge then put on the black cap and pronounced the extreme sentence of the law in the usual form, amid the repeated cries from the gallery of a woman stated to be the mother of the prisoner. The prisoner, who looks younger than the age stated in the calender, maintained an extraordinary degree of self possession amounting almost to indifference during the trial, but broke down at last, when the judge was pronouncing the sentence of death, and was led off weeping bitterly.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT: WARWICK.—The Coventry Murder.—John Kington, aged 22, was indicted for the wilful murder of Elizabeth Ann Kington, his wife, at Coventry, on the 12th November. The circumstances of the murder were of a shocking description. The prisoner had been subject to fits, and his marriage had been an unhappy one. He had ill-treated his wife, and appears to have nourished suspicions as to her conduct. On the day in question they were living apart, but he met her in the streets of Coventry, took her to a field on the foot road from Coventry to Stoke, knocked her down and cut her throat, severing the carotid artery, the windpipe, and indeed all the arteries leading to the spine. On being placed at the bar the prisoner pleaded "Guilty." The learned Judge said he trusted that the prisoner had not adopted such a course under any hope or persuasion that it would be better for him in this world if he did so. The prisoner in a low voice said that it was of no use, and that he could not plead against his conscience. A plea of Guilty having been recorded on the coroner's inquisition, the prisoner handed in a written paper, the perusal of which occupied the learned judge for some minutes. On concluding it his lordship said he hoped the prisoner did not wish the contents of the paper to be read publicly. The prisoner persisted in his resolution of having it read in public, and expressed a wish that the clergyman who had acted as his spiritual adviser should be called. The Rev. Mr. Widdrington, vicar of St. Michael's, was then sworn, and stated that the prisoner had acted under his advice in pleading Guilty, and that otherwise his spiritual ministrations would have been unavailing to the prisoner. He had made inquiries respecting the case, and had examined the evidence given before the magistrates and the coroner, and he could come to no other conclusion than that the proofs were overwhelming, and that the prisoner had committed an atrocious murder. He had assisted in drawing up the written statement, in conformity with the wishes of the prisoner, and for the purpose of its being handed to the judge, but he agreed with his lordship that it was not advisable that it should be read in public. After some little persuasion the prisoner was induced to forego the reading of the paper. The learned Judge then put on the black cap, and said: "Prisoner at the bar, you have been found guilty on your confession of the murder of your wife. I have read through the depositions of the witnesses before the coroner and the committing magistrates, and having done so, and finding their evidence conclusive, it is not a matter of surprise or regret to me that you have thought it better to plead guilty, not in hopes of obtaining mercy in this world, but from a consciousness that the evidence was overwhelming, and in order to avoid the pain of hearing the details of your crime proved by the witnesses in face of the public. You have handed in a paper, which I have read, and which I will take care shall be forwarded to the proper quarter. But I am bound to say that there is nothing in it to justify you in hoping that mercy will be extended to you. I have prayed you not to have that paper read in public. It contains imputations on others of the most dreadful kind, and I should regret that the last act of your life should have been to impute to others such a dreadful crime as that which you have suggested. I have no wish to increase your pain, but it is my duty to pass upon you the sentence of the law, and I can hold out to you no hope of mercy in this world." The learned judge then proceeded to pass sentence of Death in the usual form.

Obituary.

THE EARL OF CAMPERDOWN, K.T., died on Thursday at his residence in Wilton Terrace after a short illness, in his 75th year. His lordship, although not quite the father of the Upper House, was one of its very oldest members, having taken his seat soon after he attained his majority in 1806, and sat it is believed in 16 Parliaments. He was the third son of the celebrated Admiral Viscount Duncan, on whose death in 1804 he succeeded to the family estates and honours achieved by the great victory over the Dutch fleet off Camperdown in 1797. The late peer took his seat with the Whig Opposition, but seldom spoke in Parliament till 1820, when he took an active part in the trial of Queen Caroline. On the coronation of William IV. his lordship was elevated to the rank of an earldom, the King being pleased, as his own special act and as a tribute to the memory of the first peer, to adopt the unusual step in the case of a new creation of giving Lord Camperdown's brothers and sisters the rank of earl's children. He married in 1805 the daughter of Sir Hew Dalrymple, of North Berwick and Tantallon Castle, in East Lothian, who still survives, together with two sons and two daughters. His lordship is succeeded by his eldest son, Viscount Duncan, M.P. for Forfarshire.

THE RIGHT HON. LORD HOLLAND died at Naples on Sunday after a short but severe illness. His lordship, Henry Edward Fox, Baron Holland of Holland, Lincolnshire, and Baron Holland of Foxley, Wiltshire, in the peerage of Great Britain, was the only son of the third Baron by his marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Richard Vassall, whose previous marriage with Sir Godfrey Webster had been dissolved. He was born in 1802, and married in 1823 Lady Mary Augusta Coventry, only daughter of the late Earl of Coventry. His lordship entered the diplomatic service in 1831, and was for some time attaché to the Embassy at St. Petersburg, whence he was removed in 1832 to Turin as Secretary of Legation. In 1835 he proceeded to Vienna in a similar capacity, and continued there till 1838, when he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to the Germanic Confederation. Having held that post for a few months he was removed to Florence, where he was Resident Minister up to June, 1846, when he retired altogether from diplomatic duties, mainly from the indifferent state of his health. On the death of his father in October, 1840, he succeeded to the title and estates. His lordship not leaving any issue the barony becomes extinct, but the property at Kensington devolves it is said on his only sister, Lady Lilford.

THE RIGHT HON. HENRY FITZROY, M.P., died on Saturday last at his residence, 3, Sussex Square, Kemptown, Brighton, from a combination of fever and ague, induced it is said by his zealous application to the duties of his office as First Commissioner of Works. Mr. Fitzroy was the second son of the late Lord Southampton, and would have inherited the peerage on the death of his brother, the present lord. He was born in 1807, and was consequently in his 53d year. At the early age of 24 he was returned to Parliament for Great Grimsby, and since that time has been constantly immersed in politics. In 1846 he became a Lord of the Admiralty, and in 1852 Under Secretary for the Home Department. He became Chairman of Committees of the House of Commons in 1855, and held that office up to the time of his death. On the accession of the present Government to office he was appointed First Commissioner of Works. As a member of Parliament Mr. Fitzroy will be rememb red by three measures of an eminently practical character—the regulation of London cabs, the protection of females from brutal assaults, and the Act extending the jurisdiction of county courts from 20*l.* to 50*l.*, all of which were perfected while he was Under Secretary for the Home Department.

SIR JAMES MACAULAY, C.B., late Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, Upper Canada, died suddenly at Toronto a few days since. He had been actively connected with the history of Upper Canada since the beginning of the century, and had served his country in the battle field and the Legislature as well as on the judicial bench. Although for a year or two past, owing to failing sight, he had retired from the bench, he still continued to labour for the public, and had been so employed on the morning of the day on which he died. He was chairman of the commission for the codification of the laws, and only last year completed his labours in that capacity. Many of the Upper Canada papers appear in mourning, as a mark of respect to his memory.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, Dec. 19.

The supply of Wheat to this morning's market was moderate from Essex, but small from Kent; a few picked samples were realised at an improvement of 1s per qr. upon the prices of this day se'nnight, the majority being poor both in quality and condition remained unsold towards the close. The attendance was small, and although 1s. per qr advance was occasionally established on foreign, the business transacted was very limited. Barley is a slow sale at the prices of this day week. Beans and Peas bring fully late rates. For Oats there is a fair inquiry at an advance of 6d per qr. The Flour trade is firm, and country marks rather dearer.

FRIDAY, Dec. 23.

The frost during the last eight days has been more severe for the time of year than for very many years past, and in this vicinity but little snow has fallen. On Tuesday night the temperature rose considerably with a fall of snow and rain, and on Wednesday the frost had disappeared, but returned again on that night. The Wheat trade has been inactive, caused in a great measure by the firmness of holders, who generally insist on higher prices. An advance of 6d. to 1s. per qr. has been realised in many markets on fine samples of English. The value of Spring Corn has not undergone any change of moment. Prices of Flour have been well maintained. The arrivals of grain-laden vessels from Southern Europe off the coast this week are large; the sales trifling, including Ibrail Maize at 30s 3d. per 480 lbs.; Odessa at 31s. 6d., Galatz at 31s 6d., both per 492 lbs.; Ibrail Barley on passage at 19s 6d per qr. imp., less 2½ per cent., Danubian and spring at 23s 9d to 24s per 480 lbs., c. f. and i.; Odessa Oats, inperfect, at 16s 10½d. per qr. imp.; Taganrog Linseed at 47s 6d to 50s, Odessa at 50s to 52s per qr. delivered. The arrivals of English grain this week have been to a fair extent, and very small of all descriptions of foreign. The attendance at to-day's market was small. Fine English Wheat is inquired after, but some portion of the inferior samples left over from Monday remained unsold towards the close of the market, being offered in vain at that day's prices. Foreign was held firmly at former rates, but scarcely any business transacted. Barley, Beans, and Peas bring Monday's quotations. The Oat trade is firm, and in some instances an advance of 6d. per qr. is obtained.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday, Dec. 20.—We had a moderate attendance of millers and dealers at our Corn Exchange this morning, and Wheat met a fair consumptive demand at an improvement of fully 1s. per cental on the rates of this day week. Flour was also the turn dearer. Indian Corn being held for 6d. per qr more money found few buyers, except in retail. Oats and Oatmeal both steady at full prices. Beans advanced 6d per qr. Peas and Barley without change.

FRIDAY, Dec. 23.—The grain market was very dull, and the attendance limited. Prices for all articles, however, are very firm, and holders are not disposed to accept less than the extreme quotations of Tuesday.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, Dec 19.

The number of Beasts, although small, is fully adequate to the demand; indeed, purchasers have pretty well supplied with the Christmas stock, and cannot be induced except at reduced prices, and many remain unsold. There is a fair average supply of Sheep for the day. Calves are good, and they are readily disposed of at late quotations. Calf trade remains unaltered. From Germany and Holland there are 450 Beasts, 2650 Sheep, and 150 Calves; from Spain, 140 Beasts; from Scotland, 250; from Ireland, 230; from Norfolk and Suffolk, 300; and 1500 from the northern and midland counties.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.

PEAT'S FARMER'S DIARY AND ACCOUNT BOOK, 1860; being a complete and easy method of keeping farm accounts. Dedicated by permission to the Right Hon. the EARL of CARLISLE.

The publisher begs to call the attention of Agriculturists to this Diary and Account Book. It has been favourably received during the last 6 years by a great many eminent agriculturists in England, Ireland, and Scotland; and high encomiums have been passed upon it by all the leading journals (London and Provincial), advocating the cause of agriculture.

The publisher has pleasure in stating that it has received the high patronage of the Right Hon. the Earl of Carlisle, and will by permission be dedicated to him.

This Diary contains Space for Memoranda; Complete Almanack—Almanack with Breeder's Tables—Memoranda—Cash Account—Farmer's Account Book—Inventory, Cash, Stock, &c., beginning of year—Extent of Farm—Cropping or Produce Table—Outlay and Income during the Year—Inventory, Cash, Stock, &c., ending of year—Summary of Outlay and Income—a great many useful Tables, Stamps, Taxes, Licenses, &c.—Valuable recipes for Farmers—A complete List of Fairs in the United Kingdom, &c.

The publisher would recommend that an early application be made for this Diary, as a great many were disappointed in ordering copies for 1859, after the edition was sold off and too late to print a second edition.

"The great desiderata in farm account-books are simplicity and brevity, leaving nothing for the farmer to do but to enter under printed heads the transactions of each day, when the labour of the day is finished. In looking over the 'Diary' of Mr. Peat, we think he has met these requirements of the farmer in a very satisfactory manner, so that any farmer, by making himself familiar with the various headings, may settle the day's accounts of his farm in a very few minutes. We have no hesitation in recommending it to our readers."—Mark Lane Express.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—ACIDITY, HEARTBURN, FLATULENCY, ERYSIPELAS.—This formidable array of ailments will not alarm those who have once witnessed the happy manner in which each and all of them yield to the purifying influence of these Pills. Their effect is vastly increased by rubbing the part, or the skin over the part, affected with HOLLOWAY'S Ointment, which passes through the skin, and acts upon every organ placed internal to the portion rubbed. It is wonderful how indigestion succumbs to such treatment, which always gives relief in a short time. Erysipelas, Gout, and Rheumatism are always accompanied by disordered stomach, which the same remedies readily rectify by purifying the blood and regulating the action of the liver, kidneys, and bowels.

PEAT'S FARMER'S DIARY AND ACCOUNT BOOK, 1860; being a complete and easy method of keeping farm accounts. Dedicated by permission to the Right Hon. the EARL of CARLISLE.
The publisher begs to call the attention of Agriculturists to this Diary and Account Book. It has been favourably received during the last 6 years by a great many eminent agriculturists in England, Ireland, and Scotland; and high encomiums have been passed upon it by all the leading journals (London and Provincial), advocating the cause of agriculture.
The publisher has pleasure in stating that it has received the high patronage of the Right Hon. the Earl of Carlisle, and will by permission be dedicated to him.
This Diary contains Space for Memoranda; Complete Almanack—Almanack with Breeder's Tables—Memoranda—Cash Account—Farmer's Account Book—Inventory, Cash, Stock, &c., beginning of year—Extent of Farm—Cropping or Produce Table—Outlay and Income during the Year—Inventory, Cash, Stock, &c., ending of year—Summary of Outlay and Income—a great many useful Tables, Stamps, Taxes, Licenses, &c.—Valuable recipes for Farmers—A complete List of Fairs in the United Kingdom, &c.
The publisher would recommend that an early application be made for this Diary, as a great many were disappointed in ordering copies for 1859, after the edition was sold off and too late to print a second edition.
"The great desiderata in farm account-books are simplicity and brevity, leaving nothing for the farmer to do but to enter under printed heads the transactions of each day, when the labour of the day is finished. In looking over the 'Diary' of Mr. Peat, we think he has met these requirements of the farmer in a very satisfactory manner, so that any farmer, by making himself familiar with the various headings, may settle the day's accounts of his farm in a very few minutes. We have no hesitation in recommending it to our readers."—Mark Lane Express.

News of the Week.

THE death of Lord MACAULAY, leaving his last and greatest work as an unfinished monument of his genius, will be received with regret in all parts of the world where the English language is spoken, or English oratory and literature are understood. He died suddenly on Wednesday last from disease of the heart, from which he had been long suffering; but his health had latterly experienced so much amendment that this sudden termination of his brilliant career was not anticipated by his friends. He was only 59 years of age, and as he has died unmarried, the title which he had earned so well has expired with him.

The approaching meeting of the Congress is likely to be considerably influenced by the recent pamphlet on "The Pope and the Congress," which has caused an immense sensation in all parts of Europe. The POPE is said to have informed the French Ambassador in Rome that in consequence of its publication the departure of Cardinal ANTONELLI has been suspended; while the Papal Nuncio in Paris has intimated to COUNT WALEWSKI that it is impossible for the POPE to send a representative to the Congress if an authentic denial be not given to the rumour that the pamphlet had an official origin and expressed the sentiments of the French Ministry. The Governments of Austria, Naples, and Spain have since declared that they will not send Plenipotentiaries to the Congress if the POPE be not represented; and the Russian Ambassador is said to have informed COUNT WALEWSKI that as the pamphlet, irrespective of the religious question with which Russia does not intend to interfere, contains principles opposed to that respect for authority on which the Russian Government is founded, it is the intention of Russia to oppose in the Congress the programme which it embodies. It was reported in Paris on Thursday that the Nuncio had demanded his passports, but there is reason to believe that the rumour was premature, and that the Nuncio has no intention at present of quitting Paris. The latest news states that the Council of Ministers has resolved on not giving any official denial to the pamphlet, on the ground that as it has not been mentioned in the Moniteur, the only official organ of the Government, it cannot be considered an affair to be noticed by foreign Powers in their diplomatic relations with France.

The Times of Saturday published a conversation which has recently taken place on the relations of France and England between a Frenchman and an Englishman, who are understood to have been the EMPEROR and Mr. COBDEN. In the course of this conversation, which will be found at length in our Foreign News, "the Frenchman" is described as having characterised the invasion panic in England as "actual folly," and as having reminded his auditor that the EMPEROR co-operated with England in the Mediterranean, in spite of the Assembly; that he again united himself with her in the Crimea; that when the Indian rebellion broke out he offered a passage for her troops, although he had then his opportunity if he had been minded to invade our shores; and that on every occasion when efforts were made to detach him from the English alliance by proposals inconsistent with English principles, he steadily refused complicity in any such policy or plans. With regard to the increase of the French navy, he is represented to have said that the application of steam to the purposes of naval warfare had compelled the Government of France, like that of England, wholly to reorganise her naval force, and that it will take 10 years more to bring the French navy up to the point of efficiency determined upon under LOUIS PHILIPPE, a Sovereign who was not accused of any hostile plans against England. On the subject of war, "the Frenchman" is described as having expressed his belief that the late Tory Government wished to range England on the side of Austria in the recent struggle in Italy, and that the present movement in favour of putting the country in an efficient state of defence originated in a party manœuvre. It cannot, he said, be denied that there still exists in both countries a remnant of rancour and rivalry; but at the same time there are "material interests on the one side and liberal ideas on the other, which tend incessantly to draw the two countries closer to each other;" and he emphatically declared that "a war with England could bring to France no advantage, material or moral."

VICTORIA CROSS.—Notice has been given by the War Office that it is her Majesty's intention to hold a presentation of the Victoria Cross at Windsor Castle on Wednesday next, the 4th January, at 11 o'clock. VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—The decision of the Government Commissioners on the question of dress was made known by Lord Elcho on Friday, at a meeting of the London Scottish in the hall of the United Service Institution. His lordship stated that the Commissioners, after a deliberation of four hours, had agreed to recommend a gray dress, consisting of a loose blouse, pegtop trousers and leggings, a great coat, and light forage cap, with slanting peak. His lordship appeared in the dress, and said that with the belts, its cost had only been 2*l.* 2*s.* exclusive of the great coat, which would be from 30*s.* to 35*s.*, so that the whole sum for which the volunteer could equip himself would not exceed four guineas. After some discussion the dress was unanimously adopted, subject to such alterations as the Council may deem advisable after examining the sealed patterns. The question of having distinctive badges indicating nationality was decided in the negative.—A meeting of the council of the London Rifles was held at the Mansion House on Tuesday, when the Lord Mayor stated that 1012 gentlemen had enrolled themselves as effective members, and the progress they were making in the drill was highly satisfactory.—A general meeting of the effective and honorary members of the St. James's Westminster corps was held on Tuesday in the Vestry Hall, Piccadilly, at which it was resolved to amalgamate with the other eight parishes in the city of Westminster, with the view to the eventual formation of an effective brigade. It was stated during the meeting that the Westminster authorities had made an arrangement with the copyholders of the manor of Fulham for the use of a very fine practice-ground, with a range of upwards of 700 yards, and 100 yards in breadth.—A meeting of the Irish residents of Islington and the adjacent districts was held at Myddelton Hall on Wednesday, at which it was resolved on the motion of Major-General Sir John Scott Lillie, seconded by Major-General Sir Justin Sheil, K.C.B., to form a local committee for the purpose of co-operating with the General Council of the London Irish in the organisation of the corps.—A general meeting of the council of the West Middlesex (late Marylebone) Rifle Corps was held on Thursday at Lord's Cricket-ground, when Lord Radstock announced that the corps had by a large majority determined on retaining the present material for the uniform, and that it was proposed to adopt the cap decided on by the War Office Committee.—The members of the North London, comprising the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th Middlesex, took the oath of allegiance on Wednesday at Myddelton Hall, after which they marched to their future practice-ground in the Seven Sisters Road, Holloway.—A public meeting of the parishioners of Clerkenwell was held at the parochial schoolroom on Tuesday [illegible] a committee was appointed to take measures [illegible] mation of a rifle corps for that parish.—The [illegible] the Railway Corps have been accepted by her [illegible] and its order on the county roll is 20th. "War Office, [illegible]

"My Lord,—I have the honour to inform you that Her Majesty's Government have determined to issue to Rifle Volunteer Corps, after the 1st January next, an additional number of long Enfield rifles (pattern 1853), to the extent of [illegible] on the effective strength of the corps. This supply will make the aggregate issue to 100 per cent. on the effective strength of the force; and I have to request that you will be good enough to communicate this decision of the Government to the commanding officers of the various corps in your county, who should at once forward the prescribed requisitions to this office for such portion of the supply as they may be entitled to under the regulations. I hope to be in a position, in the course of next year, to exchange these rifles gradually for the Pattern Enfield, in the case of any corps which may desire it, on the understanding that the long rifles must be returned in serviceable condition, fair wear and tear excepted, or that the corps must pay for any damage they may have received.—I am, &c.

"SIDNEY HERBERT."

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Times of Saturday published the following conversation which has, it says, taken place in Paris between an "Englishman" and a "Frenchman," who are understood to be Mr. Cobden and the Emperor:—

The Englishman.—"You know my sentiments with regard to France, and my sincere desire to see the most complete harmony always subsist between my country and yours. Judge then of my surprise, and allow me to add my sorrow, at finding the relations between our respective countries have greatly and profoundly altered—at least, if we may judge by appearances. I have carefully and conscientiously examined the state of the public mind in England. I have interrogated and listened to persons of every class, from the highest to the lowest. Well, then, I declare to you, to my deep regret, I have found, with the one, as with the other, mistrust pushed to the point of only believing in menaces on the part of your country and fear to that of deeming it necessary to put themselves in a state of defence. I address myself, therefore, to you, to the plain facts which are generally represented in England as flagrant proofs of the bad intentions of France with regard to us."

Frenchman.—"What! you, my dear sir? You, whose mind is so just and upright; you, whose judgment is so sound, whose reason so firm and enlightened—you, too, caught by contagion? In truth, you would make me laugh if I did not know you to be serious, and I would class you among the foolish if I did not know you to be the contrary. Yes, I declare to you, in the eyes of my countrymen, as in my own, the panic spread abroad in England is actual folly."

Englishman.—"Folly as much as you please. The fact does not the less exist; and, as it exists, it must be taken into serious consideration. Do you not foresee a fatal result? How many unfounded rumours are credited? People's minds on both sides will grow embittered, and the merest cause will suffice to bring about a rupture, and the slightest spark to light up a flame."

Frenchman.—"The difficulty is to lead back to the truth those who obstinately wander from it, and to cure the blind who will not see. Nevertheless, I wish to submit to your diseased imagination facts that cannot be refuted—to chase phantoms that flit about on the other side of the Channel realities which can be easily verified and proved beyond dispute. Facts shall speak first and figures after. Now, the Emperor has given to no foreign power, more than to England, guarantees of his desire to live in good harmony. Hardly had he ascended to power when he despatched [illegible] spite of the Assembly, the French fleet to make common cause with yours in the East. Subsequently he united his arms with you in the Crimean war; and when the insurrection which broke out in India employed all your army in Asia, did he profit by the absence of your force to pick a quarrel with you? On the contrary, he offered to the English troops passage through France. He subscribed, as well as the Imperial Guard, for your wounded, while (be it said en passant, and without meaning reproach) our wounded in Italy seemed to you indifferent. Finally, how many measures for the last two years have been proposed by divers Governments which might have shocked England? He has rejected them all, and made no merit whatever in your eyes of the rejection. How can so many proofs of a cordiality so constant be all at once forgotten? And how does it come to pass that mistrust and error are substituted for the legitimate effect which it should have produced? Why should a line of conduct so honest be answered by passionate and mistaken alarm? I look about me in vain, and I cannot understand the cause of this sudden terror in England. And, good heavens! what a time has been selected to propagate it? Why, the very moment when the Emperor has given a rare example of moderation. From the very day when he proposed and concluded peace people were pleased to attribute to him ambitious designs; he was represented as marching to new conquests when, arresting the impetuosity of his troops, he so resolutely traced the limit beyond which he would not push his victory. There is, then, something insensate in converting into one eager for war the man than whom none can wish to be more pacific; and into a cause of fear what ought to be a pledge of security."

Englishman.—"The conduct of the Emperor would, I admit, be the most appropriate argument to convince us, and his sympathy for England has never ceased to inspire us with confidence. But, the people—but the army! Come now, frankly speaking, do they not both detest us? And will not public opinion force your Sovereign some day to declare war against us?"

Frenchman.—"To such questions as these I reply—Error, error the most grave, my dear sir. It cannot be denied that there is at bottom, in both countries, a remnant of rancour and rivalry which still subsists, but subsists much more in a latent than in an aggressive state. Material interests on one side, liberal ideas on the other, tend incessantly to draw the two countries closer to each other. Moreover, France is more practical than you imagine. What advantage, material or moral, could a war with you bring us? None—absolutely none. Consequently no one desires it. But have you expressed all your thoughts? Do you not keep silent as to the cause of this mistrust which is so universal in England against the Emperor and his Government? Be candid, and I shall be the same.

Englishman.—"Well then, I will be candid. Here is our decisive reason, our principal grievance; the development given to the French navy is out of all proportion to the requirements and the greatness of your country."

Frenchman.—"This is another prejudice; is it possible that a man like you should share it? Truly, if instead of being some hours distant from our frontier, England was at the Antipodes, one would not find it a greater stranger than you appear to be as to what is passing in France. You speak of our extraordinary armaments, but are you quite sure of the fact? Some journals have printed it; you have read it. Some persons have told you of it; you have repeated it, and you believe it—that's all. Such is the only source of your conviction. Learn, then, what is doing in France, and hold it for certain. Not a centime can be spent without the vote of the Legislative Corps, and without the previous examination of the Council of State. Consult the estimates of navy and army, and you shall find in them no excessive expenditure on the part of the Government."

Englishman.—"Your estimates are nothing to me, my dear sir; I am ignorant as to how they are arranged. Figures are easy of handling, and are susceptible of every combination. Facts on the contrary, are inflexible; and, since you have appealed to them, I will appeal to them in turn. At Toulon and Brest you are building plated ships. Against whom can they be intended if not against us? At Nantes you have on the stocks hundreds of flat-bottomed boats. For what purpose, if it be not to throw in an instant 20,000 soldiers on our coast? And then your immense supplies of fuel, and the prodigious activity of your arsenals? Everywhere you are building ships; everywhere you are casting rifled cannon and projectiles of all kinds. These are so many evident facts, and of public notoriety. What answer will you give me to them?"

Frenchman.—"The most categorical in the world. Give me your attention, for I will now quote laws and regulations, authentic reports, and go back to a period which will not be suspected by you:—According to a royal ordinance of the 22d November, 1846, the total strength of the naval forces on the peace footing was to be 328 ships, of which 40 were liners and 50 frigates—sailing vessels. When the war in the Crimea came on France had very few steam-ships; it was easy to see that sailing ships had passed their time, and that it was necessary boldly to admit the principle that henceforth every man-of-war must be a steamer. The Emperor consequently named in 1855, under the presidency of Admiral Hamelin, a commission to fix the basis of the new fleet necessary for France. The commission reported in favour of transforming the sailing ships, and of appropriating to them our ports, giving them especially the yards and docks which they required. The report terminated by demanding that the annual grant for the maintenance of the materiel of the fleet should be augmented by an annual sum of 25,000,000f. for 13 years, the period judged indispensable to complete their transformation. Of that sum 5,000,000f. were applied to the ports. The Council of State, when called upon to give its opinion, reduced to 17,000,000f. for 13 years the amount of extraordinary credits demanded for the navy. Do not tire, my dear sir, with these details. Here is one quite recent, and not less precise:—In 1859 our fleet consisted of 27 ships of the line (vaisseaux) and 15 frigates, screws, completed; and of three plated frigates. We have, then, in order to arrive at the force on a peace footing, decided under Louis Philippe, 13 ships of the line to transform, and 35 frigates to build, which, I repeat, will still require 10 years at least. As for the plated frigates—the invention of the Emperor—nothing is more natural than to construct them as an experiment, since if they succeed they can be advantageously substituted for ships of the line. But this is not all; the necessity of having only a steam fleet entailed on us expenses from which England may be exempted. When our fleet used sails, and we had an expedition to send, as for instance to Africa, to the Crimea, and to Italy, it was easy to find among the trade sailing transport for men, horses, or stores. But at the present day our merchant navy is not sufficiently developed to enable us to find steam transports when we have need of them. We are therefore forced to build them, in order to have at all times a certain number ready, and this imperious obligation is so present to us, that at the very moment I am speaking to you all our transports are proceeding to China; and, that we may not be entirely without resources, and be unprovided, the Naval Department has been obliged to purchase three large steamships in England. You see, then, I have at heart to convince you that I penetrate without hesitation to the very bottom of things, and I disclose to you the minutest details of our situation."

Englishman.—"These categorical explanations begin to reassure me. But have you any such to give me on the supplies of coals and the boats intended for the landing of troops?"

Frenchman.—"I will continue with the same frankness. Some months back your Tory Ministry was so much opposed to the war in Italy that everything announced its wish to place itself on the side of Austria. It was even on the point of causing coal to be considered as contraband of war. Now, our navy used only English coal. The Minister had then to occupy himself with that semi-hostile attitude of your Ministry, and to look about for the means of supplying, in case of need, the French fleet with French coal. It was his duty not to leave our supplies at the mercy of your Government. With this object, essays were made in changing our boilers, and coal was brought to Nantes, which was to be directed to Brest by the internal canals. Sixty iron barques, of a very small draught of water, were built to facilitate the transport of coals over the docks; but these boats, very different from those which serve for the landing of troops, did not merit the honour of exciting your apprehensions and disturbing your sleep."

Englishman.—"Very good. Yet, for all that, you did not the less order from us a very considerable quantity of coal."

Frenchman.—"That is perfectly true. The important part, however, is to know for what purpose we wanted this great quantity of coal which frightens you. Well, then, it is exclusively destined to supply our fleet in China and in other parts of the globe. Thus, since the 1st of July we have chartered in France 51 ships, carrying 26,000 tons of coal to Martinique, to French Guiana, to Senegal, to Goree, to the island of Reunion, to Mayotte, to Hong Kong, to Shanghai, to Saigon, to the Mauritius, to Singapore. We have chartered in England 25 ships, carrying 31,000 tons of coal to Hong Kong, Woosung, Singapore, Chusan, St. Paul de Loanda, and the Cape of Good Hope. Of all these details there is not one of which you may not procure the material proof, and then you must agree with me that the apprehensions of your countrymen are chimerical, and without reasonable foundation."

Englishman.—"I am willing to admit that what you tell me has the appearance of truth. I have a last objection, and it concerns your arsenals. If, as you assure me, your Government does not contemplate recommencing the war, why does it continue to show such great activity?"

Frenchman.—"I have in vain insisted on one essential point, viz., that, like other countries, we are in a complete state of transformation, but you seem not to wish to comprehend it. We have to change not only all the matériel of the navy, but on land also the whole of our artillery; and, although the Emperor had in Italy 200 rifled cannon, he will still require three or four years to entirely accomplish the definitive transformation."

Englishman.—"I thank you for all this information; and I shall turn it to account."

Frenchman.—"Permit me one more observation. You have avowed frankly all the apprehensions which my country causes you; but I have not expressed to you the whole of my opinion on yours. If, in England, people are convinced that France desires to declare war against you, we here are, in our turn, well convinced that the mistrust on the other side of the Channel is a party manœuvre. The Tory party, dissolved, as you are aware, by Sir Robert Peel, seeks the means of reconstructing itself; and, according to it, the best possible one would be by reviving the hatred of France, and by seeking, as in 1804, to form a European coalition against her. The statesmen who at this day take the lead in public opinion cannot be ignorant of all that I have just told you. Among us it is well understood that the Tories, in place of combating these errors, labour to gain them credit, and pursue their policy with traditional perseverance. People ought to care, however, lest by dint of wishing to deceive others they end by deceiving themselves. There was a certain Marseillaise, whose history occurs to me quite opportunely, and with which I may close a conversation which is already too long. Our Marseillaise, wishing to have a joke at the expense of his fellow citizens, went about crying out that a whale had just entered the port of Marseilles. His pleasantry succeeded, and every one ran to the port. Soon, drawn on by the example, he himself began to run in the same direction to see, with the others, if his invention was not a reality."

The pamphlet, "Le Pape et le Congrès," has caused an immense sensation in Paris. The Papal Nuncio and the Austrian Ambassador are said to have called upon the French Government for explanations, and the Russian Ambassador, Count Kisseleff, has declared to Count Walewski that the pamphlet contains—without considering the religious question, with which Russia does not intend to interfere—principles in opposition to the respect for authority on which the Russian Government is founded, and that, consequently, Russia will oppose the programme drawn up in the pamphlet. It is asserted that Austria, Naples, and Spain will not send Plenipotentiaries to the Congress should the Pope not be represented. A despatch is said to have been sent by Prince Metternich to Vienna, stating that Count Walewski has declared to the Diplomatic Corps that so long as he remains at the head of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs, the pamphlet shall not be considered as the programme of the French Ministry; but on the other hand, a telegram from Paris reached London yesterday stating that the council of ministers has resolved upon not giving any official denial to the pamphlet "The Pope and the Congress." As the Moniteur, the only official organ of the French Government, has not mentioned the pamphlet, its publication is to be considered as a home affair, which the foreign powers could not notice in their diplomatic intercourse with France. The anger of the Ultramontane and Legitimist parties at the sentiments promulgated by the pamphlet can hardly be kept within bounds. M. Louis Veuillot, editor of the Univers, has published an address to the Pope in which he apostrophises him as "Oh father! oh king! oh, most holy and immortal victim," and asserts that it is "the Pope's independence which saves human liberty, and if he were no longer King, the Cross would be torn from every Crown, and nothing could preserve the world, which would soon be brought back to the worship of idols." For this address the Univers has received a second warning from the Government. The reason given for this warning is, that though the question of the Papal States may be freely discussed, it cannot be allowed to endeavour to organise a political agitation in France under religious pretexts. The other Paris papers are almost unanimous in praise of the pamphlet. The Débats contains an article in which M. Lemoine proves, by quotations from his former articles, that he always had expressed the same opinions on this subject, and demands that Italy should remain mistress of her own destinies. According to his view, the Congress of 1860 can take no resolution of its own, but is only called together to recognise the expressed wishes of the Italians. The Constitutionnel of Monday in an article signed by its principal editor, M. Grandguillot, says that the Times is perfectly correct in considering the pamphlet as a political expression of the good understanding and conciliation between France and England. It congratulates itself on this result, as it is necessary that the two great nations of the West remain united in the interest of civilisation and of the European balance of power. M. Grandguillot calls, however, the attention of his readers to the difference in the political motives of the two nations, and states that France, far from intending to destroy the temporal power of the Pope, will on the contrary consolidate it by transforming it according to the wants of modern times. The Patrie publishes a long article to prove that the real enemies of the Papacy are not the persons who call for reforms which the general opinion of Europe has admitted to be urgent, but the Legitimists and the clerical party, who affirm that it is sacrilege to interfere in any respect with the present organisation of the Holy See. These persons, says the Patrie, would at present attempt to save the Pope as they tried formerly to protect Charles X., and the result would be precisely the same in both cases, utter failure. It is officially announced that the Government has given up the prosecution against M. de Montalembert's pamphlet "Pie IX. et la France en 1849 et 1859." The Emperor left Paris on Thursday for Fontainebleau, where his Majesty will stay two days. There will be a grand hunting party during his stay, and Prince Metternich is among the persons invited. The Moniteur of Tuesday announces that Prince Jerome has entered into a state of convalescence.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.—The Queen of Spain was safely delivered of a Princess on Monday morning. On the 22d inst. the Moors again attacked the Spaniards on the road to Tetuan, in order to obstruct the works. They were victoriously repulsed. For the first time the Spanish cavalry charged the enemy, who fled without awaiting the shock. Generals Prim and Quesada distinguished themselves by their bravery. The Spaniards had 4 killed and 40 wounded. All the works, and even the new fortlets, have been completed. The commercial community of Cadiz has offered the Queen the 44 millions of reals claimed by England, but it is said that Lord John Russell has sent an order to the British Minister at Madrid to defer all further mention of the debt for six months.

SWEDEN.—In the sitting of the Diet on Friday the Minister for Foreign Affairs declared that at the Congress he will pursue a policy in conformity with the constitutional interests of Sweden. General Norden and the Swedish Ambassador at Paris, Baron Adelsward, have been appointed Plenipotentiaries of Sweden to the Congress.

BAVARIA.—The King of Bavaria has appointed Baron Liebig president of the Academy of Sciences, in place of M. Tiersch, who resigned the office on account of his great age.

AUSTRIA.—The Vienna official journals are anything but pleased with the compromise proposed in the French pamphlet on the Pope and the Congress. The Ost Deutsche Post condemns it on the ground that it is a complete abandonment of the policy which that journal has attributed to France since the day of Villafranca. The Post Ampt Gazette looks on it as a direct menace for Austria, and exclaims—"If Austria has no longer any rights in Italy, none exist anywhere for anybody."

SAXONY.—The official Dresden Journal contains an ordinance of the Minister of Finance removing, from the 1st of January next, the prohibition to export horses over the frontiers.

PRUSSIA.—Prince Gortschakoff, who has been appointed first Plenipotentiary of Russia at the approaching Congress, will stay one or two days at Berlin on his journey to Paris.

ITALY.—Letters from Rome assert that the Duke de Grammont has been officially informed by Cardinal Antonelli that, in consequence of the publication of the pamphlet "Le Pape et le Congrès," the departure of the First Plenipotentiary of the States of the Church for Paris, to be present at the Congress, has been suspended. In consequence of the embarrassments of the Papal Exchequer, the Minister of Finance has been obliged to sell Consolidated Funds to an amount double that previously stated (2,000,000f.) The Milan Gazette announces that the ex-Duke of Modena has advanced with his troops towards the frontiers of his former States. Part of his army is already at Gonzaga, quite a frontier town. Letters from Naples state that Lord Holland died in the Roman Catholic faith, and was buried in one of the Catholic churches on the Chiaja.

TURKEY.—Letters from Constantinople of the 14th inst. state that, after numerous sittings of the Divan, a definitive resolution has been adopted, calling upon Europe to settle the Suez Canal question in its political bearing by guaranteeing the integrity of the Turkish Empire. M. de Thouvenel and the four other Ambassadors had agreed to that arrangement. The Grand Vizier and Fuad Pacha had drawn up a notification to that effect, which was to be sent to the different Powers. The Bulgarians, to escape the tyranny of the Pachs, were seeking refuge in large numbers in Servia. There was some rumour of the Turkish Government intending to interfere. The religious investiture had been granted to the Bey of Tunis, but the Porte claimed tribute from him.

SERVIA.—The Pacha of the fortress of Belgrade has ceased his relations with the Servian Government. The Pacha had demanded the extradition of a Turkish subject, which was refused by the Government of Servia, and that circumstance caused the relations between them to be broken off. The Servian Minister of Foreign Affairs has addressed a memorial on the subject to all the foreign consuls resident at Belgrade.

CYPRUS.—A letter from Nicosia, in the Island of Cyprus, gives an account of a terrible inundation which took place there, on the 10th November. No fewer than 47 houses and 150 shops were undermined and fell, and 4 men, 11 women, and a child, and more than 100 mules perished beneath the ruins. Considerable injury was done to the merchandise in the bazaar, and the total loss is estimated at 2,000,000 of piastres.

THE PRINCIPALITIES.—Prince Couza intends to contract a loan of 60,000,000f. at Paris, under the guarantee of France, Prussia, and Russia. The Principalities offer to mortgage, as security for the loan, the income resulting from the salt pits, the Customs, and the landed property belonging to the convents.

INDIA.—A telegraphic despatch arrived on Monday in anticipation of the Calcutta mail of November 22, and the China mail of November 15. A telegram has also been received from Bombay to December 12. The following are the details:—

Cawnpore.—The Governor-General held a grand durbar here on the 3d November, at which he announced to the Maharajas of Rewah and Chirkaree, and the Jaghirdars of Logassee and Gourihar, that in consideration of their loyalty to the British Government and of the services rendered by them during the rebellion, the Government will, in the event of failure to any one of them of direct heirs, recognise the privilege of adoption according to the ancient customs of their respective families. It appears that the Maharajah of Rewah, encouraged by Captain Osborne's nerve, did all his limited means permitted, while the Rajah of Chirkaree fought with his own hand, defended a European officer, his fort, and finally surrendered, or offered to surrender, his own son as a hostage instead of the Englishman.

Nepaul.—The death of the Nana is again reported on the statement of a Brahmin, who says that he attended him in his last illness, and was present when he died. The Brahmin was employed as a spy in the Nana's camp, and his testimony is not considered to be conclusive.

Khandeish.—Mr. Souter, Superintendent of Police in Khandeish, on the 11th ult. came up with the rebel Bheels, under Bhagojee Nalk, and succeeded in shooting and cutting up the gang to a man. Fifty-one bodies were counted on the ground. The Bheels and Arabs composing the gang fought with great obstinacy, and we lost a Jemadar, two Sepoys, and a sowar of the police killed, several men and horses wounded. Mr. Souter's own horse fell under him pierced with three shots. Bhagojee Naik fell in the action, but Mr. Souter hung his body at Nandoosingoba, the spot where Captain Henry was murdered.

Oude.—The Oude Gazette states with reference to the grand durbar at Lucknow, that "a list of the recusant talookdars and city nobles has been prepared, and that no less than 60 odd names are enrolled in it. Each of them has been called upon to account satisfactorily for his absence from the Viceroy's durbar after being summoned, and some 35 or 40 of them after having obtained admission tickets from the Secretary." In a fight on the frontier of Oude, under Lieutenant Roddy, commanding the police, about 20 of the rebels have been killed. A party of Rohillas have been routed under Major Abbott, from Hingolee. He came up with them in a gorge, near Guntoor, and another score were killed, including their leader.

Punjab.—Captain R. Mecham, of the Bengal Artillery, and lately commanding a light field battery in the Punjab, was murdered on the night of the 5th ult., while travelling in a dooly from Bunnoo to Khant. His assailants were five or six in number. His escort was to have been four men, but there were only two with him at the time, and they behaved badly. Four of the murderers have been traced. They are the followers of a notorious Wuzzeera robber named Zingee, from Billund Kheil.

Calcutta.—Sir Hope Grant has arrived in Calcutta, to organise the Indian expedition to China. It is said that it will not in any case exceed 13,000 men, and will probably not exceed 10,000. Of these one-half will be Sikhs, but the regiments have not yet been requested to volunteer. The 67th and 3d Buffs were despatched some time since to Hong Kong and Shanghai, and the 27th, 53d, 60th, 76th, and 99th, with the 1st and 2d Bengal Europeans, have now been warned for service in China. Two batteries of Artillery and all the Royal Engineers available are also to be despatched.

JAPAN.—The accounts from Japan are more satisfactory. The currency question has been arranged on a fair basis, and trade had commenced briskly at Kanagawa. The port of Hakodadi has been opened, and Mr. Hodgson has been established there as her Britannic Majesty's Consul.

CHINA.—Accounts from Shanghai of November 5th state that the Chinese Government has applied for an American mediation on the late differences. A system for the free emigration of Chinese to the West Indies has been organised by Mr. J. G. Austin, the agent, it is understood, of British Government. It has met with the approval and co-operation of the native authorities in Canton, and is likely to work well under proper supervision. The last Russian courier, who left on the 17th October, announces that the Russian Embassy at Pekin was enjoying perfect safety and liberty. All the alarming reports to the contrary are, therefore, unfounded. Admiral Rigault de Genouilly and Admiral Reynaud have returned to France. The American vessel Flora Temple, having on board 800 Coolies for Havannah, has been wrecked in the China Seas, and only about 30 of the crew were saved. The submarine cable intended to be laid between Singapore and Java had arrived at Singapore.

UNITED STATES.—The House of Representatives had not elected a Speaker on the 17th inst., and the President's Message had not, therefore, been communicated to Congress. Advices from Washington state that, on the whole, the mission of General Scott to San Juan has proved satisfactory to the Government, although it has not quite accomplished all that was desired. The temporary engagements entered into are approved by the President and Cabinet. The remainder of the prisoners in the Harper's Ferry affair were executed at Charlestown, Virginia, on the 16th. All passed off quietly, no attempt at rescue having been made. John Brown was interred at North Elba, Essex County, on the 8th, with considerable ceremony. A great meeting to express sympathy with the South was held at Boston on the 8th, Mr. Everett in the chair. In the course of his speech he showed the wickedness of Brown's attempt, and referred to the revolt in St. Domingo and its results as a proof of how little the world is likely to gain by the establishment of a Negro commonwealth. He called upon the people of the North to discontinue the system of provocation which they have used towards the Southern people, and to use all means to strengthen the Union, which Abolitionist madness had endangered. The Winana (cigar-shaped) steamer is reported to have made a very successful trial trip at Norfolk, attaining a speed of 15 knots.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.—Accounts from San Juan state that on the arrival of General Scott in the vicinity of the island he at once entered upon a personal inspection of the localities involved in the dispute, and on the 27th of October despatched Colonel Lay to Victoria. He was cordially received by Governor Douglas, who made him at home in his mansion, and discussed the whole matter with much freedom and cordiality. A correspondence then ensued between General Scott (who did not go to Victoria, but remained in the steamer Massachusetts) and Governor Douglas, in which General Scott offered to withdraw some of the American forces, and proposed a joint military occupation of the island, to be continued by an equal force of English and American soldiers until the question of the title should be settled by the two Governments by diplomacy. Governor Douglas declined a joint military occupation but proposed a joint civil occupation. This was rejected by General Scott, and after some parleying on paper, in which the best possible feeling was displayed on both sides, the General determined to remove all the troops and artillery except one company, which was ordered to remain for the protection of American settlers. He therefore issued an order to this effect, of which he sent the Governor a copy, and afterwards called at the island to enforce the execution of his order. General Scott also ordered the fortifications commenced by the orders of General Harney to be suspended. As soon as these steps had been taken he immediately returned to San Francisco.

Public Addresses.

EARL GREY presided on Friday at a dinner of the Newcastle-on-Tyne Volunteer Rifles, and in the course of the evening made the following remarks on the Volunteer movement:—

"I rejoice in the manner in which the formation of volunteer rifle corps has been taken up, not only in this town but throughout the country, because I confess that it appears to me to be of great importance for the nation's safety that there should be efficient bodies of volunteers formed upon a very large scale indeed. I hope that we shall soon be able to reckon upon the services of 50,000 men—I should be glad if it were even double that number—but, at all events, upon the services of 50,000 men, well drilled, and well taught in the use of that formidable weapon, the rifle, ready at a moment's notice to come forward in the defence of our common country. I know there are some persons who throw cold water, if not absolute ridicule, upon the present movement in favour of the formation of volunteer rifle corps. I have heard it said, 'What is the necessity for doing so? We have no near neighbour who can possibly attack us, except France, which by its geographical position is the only European Power from which it is possible to apprehend any attack, and with France we are upon the very best terms. The Emperor is our faithful ally; we have no reason whatever to be distrustful; therefore all this labour in the formation of volunteer corps is totally useless—it has only caused a panic to seize upon the nation.' I cannot regard it in that light. Far be it from me to impute to the Emperor of the French, or the gallant nation which he governs, that he or they cherish hostile designs against this country. I am willing to give him credit for those assurances of a friendly disposition towards England which we are told are constantly reiterated by the Emperor, but still I say that within the last few years circumstances have arisen which make it expedient that this country should increase its means of defence. France has always had a much larger land force than England. In France itself, and within a few days' call, in Algeria, she has a land force three or four times as large as our own. Considering, then, her position as a continental nation, considering the unsettled state of her internal affairs, I do not think that we have any right to be surprised, however much we may doubt the wisdom of the course, at her thinking it proper to keep up so large an army. But, having this great superiority of force on land, and considering that France has within the last few years been making gigantic efforts to be as strong as we ourselves at sea—seeing that she has greatly increased her naval power—more than this, seeing that it has been announced in the French newspapers (which possess almost a semi-official character) that while increasing her naval power she is, as part of that great measure, providing a fleet of steam transports of the largest class, that she has also lately finished the construction of a magnificent naval station where these steam transports and a formidable steam-fleet of the line may be assembled under the protection of almost impregnable fortresses, where there are arrangements of the most complete and elaborate character for embarking in the shortest possible time a very large army—I say that while we know all this, and know moreover that within the last few years the system of railroads in France has been completed (at all events is nearly completed), so that now in a few days a very large and gallant army may be assembled—I say, that seeing all this, what is our duty? Remember that we have had very recently the strongest proof of how very great and sudden an effort France can make; for at a moment when we were told that she could not disarm because she had never armed, in an incredibly short space of time she was able to assemble beyond the Alps an army of 200,000 or 300,000 men. Now I say when we see all these measures we are bound also to look to our own means of protection. I have no doubt—I don't mean to throw any doubt—upon the declarations of the Emperor that these preparations imply any hostility to us, but when I consider the nature of these measures, that they are not all of them of a defensive character, I think it must be admitted that their object is this—namely, that if France should be unexpectedly engaged in war with any Power she may be enabled promptly to strike a severe if not a fatal blow upon her antagonist. Now it is possible that we may be that antagonist; and if France is ready to strike, I say we ought to be ready to defend. We must not owe the safety, we must not owe the security of this land, which has been for centuries unpolluted by the foot of an invader—I say we must not owe our safety to the forbearance or to the good faith of any other nation; but, under God's providence, we must rely upon ourselves. Among nations as among citizens quarrels may arise very suddenly, and from very slight causes. We cannot forget that a very few years ago a dispute relating to a missionary in the South Seas had almost involved this country in a war with France; nor can we forget that a difference of opinion which arose between the two nations regarding Turkey and Egypt brought us to the brink of a similar calamity. Have we not lately too, had proof of how suddenly a war may arise between two nations which were not looking for it? This day 12 months all Europe believed that there was no reason to apprehend that its tranquillity would be disturbed; but, on New Year's Day that ominous speech was made which was the first symptom of those gathering clouds which soon covered the political horizon, and in the course of no very long time afterwards ended in war. I say, then, that we are bound to stand upon the defensive, and that more is required of us in this respect than was required a few years ago. I am quite aware that when I speak of the defence of the country every Englishman feels that the first and greatest reliance should be placed in our navy. I believe we can rely upon it. I trust that the British navy is, and I hope that it long will be, in a state in which it need not fear to meet any hostile fleet that may be brought against it. In these days of steam, and especially when those steam transports to which I have alluded have been constructed on such a gigantic scale that they can carry, we are told, 2000 men, and for a very short passage even 3000 men, with a fair propertion of artillery,—I say in these days it does appear to me that we cannot too confidently reckon upon its being impossible that a hostile expedition might elude our navy and be thrown upon our shores. I trust that such a contingency is not likely to happen; but I do say that such an attempt is far more likely to be made if it is known that the party to be attacked does not possess the means of promptly encountering the force to be landed. On the other hand, if it is known that a hostile expedition, after encountering all the risks which it must meet with at sea, and having safely reached our shores, even if it should accomplish this, the moment it lands, with the sea behind and no retreat, it would be compelled to fight for its existence with a powerful rifle force. I say that the moment this is known, I believe that so hazardous an enterprise would never be attempted. I think it is of the greatest importance that our peace establishment shall not be less than it has heretofore been. But something more is wanted, and I for one cannot believe that our safety is to be placed in a very large increase of our permanent peace establishment. I am persuaded that this country is at this moment infinitely better prepared for any war in which it may be engaged than if it had, during the last 30 years, kept so large a standing army, which would have prevented that increase of wealth, that advancement in trade and manufactures, which constitutes so great an element in our present strength. It seems to me most advantageous that a part, at all events, of our means of defence shall consist of volunteers. They are open to none of the objections to which a large increase in the regular army is liable. They cost the nation nothing, or next to nothing, and I think it important that this shall be maintained. It is the self-supporting character of these corps which is the great security against their degenerating into abuses. They can give no jealousy or uneasiness to other countries, because these volunteer corps cannot possibly be used for offensive purposes. They are established only for defence, and any amount to which they may be raised can give no cause for alarm or suspicion to other Powers. Instead of being open to political and social objections, they have, on the contrary, great political and social recommendations. They bring together various ranks of men meeting as comrades and as friends on terms of good fellowship, which tends to knit together the various orders of society; and they keep up in the nation, in the safest way, that sort of martial spirit without which no nation can be safe."

SIR HAMILTON SEYMOUR at a recent meeting at Knightsbridge made the following remarks on the volunteer movement:—

"He could truly say—and that must be his apology for engaging their attention—that if there was any one man in this country more than another who had long been aware of the necessity for this great national movement it was himself. For months and months past his declaration to his most intimate friends and to members of his family had been this, 'I see an enormous danger impending; I see one, and one only, safeguard against that danger, and that safeguard is that we all of us, young and old, should enrol ourselves as volunteers, should exercise ourselves in arms, and should be ready, if occasion offer, to come forward in defence of our country.' At first that sentiment was rather laughed at, particularly by members of his own family. He was at that time eager to come forward; he was not afraid of ridicule, but he was apprehensive of injuring a cause which he had so much at heart. He felt he was too insignificant a man to presume to take the initiative; he therefore kept quiet, but he said, at the same time, as soon as any one man moved in the matter he, if it pleased God, would be second. And that, too, he would have done if the movement, instead of originating in the great and wealthy parish of St. George, had been set on foot by the Blind Fiddler of Bethnal Green. It happened, however, that a gallant friend of his, for whom he had great respect—Sir De Lacy Evans—assembled a meeting in Hanover Square. He (Sir H. Seymour) wrote to him, offering to come forward to take part in the proceedings. What was said was done, for he had the pleasure of attending the meeting—the first that was held on the subject. He entirely agreed as to the necessity of being allowed to attend to our own business, and of abstaining from everything that could in the remotest degree be supposed to give offence to any foreign nation. For his own part, he utterly detested the meddling with other people's affairs, and all he asked was that we should be allowed to transact our own business in our own way. There had been warlike men on the throne of France, and we had seen a man on that throne quite as peaceable as they were otherwise—he meant the late Louis Philippe. What, he would ask, was one of the most remarkable features in Louis Philippe's reign? If his memory did not fail him, it was the fortification of his own capital. He was not aware that we were going to fortify London or to erect a Malakoff tower in Belgrave Square; but we were going to take a measure, and a very mild one, for the protection of our whole isle. None but the most unreasonable man in the world could find fault with that. To whom could it give offence? He threw such an idea to the winds. In Heaven's name let us abstain from giving offence to every one; but let us take every measure to protect our shores. If he thought there was anything in this movement calculated to wound the sensibilities of any foreign nation he should be the last man to identify himself with it, or if any English Minister were to come forward with a measure so designed he should be for impeaching him; but when he knew that the movement had only for its object the security of our own 'tight little island' he asked again who had a right to find fault? There were reasons enough for disclaiming anything like offence to France. He had a great respect for Louis Napoleon. It so happened that he had been fortunate enough in the course of his life to have the opportunity of rendering not unimportant services to different members of that very distinguished family; and he was free to confess—it was in the time of their adversity—that it was with infinite pleasure, and with very great zeal and alacrity, that he availed himself of that opportunity. On their part, too, he met not only the greatest courtesy, but the very greatest kindness; and, therefore, he should be the very last in the world to do aught that might by possibility give umbrage to any one of them. If he was speaking in this way it was because he was impressed with the necessity of taking measures to insure, as far as might be, our own national safety. Nothing could be better than the spirit which animated them now; and for that reason let them identify this movement with the habits, and, if possible, the pleasures of society. He could not but think that the precautions we were now taking were those best adapted to the situation by our constitutional habits. Those habits would naturally have prevented us increasing our army, a course in favour of which, also, the argumentum ad crumenam might be used. But besides that, it appeared to him that this great national movement had the additional advantage of the establishment of a sort of club, which would bring together various classes of society who under no other circumstances would have opportunities afforded them for friendly intercourse and for co-operation in a good cause. That was a very important feature, and he believed it would tend very much to increase the harmony and goodwill in which all ranks of the community ought to be united. In conclusion, he would suggest to them the motto of 'Noli me tangere,' as being particularly applicable to this great movement."

THE LOSS OF THE PARAMATTA.—Mr. Traill, the Greenwich police magistrate, has reported to the Board of Trade, as the result of the recent inquiry, that the Royal Mail Company's steam-ship Paramatta was wrecked on the Horseshoe Reef, near St. Thomas's, on her first voyage, through the fault of Captain Baynton, her commander, who proceeded through the Sombrero Channel at full speed without ascertaining his position, and in utter disregard of the printed instructions of the company. Captain Harris, who assisted Mr. Traill as nautical assessor, having expressesed his concurrence in the report, the Board of Trade have directed that Captain Baynton's certificate of competency be suspended for 12 months, and have intimated that a suggestion of the magistrate as to placing a light in the Sombrero Channel will receive attention.

THE CHURCH INSTITUTION.—An influential meeting was held a few days since at the Freemasons' Tavern, under the presidency of Earl Nelson, for the purpose of taking measures to establish a Church Institution before the meeting of Parliament. The arrangements relating to the meeting have been some time in progress, in connection with an energetic movement which has been commenced for the purpose of protecting the Church of England against the aggressions which are from time to time made upon it. During the last session of Parliament joint meetings of the clergy and laity were held in Sion College and elsewhere, at which 250 laymen of the Archdeaconry of London and 300 of the Archdeaconry of Middlesex were nominated by the clergy as consultees on Church matters; and upon the recommendation of the laity of the Archdeaconry of Middlesex the present meeting was convened. The chairman having opened the proceedings, Mr. Howels Davies read a brief report, containing a record of the proceedings of preliminary meetings, and setting forth the names of a vast number of nobility, clergymen, and laymen who had given in their adhesion to the principles of the association. Mr. Henry Hoare, the banker, then moved the adoption of the report in a long address, in which he stated that the archbishops and bishops were strongly in favour of the joint action of the clergy and laity in Church matters. He also informed the meeting that he saw his way through the church-rate question as to a legislative settlement of it which he thought would not be unacceptable to the present House of Commons. He had been in communication with Archdeacon Hale on the subject, and he believed he might say that the district incumbents who now complained might easily be placed upon an equality with their more favoured brethren. Mr. T. Erskine seconded the motion, and the report was unanimously adopted. Mr. Beresford Hope then moved a resolution expressing the satisfaction of the meeting at the approval given by the bishops to the work of the institution, and declaring that the progress made has been eminently satisfactory and encouraging. After some remarks from Mr. M'Gregor, who thought there was not at present cohesion enough amongst churchmen on the subject of church-rates to enable the association to deal definitely with it, the resolution was agreed to. On the motion of Mr. A. Brady, seconded by Mr. Traill, an influential executive committee, consisting of noblemen, members of Parliament, and others, was appointed, Mr. Henry Hoare was elected treasurer, and the new institution was declared duly organised.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC LAITY AND THE POPE.—The London meeting of Roman Catholics to address the Pope is definitively fixed for Tuesday next, Jan. 3. The list of names appended to the "Declaration" in favour of the temporal power of the Pope includes those of Lords Stourton, Arundel, Petre, Dormer, Clifford, Lovat, Herries, Feilding, Campden, eight honourables, 10 baronets, &c.

ST. GEORGE'S-IN-THE-EAST.—At the Thames Police Court on Saturday the summons obtained by the clergy against Mr. Barnes, charging him under the Act of Queen Mary with disturbing the congregation, was, after a long investigation, dismissed by consent, on Mr. Barnes signing a document, drawn up by Mr. Selfe the magistrate, pledging himself not to interrupt the choral services by saying the responses at irregular times, or in so loud a tone as to disturb the minister and choristers.

MR. ALBERT SMITH had an attack of apoplexy on Friday, but he has been restored to consciousness, and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

DREADFUL WRECK IN THE CHANNEL.—The ship Blervie Castle, Capt. M'Hardy, one of the fleet of Messrs. Duncan, Dunbar, & Son, of Limehouse, which left the river on the 15th inst. for Adelaide, was totally lost on the night of the 20th on one of the shoals off the French coast between Folkestone and Cape Grinez. The captain and crew of 34 hands, and 22 passengers, who joined in the river, were drowned. Large quantities of the goods which formed her cargo have been washed up in the neighbourhood of Calais. The Blervie Castle was almost a new ship of 610 tons, and was to have called at Plymouth to take on board 18 passengers, who were there waiting her arrival. The value of the ship and cargo is estimated at 30,000*l*. The following are the names of the passengers who went on board in the river and have perished:—

1st Class.—Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Daniels and family, consisting of four sons and one daughter, late of Upper Belgrave Place, Belgrave Square; Master Stone, aged 16.

2d Cabin Passengers.—Mr. James Young, his wife, and four children; Mr. Joseph Saunders, Mr. James White, Mr. and Mrs. Denham, Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, Mr. Duncan M'Coll, and Mr. Edward Chard.

POISONING AT SEA.—The ship Accrington, from Liverpool for Calcutta, with soldiers' wives and children, was spoken with on 17th of November, in lat. 2 N. and long. 31 W., with the captain and mate dead, supposed to have been poisoned, and upwards of 50 children dead of the measles and scarlatina. The Accrington intended putting into Rio Janeiro.

THE ELOPEMENT OF MRS. GURNEY.—It was announced briefly last week that the wife of Mr. J. H. Gurney, M.P. for King's Lynn, has eloped with her footman. She was the daughter of the late Mr. Richard Gurney, by whom she had a fortune of nearly 25,000*l*. a year, secured absolutely to herself, and was considered the richest married woman in England. All this fortune she is now free to dispose of as she likes. Mr. Gurney, as already stated, has taken the first steps for obtaining a divorce, but such is the pressure of divorce business before Sir Cresswell Cresswell's court that his solicitor has been informed that 14 months are likely to elapse before the case can be brought to issue.

THE WRECK OF THE ROYAL CHARTER.—A heavy sea rolling into Moelfra Bay, and a strong N.W. wind, prevented the divers resuming their operations for recovering the remainder of the sunken gold until Wednesday, when a further sum of treasure was recovered, comprising 456½ sovereigns, 11 rupees, 4½ oz. of gold dust, one small cup ingot, and a piece of an ingot of gold. The suggestion to blow up portions of the wreck with gunpowder (chains and cables having failed to lift them) is not entertained by those interested in the salvage, on account of its being likely to disturb the ground where the wreck lies, and which is represented to be still rich with gold dust and sovereigns.

DEATH OF THE TALKING FISH.—The seal which has been engaged during the last few months in grunting "papa" and "mamma" to the groups assembled round its tub in Piccadilly, died on the 21st inst. For three days previous to its death it had been seriously ill; its constitution having been gradually breaking up for some time, owing to the artificial habits which it had been compelled to adopt. It was wrapped up in blankets, and several medical men were called in, but their efforts were unavailing. On the day of its death the wife of its proprietor visited the invalid, when it endeavoured to raise itself and plaintively grunted "mamma," but the effort was evidently too great, and it fell over on its side and expired. The seal has contrived, in one sense at least, to take 1500*l*. with it out of this world, that sum having been recently offered to its proprietor for possession of its person.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO MR. RENNIE.—A few days since Mr. Rennie, the engineer, while crossing the Blackfriars Road, on his way to his house in Whitehall Place, was knocked down by the horses of a coal-waggon, both wheels passing over his legs, dreadfully lacerating them. He now lies in a very precarious state, attended by Mr. Lawrence, the surgeon.

THE LATE FATAL FIRE IN WESTMINSTER.—The inquest on the four persons who were burnt to death in the fire in Little George Street last week terminated on Thursday, when the foreman returned the following as the verdict of 12 of the jury, the remainder withholding their assent to the latter portion of it:—"That deceased died from the effect of burns by the house taking fire, but how it took fire there is no evidence to show. The jury cannot part without expressing how greatly they feel obliged to all parties who have assisted in this inquiry, but still they do extremely regret that the parish engines were not sent for at the time."

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the cold weather which set in with severity on the 11th inst. has produced an increase of mortality. The deaths in London, which were about 1300 in each of the four previous weeks, rose to 1548 in the week that ended Saturday, Dec. 24. In the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1849-58, the average number was 1155; which, if raised in proportion to the increase of population, will become 1270. The present return is, therefore, 278 above the average. During the week the births of 961 boys and 807 girls, in all 1768 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1849-58 the average number was 1478.

Provincial.

ALDERSHOTT.—A serious riot took place at Aldershott on the evening of Christmas Day, between some men belonging to the 2d battalion of the 24th Regiment and a company of the Tower Hamlets Militia, which was unfortunately attended by the loss of one life, and three men wounded. It is the custom in most regiments for the officers of each company to subscribe a certain sum to provide their men with a Christmas dinner. This has tended to promote good feeling and sympathy between the officers and their men; but, unfortunately, in the present case it has been the cause of bloodshed. It appears that the Tower Hamlets Militia and part of the 24th Foot occupy the same block in the barracks, and that after both corps had partaken of a hearty Christmas dinner, the 24th got up a dispute as to which dinner was the best. The quarrel was at first confined to words, but soon extended to mops and brooms, after which the 24th loaded their rifles with ball cartridges, and fired into the quarters of the Militia. The officers on hearing the firing were speedily on the spot, but it was some time before they could quell the riot; by that time four men of the Militia had been wounded, and, from the marks left by the bullets, several shots must have been fired. It does not appear that the Militia fired at all; at any rate, if they did, they did so without effect. Of the wounded men, one expired after great suffering at 8 o'clock on Monday morning; the others are said to be progressing favourably. A searching investigation has been instituted into the origin of these proceedings, and 47 men of the 24th are in confinement for having taken part in the riot. The remainder of the regiment was removed yesterday to Cork. The inquest on the man who was killed commenced on Thursday, and is still in progress.

CLIFTON.—A case occurred at Clifton on the 16th inst. which might have been attended with fatal consequences had not prompt measures been taken to counteract the effects of some poisonous matter used in the composition of Bath buns, and which nearly cost the lives of six young gentlemen, pupils in one of the first boarding-schools in the place. It appears that three of the youths had been walking at Redland, and purchased some Bath buns at the shop of a confectioner named Farr. In the course of the afternoon three other lads from the school went to the same place and bought more buns. In the evening all six were seized with violent sickness, and presented the symptoms of having partaken of some poisonous substance. A surgeon was called in, who prescribed the necessary remedies, but the boys continued so ill during the night that two of them were not expected to survive. After great suffering, however, they all recovered. Some of the buns which had not been consumed were subjected to analysis, when it was found that each of them contained seven grains of pure orpiment, or yellow sulphide of arsenic, one of the most deadly of mineral poisons, which a chemist had supplied to the confectioner instead of chromate of lead, a slow poison which he had been in the habit of using as a cheap substitute for eggs, for the purpose of colouring the buns. The confectioner on being examined said that he was not aware that the use of chromate of lead was attended by injurious qualities, and the chemist on being applied to for a sample of the powder, took it from a parcel labelled "yellow arsenic," though he wrote "chrome yellow" on the sample. Mr. May, a publican, who had also partaken of the buns with like effect, applied to the magistrates for advice on Monday, but as he had not been poisoned outright they told him they could afford no assistance.

LIVERPOOL.—An inquiry, instituted by the Board of Trade into the circumstances attending the loss of the screw steamer Indian, on the Newfoundland coast, commenced in this town on Thursday, and will probably last for several days. Mr. O'Dowd came down from London to conduct the inquiry for the Board of Trade.

PORTSMOUTH.—In consequence of a recommendation from the Admiralty, to the effect that the sailors of the Princess Royal would be sufficiently punished by a month's imprisonment, the Secretary of State has advised her Majesty to remit the remainder of the sentence of three months' imprisonment inflicted by the sentence of the court-martial. The men were therefore discharged on Tuesday from the gaols of Lewes, Salisbury, Southampton, Winchester, and Dorchester. They arrived at this port at different hours of the day, and were at once paid their wages in the dockyard. Considerable excitement was manifested on the first appearance of the men in passing through the town.

WORCESTER.—On Wednesday night a public dinner took place at the Guildhall, for the purpose of presenting to Sir John Pakington, M.P., a testimonial of his public services to the county of Worcester. The chair was taken by Lord Lyttelton, and among the company present were Lord Ward, Earl Beauchamp, Lord Northwick, Hon. F. Lygon, M.P., Mr. Foley, M.P., Mr. Knight, M.P., Sir T. E. Winnington, M.P., Mr. Ricardo, M.P., Mr. B. Westhead, M.P., Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, and about 220 gentlemen connected with the county of Worcester, comprising all shades of politics. The testimonial consisted of a handsome silver-gilt shield, 40 inches in diameter, from the design of Mr. Armsted, intended to illustrate those branches of the public service to which the right hon. baronet had particularly devoted himself—viz., the navy, the colonies, education, and justice. The subject selected to illustrate education is the presentation of the first book printed in England to Edward IV., by Lord Rivers and Caxton. The navy is illustrated by figures representing the death of Nelson; the colonies, by the landing of Captain Cook in New Holland; and justice, by Prince Henry and Judge Gascoigne. There are also portraits of men famous for the administration of justice—Judge Lyttelton, Lord Somers, and Lord-Keeper Coventry (all Worcestershire men); in the navy, King Alfred, Blake, and Nelson; in maritime discovery, Drake, Cook, and Franklin; in education, King Henry VI., Cardinal Wolsey, and Sir Thomas Bodley. The outer border of the shield is decorated with oak leaves and acorns, and the shield bears within the border the following dedication:—

"Presented to the Right Hon. Sir John S. Pakington, Bart., G.C.B., M.P., by the County and City of Worcester, in grateful recognition of his services for 24 years as Chairman of the County Quarter Sessions. This shield also illustrates his public and official career as First Lord of the Admiralty, Secretary of State for the Colonies, and an able advocate of general education."

In acknowledging the compliment Sir John Pakington spoke to the following effect:—

"I hope that you will not think I am guilty of presumption or egotism if I venture to touch for a moment on those principles of action to which I mainly attribute the honour which on this occasion it has been my fortune to receive. Have I attained those honours through the exercise of any great or transcendent talents? Certainly not. Have I gained them as the reward of extensive and varied acquirements? Certainly not. But, if it has been my good fortune to merit in any degree that favour which I have received from my most gracious Sovereign; if I have deserved any portion of that kindness which I have received in this my native county; if I have been able to administer those various departments of the State which have been intrusted to me, and which my noble friend in the chair has alluded to in such flattering terms—if I have been able to administer them without disadvantage to the public service, and without discredit to myself, I firmly believe that I am indebted to the exercise of qualities and the adoption of rules which are equally in the power and compass of those who hear me, and of any man who is desirous to take part in the public affairs of the county. I am indebted for whatever measure of success I have attained in my public life to a combination of moderate abilities with honesty of intention, firmness of purpose, and steadiness of conduct. If I were to offer advice to any young man anxious to make himself useful in public life, I would sum up the results of my experience in three short rules—rules so simple that any man may understand them, and so easy that any man may act upon them. My first rule would be—leave it to others to judge of what duties you are capable and for what position you are fitted; but never refuse to give your services in whatever capacity it may be the opinion of others who are competent to judge that you may benefit your neighbours or your country. My second rule is—when you agree to undertake public duties, concentrate every energy and faculty in your possession with the determination to discharge those duties to the best of your ability. Lastly, I would counsel you that, in deciding on the line which you will take in public affairs, you should be guided in your decision by that which, after mature deliberation, you believe to be right, and not by that which, in the passing hour, may happen to be fashionable or popular. Fashion has its uses, and is all very well when applied to the light and trivial things to which it relates; but fashion in public affairs is out of place. Popularity in the lowest and most common sense is not worth the having. Do your duty to the best of your power. Win the approbation of your own conscience, and popularity in its best and highest sense is sure to follow."

YORK.—The local papers contain several accounts of a shock of an earthquake having been felt on the 15th inst. in different parts of this county. One account says that several room doors were hastily thrown open, a trembling or vibratory motion was given to many articles of furniture, and even the beds on which the alarmed inmates lay were shaken as if by a strong man. The phenomenon was felt at Pateley Bridge, Grassington, and throughout the whole of Wharfedale.

THE LORD-LIEUTENANT.—His Excellency the Earl of Carlisle left Dublin on the 21st inst. for Trentham for the Christmas holidays. Lords Commissioners have been sworn in, as usual, during his Excellency's absence.

SYMPATHY FOR THE POPE.—The Limerick demonstration took place on Monday, Dr. Ryan, the Roman Catholic bishop, in the chair. The speakers were Lord Dunraven, a recent convert, Mr. Monsell, M.P., Major Gavin, M.P., Mr. W. Hawley, J.P., Sir Vere de Vere, &c. Lord Dunraven spoke at considerable length, and exalted the Papal Government to the skies as the model of human institutions. Mr. W. Monsell, M.P., in a discursive address which occupies more than two columns, thus dealt with the question of the Pope's temporal power:—

"If you take the Pope's territories from him, where would you put him? Would you put him, for instance, in France, where, only a few months ago, the Emperor of the French—the champion of liberty in Italy—forbad the pastorals of the bishops to appear in the public journals? Would you place him in Austria, the benumbing influence of which upon the intelligence of the age has been referred to by my noble friend, with whose observations I entirely agree? Would you place him in Russia—in the territories of the persecutor of the Polish nuns? Would you place him in this new Italian kingdom which some people wish to establish? Why, the first act of the Provisional Governments in Florence and Bologna was to suppress a number of religious orders, to throw insult on religion, and to control the clergy in the exercise of their spiritual functions. Would we, living in Ireland, be satisfied that our intercourse with his Holiness should be rendered liable to interruption by placing him under the control and influence of persons animated by such principles as those which the acts of this Provisional Government have indicated up to the present moment, when, be it remembered, they are on their good behaviour?"

The Kilkenny demonstration also took place on Monday. Dr. Walsh, the bishop, took the chair, and defended the course taken by the Papal Government in the Mortara case, declaring that many of the English peers and others of high station who had signed the late address on the subject had up to the latest moment resisted the emancipation of the Jews, both in Parliament and out of Parliament, forgetting that in the first year of the reign of Queen Anne an Act was passed to compel Jewish parents to provide for the maintenance of their Protestant children. One of the speakers, Mr. Bryan of Jenkinstown, thus denounced the "Catholics of high rank" who declined to rally round the Pontiff in the present crisis:—

"You have all, no doubt, as well as myself, read with regret in the public prints letters from a few Catholics of high rank and much respectability declining to rally round the Holy Father in the present crisis. Let those gentlemen not forget the words lately quoted by the Lion of the Fold of Judah,—'He who is not for me is against me;' and, I would further add, that the man standing to his colours is respected by all, while a man who deserts them is likely to be despised. While I am upon this subject there are two documents that have lately appeared, concerning which I think a few words ought to be said. The first, an important one, is a pamphlet lately published by M. Laguerroniere, in Paris. I will not dwell on the illogical arguments adduced by the writer to show that part of the Papal dominions should be taken away and part left to him. Surely, if a portion of his subjects are to be left to him to misgovern and ill use, it is most unfair to them. Why take a portion and not all his possessions, or none? What is good for one part must be good for all. Now, the anti-Catholic journals have made a great handle of this, and insinuate that the pamphlet speaks the sentiments of the Emperor of the French. I think, however, the most reasoning men will agree that Louis Napoleon has shown himself to be too clever and calculating a man to strike on the same rock where split his uncle, the first Napoleon."

IRISH LOYALTY.—The Lord Chancellor has called upon Mr. James Gallagher, the magistrate who presided at the recent meeting in Queenstown, to explain his conduct in allowing Father Fielding to deliver the speech reported in our Paper of the 17th inst. Mr. Gallagher, in reply, states that as soon as he found that Mr. Fielding was commencing to use language which he ought not to hear he rose to leave the chair, and it was during the excitement consequent upon that movement, and which did not occupy more than a minute or two, that the language reported must have been spoken, as Mr. Fielding immediately ceased speaking when he consented to resume the chair. He regrets now that he did not at once retire, and assures the Lord Chancellor that his loyalty is undoubted, and that he has no sympathy with the sentiments expressed in the address in question. The Lord Chancellor replies that the occurrence will no doubt make Mr. Gallagher more cautious for the future; and placing implicit reliance on the assurances of his loyalty to her Majesty, his lordship does not feel called upon to interfere further in relation to the proceeding.—Another discussion has arisen in reference to the speech of Dean Murphy at the Cork meeting, and to the hissing of the Queen's name which took place during its delivery. The Bishop, Dr. Delany, has published a protest, signed by Mr. Maguire, M.P., and other magistrates, denying that the Queen's name was hissed; but the Cork Constitution, which first published the speech, distinctly asserts that the report was perfectly correct, and reprints the passage verbatim from the short-hand writer's notes to prove it. In connection with this question we may quote from Mr. Maguire's own journal, the Cork Examiner, the following passage from a report of the recent sympathy meeting at Skibbereen:—

"Again (continued Mr. M'Carthy Downing) it is said that reforms are required at Rome. Probably it is so, and the people of Ireland, ay, of England, say that reforms are required in these kingdoms; but if the Queen and her Ministers do not forthwith grant them, is a section of the people to form themselves into illegal societies, assassinate the First Lord of the Treasury, and by force of arms try to expel the Queen from her throne? A voice—Certainly. (Cheers and uproar.) Mr. Downing—No, no. Voices—Yes, yes. (Renewed cheers and uproar.) Mr. Downing—I am astonished to hear such an observation come from any one. I regret exceedingly that at this meeting and in this house—the temple of God—any man should say that he would take a dagger to deprive our gracious Queen of her throne. (Cries of 'Hear, hear.') The Chairman—And as chairman of this meeting I denounce the observation as unchristian and uncatholic. (Renewed cries of 'Hear, hear.')"

LORD JOHN RUSSELL'S ITALIAN POLICY.—The following address, unanimously agreed to at a meeting of the citizens of Glasgow held on the 16th inst., has been presented to Lord John Russell signed by the Lord Provost, the members for Glasgow and Paisley, and nearly 5000 persons:—

"We, the undersigned citizens of Glasgow, beg to express to your lordship our high satisfaction that, in the present critical aspect of Italian affairs, the direction of the foreign policy of this empire is in the hands of one who has proved his attachment to liberty by noble and successful labours on behalf of the civil and religious rights of his own countrymen. We hailed with the heartiest sympathy your lordship's 'loud and solemn protest' at Aberdeen (on occasion of your acceptance of the freedom of that city, Sept. 28, 1859), 'against any interference by foreign force' to prevent the Italian people from 'having their own Government,' and 'conducting their affairs as they like,' and becoming 'the free citizens of a free country.' Your lordship is reported to have said that if there should be a Congress of the Powers of Europe, 'we might assist only upon one condition—viz., that with respect to the using of foreign force, in order to compel those conditions of peace, whatever they may be, to be enforced, so as to interfere with the rights of the people of these countries to manage their own concerns—that if such is the object, or may be the result of such a Congress, England must stand apart and take no concern in it;' and we therefore hopefully conclude that the fact of her Majesty's Government consenting to take part in the Congress is a sign that the just rights of a great people are not to be outraged or destroyed. We now venture to address your lordship to give you the clearest and most earnest assurance that in the maintenance of the principles enunciated at Aberdeen you will be supported by this great community, and also, we firmly believe, by the nation at large. We accept gladly the guiding law of the foreign policy of our country your lordship's declaration that the different States of Europe should be independent, 'that (in your lordship's own words) they should manage their own concerns, and that no one State should have a preponderance in Europe, no matter what should be the constitutions or the internal government of the rest.' We assure your lordship that the practical maintenance of this principle, in its application to the affairs of Italy, will add to the gratitude of an Italian nation to the gratitude felt by your countrymen for your services unto them, and will join to the gratitude of Britain and Italy the admiring respect of every lover of freedom in the world at large. In times of anxious difficulty like the present, it cannot but strengthen the hands of a British Statesman if the world knows that he possesses the confidence of the people, the maintenance of whose honour he holds in charge. Such confidence we now express. You yourself declared 'the independence of the several States of Europe an object which Great Britain ought to feel a sympathy for and an interest in.' Feeling such sympathy and interest, we trust your lordship will stretch to the utmost the influence of Britain at the coming Congress to procure the withdrawal of all foreign troops whatsoever from Italian soil. Seldom in history has any people so suddenly proved itself adequate to the task of self-government as have the Italians in recent times. Seldom in history has so clear a way been opened for the spread of religious liberty over a land long held in spiritual bondage and foreign intervention has no excuse to plead, for it has no wrong to redress and no blessing to bestow. We believe that over the issue of the Congress a matter not merely of Italian but European moment. What safety can any State possess in its internal affairs are subject to the decision of a Congress? If the States of Central Italy are to be enforced to act against their own recorded convictions, why may not any other State be compelled to exist under like subordination to a few paramount Powers? It is the great question of European liberty itself which is now at stake. Finally, we would express our hope that your lordship's influence will be exerted to prevent undue delay in the proceedings of the Congress, as tending to complicate still more dangerously the difficulties of a land whose past history civilised Europe has a grateful interest—a land bounteously blessed by Providence, but too long unhappy through the misrule of men not native to its soil, and not rejoicing in its freedom or its glory. With high respect we remain your lordship's faithful obedient servants."

In reply to this address the committee has received the following letter:—

"Foreign Office, Dec. 26.

"Sir,—I have received with great satisfaction the address of nearly 5000 of the inhabitants of Glasgow, including the Lord Provost and the members of Parliament for the city. The support which is thus given by the flourishing and enlightened city of Glasgow to the principles by which her Majesty's Government have been guided, and the policy they have announced, cannot fail to give encouragement and add strength to the just cause they have espoused. I beg you to accept my cordial thanks for your letter accompanying the address, and have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

"J. RUSSELL."

INSTALLATION OF THE LORD RECTOR OF GLASGOW.—The formal installation of the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, K.C.B., as Lord Rector of Glasgow University, took place on the 22d inst. in the City Hall. His lordship delivered a long and appropriate address on the occasion.

THE CASTLE OF EDINBURGH.—At the Court of Session last week judgment was given in the well-known case of "The Secretary of State for War v. The Magistrates of Edinburgh," relating to the right of property in the Esplanade of the Castle of Edinburgh, the ground forming the banks on both sides of it, and the ground around the foot of these banks and the Castle rock. These subjects were claimed by the Secretary of State as part of the patrimonial property of the Crown, and by the city of Edinburgh as having been granted to it by the Golden Charter of King James VI., dated 1603. When the cause was first tried the Lord Ordinary sustained the right of the Crown to the whole of the property in dispute, which includes the ground on which the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway is formed (payment of the compensation in respect of which the city got from the railway company), on the grounds that the charter of 1603 had been resigned by the city to the Crown; and that the Crown had besides had prescriptive possession, which was a sufficient answer to any title the city could possibly set up. The city reclaimed against his lordship's judgment, and the case having been debated in June last, the judgment of the court was delivered by Lord Deas on Saturday in a very elaborate speech, adhering to the Lord Ordinary's interlocutor. Expenses were also found due to the Crown since the date of that interlocutor, and the case was remitted to the Outer House, in order that any procedure necessary for having the boundaries marked off may be taken.

ST. ANDREW'S UNIVERSITY.—On the 24th ult. the election of a rector took place under the new Act, when Col. Mure was chosen over Sir Ralph Anstruther by a majority of the matriculated students. Colonel Mure however having declined to accept the office, a new election has taken place, when Sir Ralph Anstruther and Sir William Dunbar, M.P., being put in nomination, the former was elected by 64 to 57 votes.

WINTER ASSIZES.—SOUTH WALES CIRCUIT: CARDIFF.—Henry O'Connell, 23, mariner, one of a class known in Welsh seaports as "Irish Yankees," was indicted for the wilful murder of Antonio Tesmecher, a Bremen seaman, at Cardiff, on the 21st November. The prisoner and a messmate named Rickards lodged in a low and vicious locality in the town, and were in the habit of visiting a house of ill repute. On the night named Rickards sought admission into the house, and on being denied kicked the panels of the door in. The prisoner then came out and the two men began scuffling, though whether in joke or not was not exactly apparent. One of a number of girls attracted to the spot upon laughing at the men was threatened by the prisoner, and the quarrel was then taken up by several men, by one of whom Rickards was knocked down senseless. The deceased was stated to be a mere spectator, standing by with his hands in his pockets, though others said he was fighting. He was however rushed upon by the prisoner with a knife, and received a stab in the left side, which penetrated to the heart, and another in the left shoulder. They fell together, the deceased crying "The knife! the knife!" A bystander attempted to drag the prisoner away, but was near being stabbed in so doing. Ultimately the prisoner and deceased rose together, when the latter staggered a few yards and fell dead. The jury returned a vedict of Manslaughter, and the prisoner was sentenced to 15 years' penal servitude.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT: DERBY.—Child Murder at Ilkeston.—Sarah Allridge, described in the calendar as a charwoman, was charged with the wilful murder of a newly born child, at Ilkeston on the 5th inst. It appeared that a daughter of the prisoner, who had always borne a respectable character in the village as a dressmaker had on or about the 5th inst. been delivered of a male child, and a rumour spread that the child had been given to the pigs. The prisoner and her daughter were apprehended, and as they denied the fact of a child having been born, a medical man was requested to examine the latter, when he ascertained that she had been delivered eight days previously. The mother subsequently admitted that the child was "not a whole child," and that she had buried it in the garden. The body was found buried in the garden at the spot indicated, and Mr. Eaton, the surgeon, described, from the post mortem examination he had made of the body, that the child had received several injuries, and had been buried alive, from the trace of earth having penetrated into the lungs and windpipe. For the defence it was contended that the child died from injuries sustained in its birth, and Mr. Gisborne, surgeon to the Derby Infirmary, differed from Mr. Eaton's opinion as to the earth having been inhaled, considering it possible that it had been washed down the throat by the heavy rain which occurred between the 5th and the 15th. Mr. Justice Crompton intimated his opinion that the case could not be supported as one of manslaughter, and that the question lay between a verdict of murder or of acquittal. The case was one requiring very full investigation, and as the medical evidence was so conflicting it was to be lamented that there were not two medical men engaged before the coroner, in whose court the case had originated, to make the post mortem examination. The jury Acquitted the prisoner and concurred in his lordship's opinions as to the propriety of two surgeons being always employed.

Obituary.

THE MARCHIONESS OF BUTE died in Edinburgh on Wednesday. Her ladyship was the second daughter of the first Marquis of Hastings, and was married to the late Marquis of Bute in January, 1845. The late peer died in 1848, and left at his decease the present marquis, now in his 13th year.

LORD MACAULAY died suddenly at his residence in Kensington, on Wednesday evening. Although in 1852 he had a serious and protracted illness, from disease of the heart, the attack was subdued, and till within the last three weeks his health was tolerably good. About a fortnight since he had a second attack, from which, however, he rallied, and his medical advisers considered him out of immediate danger. Up to the end of last week he continued to amend, but a relapse took place, and terminated fatally. Lord Macaulay was the son of Mr. Zachary Macaulay, well known for his exertions for the abolition of the slave trade. He was born at Rothley Temple, Leicestershire, in 1800, and was therefore in his 59th year. He graduated at Cambridge with high honour, and in 1826 was called to the bar of Lincoln's Inn. In the same year he commenced his celebrated series of Essays in the "Edinburgh Review," which he continued at intervals down to 1844, though he filled in the meantime various important offices of state. In 1842, he published his "Lays of Ancient Rome," and in 1849 the first two volumes of his "History of England," now left incomplete by his death. For some time it has been rumoured that the fifth and sixth volumes of the work were about to appear, but even with this addition to the history, the work will be but a fragment after all. Lord Macaulay entered Parliament in 1830 as member for Calne, and afterwards sat for Leeds and Edinburgh, representing the latter city until raised to the peerage in 1857. He was never married, and the title has therefore died with him.

LORD HASTINGS died on the 27th inst. at his residence, 45, York Terrace, Regent's Park, after a short illness. His lordship
